These hard working ladies are the ones who collected and preserved all the information contained at the Fairfield Archives and History.

Over the years there has been a lot of histories written about this fascinating little church that sits out in the country all by itself. Though little in size, it played a big part in the formation of the Associate Reformed Synod of the Carolinas. The little church has had its picture taken time and time again. People have drawn sketches of this simple little church, from the elaborate to the simple pencil drawing. But no matter who or how it is written about or how it is drawn there is one fact that remains, the simple little church in the country, known as the "Old Brick Church" is the home of the ARP. And after over 200 years still fascinates people to this day. And even though the histories in this book seem to repeat themselves, the point that so many people have written the history at different times shows how important the Old Brick Church is to the history and heritage of Fairfield County, South Carolina.

Robert Mills wrote in his Statistics of South Carolina, dated in 1826, "The importance of religious instruction is not forgotten; two Sunday schools are in operation near Monticello, and one in Winnsborough. There are seven Presbyterian congregations, having three officiating ministers, two Associate Reformed, having two ministers, and one Associate, having one minister. There is perhaps no district in the state that numbers more religious communicants for the population, than Fairfield." And this quote from 1826 is still true today, with more than 200 churches in Fairfield County.

Included in this book are some of the different histories that have been written and many different photographs and a few sketches. These histories, photos and sketches come from places like a speech given at a DAR meeting, the News & Herald newspaper and from programs of the church at various times celebrating its anniversary. Also included is a cemetery listing, compiled by Mrs. Ruth Stevenson, Mrs. Sarah Arnette, and Mrs. Sarah Bolick.

HISTORICAL DATA

The Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church is the result of an organic union in America of the Associate Presbytery and the Reformed Presbytery (Covenanters), both of which were organized in Scotland by separating from the Established Presbyterian Church. Some pertinent historical dates and facts are as follows:

1560 – As part of the Reformation, the Scotch Church became the official church of Scotland and adopted the Westminster Confession and the Catechism as basic doctrine. During the following century, there was bitter dissension and persecution within the church principally over state control, disregard of the basic doctrines and form of church government.

1688 – William III (William of Orange) upon ascending the throne re-organized the existing church into the Established Presbyterian Church of Scotland, discontinued persecution, but many were still dissatisfied with continued practices pertaining to church government and disregard of basic doctrines, so in –

1733 – Under the leadership of Ebenezer Erskine, the Associate Presbytery was organized at Gairney Bridge, Scotland, separating from the Established Church. Then in –

1743 – The Covenanters who had for years dissented and organized themselves into societies formally organized the Reformed Presbytery.

The Associate and Reformed Presbyteries grew, spread to North Ireland, then members immigrated to America where societies and churches were organized throughout Pennsylvania, New York, Carolinas, and Georgia. Then in – 1753 – Associate Presbytery of Pennsylvania was organized.

1774 – Reformed Presbytery of Pennsylvania was organized. The differences which kept these two bodies apart in Scotland and North Ireland were less pronounced in America and following negotiations there was organized in –

1782 - The Associate Reformed Synod in Philadelphia which included churches located throughout Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Carolinas, and Georgia. As a part of this Synod, there was organized in –

1790 - Associate Reformed Presbytery of Carolinas and Georgia at Long Cane, S. C (Abbeville County). During the next twenty years the church grew and in 1802 it was decided to organize four Synods and one General Synod; consequently in –

1803 - The Associate Reformed Synod of the Carolinas was organized May 9 at Brick Church, Fairfield County, South Carolina. This, with the Synods of Pennsylvania, New York and Scioto, Ohio, organized the General Synod in 1804 with headquarters in Philadelphia. This General Synod organization continued until it was agreed that each Synod become independent and in 1822 the Synod of the Carolinas became the A. R. Synod of the South.

“The Synods of Pennsylvania, New York, and Scioto, of the Associate Reformed Church and the Associate Church which did not go into the union of 1782, joined in 1858 to form the United Presbyterian Church. This denomination merged with the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., in 1958 to form the United Presbyterian Church, U. S. A.”

Taken from
"The Centennial History of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church 1803-1903".
This book was published in 1905.

"In the twenty years since its organization the growth of the Associate Reformed Synod had been such that in 1802 it was deemed expedient to resolve the body into four synods and to organize a General Synod. Accordingly, on the 9th of May, 1803, the Associate Reformed Synod of the Carolinas was organized at Ebenezer, Fairfield County, S. C. At its organization in 1803 the Synod of the Carolinas had about two thousand members."

"Brick Church – The Brick Church is situated in the western part of Fairfield County, South Carolina, about twelve miles from Winnsboro. It sits in a beautiful grove on the banks of Little River.

It was here that the Synod of the Carolinas, which is now the Associate Reformed Synod of the South, was organized on May 9, 1803. For this, as well as other reasons, the history of this church is full of interest to all people of the A. R. P. Churches. The church was first called Little River, and afterwards Ebenezer, but for many years it has been known as the Brick Church. When it was organized, we are unable to say. Before the Revolutionary War, a log church was situated two miles west of the present church, and when the present church was built in 1788, the location was changed to the present site, in order to accommodate the people who lived on the east side of Little River.

The deed to the land on which the Brick Church stands shows that it was conveyed on June 2nd, 1793, by Henry Crumpton, to the following persons designated in the deed as members of this church, viz: Benjamin Boyd, John Martin, James Gray, Charles Montgomery, John Gray, James Kincaid, Aaron Hawthorne, Thomas Lewers, William Bell, Andrew Gray, William McMorries, Sr., William McMorries, Jr., Daniel Cochran, Callom Forbes, Hugh Montgomery, Robert Gray, William Thompson, William Richardson, Robert McGill, William Holmes, William Kearnaghan, H. Ronalds, R. Robertson, Hugh Robertson, William Kennedy, Hy Harton, S. Richardson, William Watt, J. Kennedy, William Southwick, and Agnes Calhoun. In addition to these, we find also that families of the following names belonged to the church prior to 1791, viz: McKemie, Davidson, Turnipseed, and perhaps others. In later times, we find the following additional names as members and some of them officers in the church: Nelson, Sloan, Robinson, McDowell, Watt, Martin, Player, Curry and Bell.

Mrs. Hutchinson, a member of the church, who died a few years ago, said that she remembered hearing her mother and others tell, that after the crops were laid by, that their fathers and grandfathers would go to the brickyard, and tramp the mud into mortar with their bare feet, put it into molds with their hands, carry it out in the sun to dry, then burning the kilns by night and day, and that to them it was a labor of love and pleasure. It took them a long time to get ready to build, but the building was finally completed in 1788, and it stands today, as strong and solid as at the first, showing that these old men did their work well.

Alexander and James Kincaid, and perhaps many others, did a great deal in building the church. The Kincaids were large planters, and were officers in the Revolutionary War. Adam and John Hawthorne were elders in the church prior to 1791. Rev. James Rogers was the first pastor of the church, so far as we can learn. He was ordained and installed over the Brick Church, then called Little River, in connection with King's Creek, and Cannon's Creek, in Newberry Co., on Feb. 23rd, 1791. Mr. Rogers continued to be pastor until his death, Aug. 21st, 1830. He is buried at the Brick Church. Rev. James Boyce was the next pastor, and was installed in 1832, and continued until 1843. Rev. Thomas Ketchin was pastor from 1844 until 1852. Rev. C. B. Betts was pastor from 1855 until 1869.

During the pastorates of Revs. Rogers, Boyce, Ketchin, and a part of the pastorate of Rev. Betts, the Brick Church was a large and flourishing congregation. The membership was composed of the wealthy and cultured planters of the community, and large crowds waited on the gospel at the Brick Church. Mr. Rogers taught a large High School at Monticello, near by, which was attended by pupils from many parts of the State. The Brick Church was made up of the noble men and women of the Old South. In 1852, the church and graveyard was inclosed with a granite stone wall.

Mr. John Glazier Rabb and Mr. R. W. Sloan gave their personal supervision to the work, and much credit is due to them for its success.

Mrs. Nancy Rabb, also, ever showed a deep interest in the old church. For twenty-five years previous to her death in 1900, Mrs. Rabb gathered together a number of hands each year, and had the graveyard thoroughly cleaned. Through her efforts also the church was kept in repair during the years when it was dormant, and she now sleeps among her kindred and friends in the graveyard of the old Brick Church. The war of secession played havoc with the Brick Church. It was left in a state almost of disorganization. Its men were slain, the homes of many of its people were left in ashes by Sherman's army, and the church itself was dismantled and used as quarters by the invading army. Out of the great number of men from the Brick Church, who went to the war, only a few returned.

There is one little incident, however, in connection with this old church, that throws a little light upon the blackness of war.

When the Federal army came to Little River, just at the church, they found that the Confederates whom they were pursuing, had destroyed the bridge. So they tore up the flooring and sleepers of the church and rebuilt the bridge. Some one of the company was stirred in heart as he saw the desecration of the Lord's house, and he wrote in pencil on the door facing of the church, these words, which are legible today, after the lapse of thirty-eight years: "Citizens of this community: Please excuse us for defacing your house of worship so much. It was absolutely necessary to effect a crossing over the Creek, as the Rebs destroyed the bridge. - A Yankee."

So great was the blow from the War and its results that the church declined, until it disappeared from the roll of the Presbytery without any formal act of disorganization. After Mr. Betts resigned in 1869, occasional supplies were sent by the Presbytery, but even this ceased about twenty years ago. The old Brick Church, however, was not to remain dead forever. About the year 1891, Rev. A. G. Kirkpatrick, the pastor of New Hope, began to cultivate the field again, and under his active labors, and the fostering care of the Session of New Hope, it revived so rapidly that on Aug. 25th, 1893, it was reorganized with twenty-one members.

In 1896, Rev. A. G. Kirkpatrick was installed over the Brick Church in connection with Prosperity in Newberry Co., and this pastorate continued until 1899, when he resigned on account of ill health.

The history of this old church has been a noble one.

Prof. McKemie, of Georgia, whose ancestors for three generations are in the cemetery around the old Brick Church, says: "That old Brick Church has been a seed bed from which transplants have gone throughout the South." After speaking of the names of the families already mentioned in this sketch, he says: "If I were in the cemetery, I could recall many other names whose generations have carried Presbyterianism from South Carolina to the Pacific Coast. I recall two ministers, Revs. Joseph and John E. Davidson (who were baptized in the Brick Church by Dr. Rogers) who passed their ministerial lives in North Louisiana. For thirty-five years Joseph Davidson preached more sermons, married and buried more people, than any minister in North Louisiana. John E. Davidson was a graduate of Princeton, and in three years organized six or seven churches in Louisiana, but he 'went away' just as his star was mounting."

In addition to these, four other ministers have come from the Brick Church, viz: Rev. J. B. Watt, Rev. J. A. Sloan, Rev. John E. Martin, and Rev. Horace Rabb. There are others perhaps, but we have not been able to get their names.

The old communion service, with its waiter, tankard, cups, and Irish linen, more than a century old, is still in possession of the congregation.

One of the most historical structures in old Fairfield county is the Ebenezer Presbyterian church, otherwise known as "The Old Brick Church" which is located about twelve miles southwest of Winnsboro. The church itself is a small, dingy, red brick structure with towering cedar trees standing in the ample cemetery which surrounds the building.

Inside the church are a number of long straight-back pews, a slave gallery and an old fashioned pulpit which is merely a Bible stand built into a railing. The building was erected by the people of the Little River section of Fairfield County as a labor of love. They molded the bricks with their own hands and cut and trimmed timber to provide the woodwork – completing the building in 1788. The small church began making history when its first pastor, Rev. James Rogers, acting as the first moderator organized the Associate Reformed Synod of the Carolinas in 1803 from its humble pulpit. This group is now known as the Associate Reformed Synod of the South. Reverend Rogers' church grew in numbers and prosperity and soon became a force in the religious life of South Carolina. The church continued to go forward after the death of the Reverend Rogers in 1830 and its growth was without incident until the outbreak of the War Between the States in 1860.

The young manhood of the congregation joined the Confederate army, almost in mass at the outbreak of hostilities and soon the casualty list returning from the battlefield made heavy the hearts of the folk of the Ebenezer church. However, the torch of war seemed far afield to the congregation and except for letters from the men at the front and troopers home on furlough life went on much the same as usual. Crops were sown and reaped and the neighborhood's youth becoming of age packed their meager belongings and went off to war. However, all was not going well with the Confederacy and in 1864 the drums of war began to draw near. Valuables were buried, livestock was hidden and many of the homes became places of shelter for refugees from the lowlands where war was present. Finally the hand of battle touched the church and the community. After the fall and burning of Columbia, Sherman's army swept northward burning, looting and destroying in a 40-mile swath as the Yankees pursued the battered remains of General Beauregard's retreating Confederate army.

Late in February 1865 Ebenezer church, located a few hundred yards from the swift moving Little River became the locale for one of those last moving little actions which though never recorded on the pages of history saddened the hearts of families on both sides. Sometime around February 21st, Kilpatrick's Union Cavalry and Brigadier General Jeff Davis' 14th Corps arrived at the Little River. Here they found the Confederates had destroyed the bridge and were perched upon the ground overlooking the crossing, planning to knock off a couple of "Yanks" before pulling out for Winnsboro. Davis' infantry swarmed through the shallows and moved on the double with bayonets fixed toward the positions occupied by the troublesome Confederates. Several Federals went down before their comrades routed the sharpshooters from the high ground. Engineer officers of the 14th Corps appeared and decided a crossing of the stream without some sort of bridge was an impossibility for the heavy guns and wagon trains which accompanied the Union Cavalry and infantry. In all probability some bright-eyed second Lieutenant, as is the case of second Lieutenant since the beginning of history, spotted the church and desiring to be a first lieutenant before the conclusion of the war suggested tearing up the floor and rafters to make a bridge. The engineering officer in charge had undoubtedly lost all his scruples after four bloody years of war and so out came the woodwork of the church. The 14th Corps and Kilpatrick's army crossed, leaving the gutted church behind. However, a legend exists in Fairfield County, which we can substantiate in part, that a Union officer inscribed a pencil written apology on the doorway of the church for the desecration. This apology is written in old Apencerian handwriting and has been retraced and lacquered. The individual reader had best judge for himself as to authenticity. The inscription reads:

"To the citizens of this county--Please excues us for defacing your house of worship. It was absolutely necessary to effect a crossing over the creek." Signed "A Yankee."

So great was the blow from the war that the church declined and was declared disorganized without any formal act to that effect. In the graveyard of the church are the remains of several Confederate soldiers who belonged to the 12th South Carolina Infantry. We wonder if these men may be some of the men who strove to defend the Little River crossing and lost bot it and their lives.

The Old Brick Worship House Built in 1788
Southern Branch of
Associate Reformed Presbyterian Synod
Was Organized at Ebenezer Church
May 9, 1803

One of the more historic churches in Fairfield County is Ebenezer Associate Reformed Presbyterian church, better known as the Old Brick Church. It was here, on May 9, 1803, that the southern branch of this denomination organized its synod, separating it from the northern branch, which became the United Presbyterian denomination. The separation was not caused by any schism within the church, but for practical reasons. The geographical separation made it difficult for the northern group, mostly in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and the southern group, to meet together.

The original, Ebenezer church, which had served for many years, was replaced by the, present brick one, in 1788. It stands today just as it was built, four unadorned walls of handmade brick, with simple windows. A permanent roof of copper was put on the church several decades ago. Inside are plain wooden benches, and a small gallery at the back, for the use, of the servants. It took a long time to build the church.

After the crops were laid by, the workmen would go to the brick yard. They would tramp mud into mortar, put it into molds with their hands, carry it out in the sun to dry, then bake it in kilns which were operated day and night.

Confederate soldiers, when returning before Sherman in his march through this part of the state, destroyed the bridge near the church. Sherman's men tore up the flooring and sleepers of the church for material to rebuild the bridge. The church was repaired long ago. One of the Federal soldiers, seeing the desecration of the Lord's House, wrote these words in pencil on the wall: "Citizens of the Community: Please excuse us for defacing your house of worship so much. It was absolutely necessary to effect a crossing over the creek, as the Rebs destroyed the bridge. A Yankee."

An historical marker was erected in front of the church several years ago by the Fairfield County Chamber of Commerce.

This denomination was begun in Scotland, when, in 1733, the Associate Presbytery was organized. Ten years later the Reformed Presbytery was organized by other Scots called Covenanters, so named because they supported the Scottish National Covenant of 1638 which asserted that Christ, and not the national monarch, was head of the church. Members of the two branches came to America in the 1700's. In 1782 the American Associates and Covenanters merged under the combined names, Associate Reformed, which makes this one of the oldest Presbyterian branches in this country.

Other A. R. Presbyterian Churches in this area are the White Oak Church, New Hope Church, just above Douglass (Avon), Hopewell, north of Blackstock and Bethel Church in Winnsboro. These churches have had a profound affect upon the spiritual, cultural and educational life of Fairfield County.

The Old Brick Church

By John Bigham

Having withstood for 186 years the ravages of time without appreciable damage, it now seems probable that an ancient church building in Fairfield County, variously known as Ebenezer Meeting House, Little River Church, and more popularly now as the Old Brick Church, will continue to stand sentinel to tradition and heritage.

Although no congregation has regularly worshiped in the venerable brick sanctuary for over 50 years, tremendous significance is attached to it by Associate Reformed Presbyterians every where. It was here on May 9, 1803, that a handful of ministers and ruling elders gathered to organize the Synod of the South. A few years later this body made itself independent of Northern ties and eventually evolved into the present denomination.

The story of Ebenezer Meeting House begins with the arrival in the 1770's of Presbyterians from Scotland and Ireland who settled on both sides of Little River. The very first to put in all appearance was William McMorries and his family. Close behind the McMorries came James Kincaid and others, most of whom had been neighbors in the old country. James Kincaid married Mary McMorries and was destined to be influential as an elder at Ebenezer, an officer in the Revolution, a wealthy planter and a member of the legislature.

These Irish families had hardly begun work on their own homes when they turned their attention to building a suitable house of worship. The first one or two were temporary affairs, until the desire came to build a more permanent edifice.

They made the bricks themselves. After their crops were laid by, the men would go to the brickyard, tramp the mud into mortar with their bare feet, put it into molds with their hands and carry it out into the sun to dry. They kept the kilns burning night and day, and it took a long time to get ready to build. They finished in 1788, and they did their work well.

The gently sloping cemetery which surrounds the building on three sides is truly sacred ground for those whose ancestors lie buried within its granite confines. A tour through the graveyard will reveal some of the names of families who once lived and prospered in the community, who contributed their part as a strong citizenry in the development of Fairfield County and the state.

For several years the congregation of Ebenezer was served by itinerant Associate Reformed ministers. In 1791 the Rev. James Rogers came from Ireland by way of Scotland to begin a pastorate which lasted for almost 40 years. For 25 years of that tenure he presided over Jefferson Academy at nearby Monticello. One of his students was William Harper, who later became a celebrated jurist and was the first person admitted to what is now the University of South Carolina.

Rev. James Rogers also ministered to the Kings Creek and Cannons Creek Associate Reformed Presbyterian churches across Broad River in Newberry County until 1815, when he dropped these charges and concentrated on the congregation of Ebenezer.

This pastor and educator is buried in the cemetery beside the Old Brick Church, and his tombstone records that he was a native of County Monaghan, Ireland. By his side is his wife Celia. In the strong vein of Calvinistic theology on her tomb appears the statement, "She died, for Adam sinned; she lived, for Jesus died."

Members of the Old Brick Church enjoyed a prosperity based on cotton and slavery until the outbreak of the Civil War. The great conflict spelled doom for both the community and the church. Many in the congregation went off to fight, and more than a few of them never returned. In the cemetery of the old church the graves of four Confederate veterans are located at the foot of the graves of four men who fought in the American Revolution.

Not only were the rolls of the congregation decimated by the war, but before the conflict ended the community was to feel the wrath of Sherman's armies. The left wing of the Union forces traveled north from Columbia on the west bank of the Broad River, crossed that stream at Alston and came eastward. In their path lay Ebenezer Meeting House and the homes of many of its members. A number of homes went up in flames, and even the small house of worship on the banks of Little River fell victim to the Union forces.

In order to rebuild the bridge across the stream at the foot of the hill, destroyed shortly before by retreating Confederates, the invaders tore out the flooring and sleepers of the church. This act of desecration was too much for one Northern soldier. Feeling a need to apologize to the members, he wrote the following on the door facing on the west side of the building: "Citizens of this community: please excuse us for defacing your house of worship so much. It was absolutely necessary to effect a crossing over the creek, as the Rebs destroyed the bridge. A Yankee." Although the inscription was largely obliterated by an inadvertent whitewashing, almost every visitor claims to see the original writing.

Since 1932 it has been the custom of Associate Reformed Presbyterians to gather periodically at the Old Brick Church for special services or celebrations to keep alive the memories of bygone days and to recall the dedication and faith of those who once worshiped there. These occasional gatherings also provide opportunities for the renewal of friendships and acquaintances, and in many ways the services are both religious and social.

On Sunday afternoon, Sept. 23, 1973, there was standing room only inside the church. Many stood around under the trees or among the tombstones, and others sat on the ancient granite wall which surrounds both building and cemetery. The principal speaker that day was Geddeth Smith, a Columbian now living in New York City. He was well qualified to give the address. Not only is Smith a successful actor on both stage and in television, but he is a lineal descendent of Alexander Kincaid, one of 34 members of the congregation to whom a deed to the property was given in 1793.

Catawba Presbytery, in the hounds of which the church is located, took positive action last fall to insure that the old sanctuary will not be forgotten in either a religious or historic sense. The church was reinstated on the rolls of Presbytery as a house of worship, though not an active congregation. The action taken will also result in the practice of holding a meeting of the Presbytery at the Old Brick Church every fifth year, to be held in addition to special services.

The Old Brick Church was entered on the National Register of Historic Places as of Aug. 19, 1971. That is good news for those everywhere who have a great affection for the ancient meeting house and want to see it preserved, restored and maintained.

A Note of History

We are assembled today in a house of worship which was built in 1788. In other periods of history this place of worship was known as Ebenezer Meeting House and also Little River Church, but for a long time Associate Reformed Presbyterians and others have affectionately spoken of it as the Old Brick Church.

Although no congregation has regularly worshiped in the venerable brick sanctuary for more than 70 years, tremendous significance is attached to it by Associate Reformed Presbyterians. It was here on May 9, 1803, when the building was comparatively new, that a handful of ministers and ruling elders gathered to organize the Synod of the Carolinas. In 1822 this body made itself independent of Northern ties, eventually evolving into the present denomination.

The story of Ebenezer Meeting House began with the arrival in the 1770s of Presbyterians, from Scotland and Ireland who settled on both sides of Little River. They were people who had been neighbors in the old country and who would continue the relationship in a new land. These families had hardly begun work on their own homes when they turned their attention to building a suitable house of worship. The first one or two were temporary buildings but soon the desire came to build a more permanent edifice. These early worshipers could not have dreamed how permanent it would be or that more than 200 years later a congregation such as we would be worshipping, and remembering, within the sacred walls of the house they built.

They made the bricks themselves. After their crops were laid by, the men would go to the brickyard, tramp the mud into mortar with their bare feet, put it into molds with their hands, and carry them out into the sun to dry. It was said they kept the kilns burning night and day, and it took a long time to build. But they completed the building in 1788, and they did their work well.

This revered and picturesque old church has seen much history, and in the two centuries of its existence has withstood good time and bad, war and peace, and the ravages of both time and weather.

The Old Brick Church, under the official name of Ebenezer Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church, was restored to the rolls of Catawba Presbytery on November 18, 1973. There is no active congregation but periodically many come together, as we have today, to be reminded of the role this church once played, and continues to play, in the life and mission of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church.

John Bigham

(This history was taken from a pamphlet dated October 15, 1995 which was a Historical Celebration of the "Old Brick Church".)

Confederate troops took the bridge that was over the swollen stream with them. The Union Army saw the floor boards and beams in the church as materials that could be used to construct a bridge over the Little River and used the wood to do exactly that, construct a bridge over the river.

But the dismantling of the church was not done without stirring the conscience of at least one of the northern intruders, as is documented by the inscription he left on the church's wall. The "Yankee's" words have been protected and preserved since the Civil War:

"To the Citizens of this community
Please excuse us for defacing your house of worship.
It was absolutely necessary to effect our crossing over the Creek.
A Yankee."

Other stories associated with church members have been passed down and have survived, although the story's characters rest among the tombs and under the stones of the "Old Brick Church."

One story, that of Mary McMorries Kincaid, begins in Ireland in the mid-seventeen hundreds.

Twelve-year-old Mary set sail from Ireland with many others in search of religious freedom. On the voyage to the New World the ship carrying the pioneers became becalmed (motionless) in the Atlantic. And the ship's provisions ran out.

Starving, the crew of the ship had no alternative but to cast lots in order to choose a sacrifice so that the others might eat.

The luck of the draw frowned upon young Mary, but because the crew couldn't bear to kill her, she was the most beautiful on the ship, they agreed to draw again. And again Mary was the chosen.

But no one would agree to Mary's death, so the ship's members prayed through the night for deliverance from their plight.

The next morning, according to legend, a ship spotted the stranded vessel and came to its rescue with rations.

Thanks, to their good fortune Mary and her family arrived in Fairfield County, where she married James Kincaid who built the Kincaid - Anderson House, which is still standing and called "Fairfield."

"Fairfield" is constructed of the same type of bricks used to build the "Old Brick Church" which also have a story behind them. The story can be traced, by newspaper accounts from 1939, to Mrs. Janie Hutchinson of Monticello.

Mrs. Hutchinson's grandmother told her how the men of the church would go to the brickyard, after they had harvested their crops, and tramp mud into mortar with their feet. The mortar was then put into molds and carried out into the sun to dry. The bricks were put into kilns, which were burned night and day.

It took them a long time to get ready to build the "Old Brick Church" according to Mrs. Hutchinson's account, but construction of the church was completed in 1788.

Because there is no development in the area around the "Old Brick Church" it is a peaceful place to go and wander among the building and grave sites. There is very little traffic on Highway 213 in front of the church which permits the sound of the wind in the trees to filter in while one wonders about the lives of the people buried in the yard around the church.

Veterans from wars as far back as the Revolutionary rest silently under the oaks and pines, while mothers with their infants lying beside them do likewise..

And in addition to being reminded of the history of those who were connected to the "Old Brick Church," there's a message contrived by Capt. James Kincaid, to provoke thought from the living who might wander upon his tomb. It reads:

From the tombs a
Doleful sound,
My ears attend the cry;
Ye living men, come
View the ground
Where you must shortly
Lie!

EBENEZER
ASSOCIATE REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
(THE OLD BRICK CHURCH)

EBENEZER is often called or referred to as the birthplace of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church in South Carolina, for it was in this historic little building that its first pastor, the Reverend James Rogers, acted as moderator and organized the Associate Reformed Synod of the Carolinas in 1803.

The building was erected in 1788 by the people of the Lower Little River section of the county. They were predominantly Scotch-Irish Presbyterians, highly religious, and staunch and fervent in their beliefs.

The sanctuary is small and rectangular in design, very plain, and covered with a gabled roof. It is well lighted and ventilated with long, unornamented windows. The bricks for the thick masonry walls were made by members of the congregation who also constructed the church and built the simple but well appointed furniture. There is also a slaves' gallery where the house servants worshiped with their masters and were taught the fundamentals of Christianity.

During the war, in 1865, Fairfield County was invaded. Ebenezer was in the path of General Killpatrick's Union Calvary. Near the church there were skirmishes with the Confederates who had the advantage of being located on the ridge. When the Union Calvary reached Little River they found that the Confederates had burned the bridge. In order to avoid the bullets of the sharpshooters in the hills above them, the Yankees took advantage of the little church and ripped out part of the flooring and woodwork to hastily construct a bridge over which they might cross the swollen stream and move on beyond the ridge.

After they left, a note of apology was found inscribed on some of the woodwork that remained intact. It read thus:

"To the citizens of this county -

Please, excuse us for defacing your house of worship.

It was absolutely necessary to effect a crossing over the Creek.

(Signed) A Yankee."

OLD BRICK CHURCH ERECTED 1788

This church building, erected in 1788, was first called Little River and afterwards, Ebenezer, but for many years has been known as the Brick Church. The exact date of organization is unknown. Before the Revolutionary War, a log church stood two miles west of the present location. When this church building was erected in 1788, the location was changed to accommodate the people who lived on the east side of Little River. The granite wall around the church and graveyard was erected in 1852.

The first pastor, so far as we know, was Rev. James Rogers, installed February 23, 1791, who came from Scotland and served until his death in 1830. He was followed by Rev. James Boyce, 1832-1843; Rev. Thomas Ketchin, 1844-1852; Rev. C. B. Betts, 1855-69. During the period 1791-1865, the Brick Church was a large and flourishing congregation. Following the War Between the States, the church declined and was without a regular pastor until reorganized in 1893 under the leadership of Rev. A. G. Kirkpatrick, who was pastor until 1899. Presbytery arranged for subsequent supplies, but after a few years, the congregation passed out of existence without any formal dissolution.

State Highway Marker

The Fairfield County Chamber of Commerce is promoting the erection of Standard Historical State Highway Markers. The Old Brick Church was chosen as one location. The inscription is limited and must be approved by the State Archives Department. This is now on order and approved inscription is as follows:

OLD BRICK CHURCH

On May 9, 1803, the Associate Reformed Synod of the Carolinas was organized here at Ebenezer A. R. P. Church, built in 1788 by a congregation dating from colonial days. The rock wall was added in 1852. Damaged by Union troops in 1865, the church was repaired and remained in active use until 1920.

A NOTE OF HISTORY

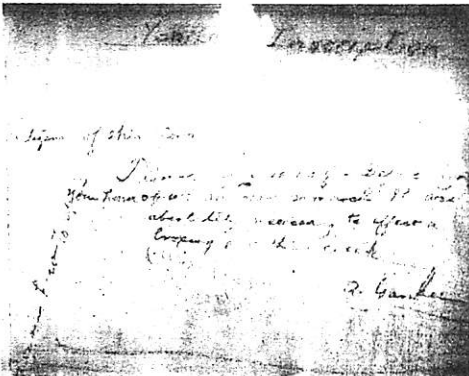

It is altogether fitting and very appropriate that the service today be a part of the Bicentennial Celebration of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church. We have been made conscious of our rich heritage in many ways throughout this significant year, and once again at the Brick Church we are reminded of a glorious past.

First known as Little River, then Ebenezer, and still later as the Brick Church, the meeting house where we have gathered today is familiar to us all as The old Brick Church. A shrine in the truest sense, its history and the story of its members are in many ways the history and the story of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church.

This ancient house of worship was built in 1788 but there was a congregation in existence before the American Revolution. The most important event in the colorful history of the church in which we worship today occurred on May 9, 1803. It was then that the Synod of the Carolinas, which in due time and under the guidance of God, would become the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church, was formally organized. For this, and for many other reasons, the history of the Old Brick Church is precious to Associate Reformed Presbyterians everywhere and also to countless others who have close ties to this ancient and revered place and to the nearby cemetery. Look about and be reminded of the rich heritage we can claim!

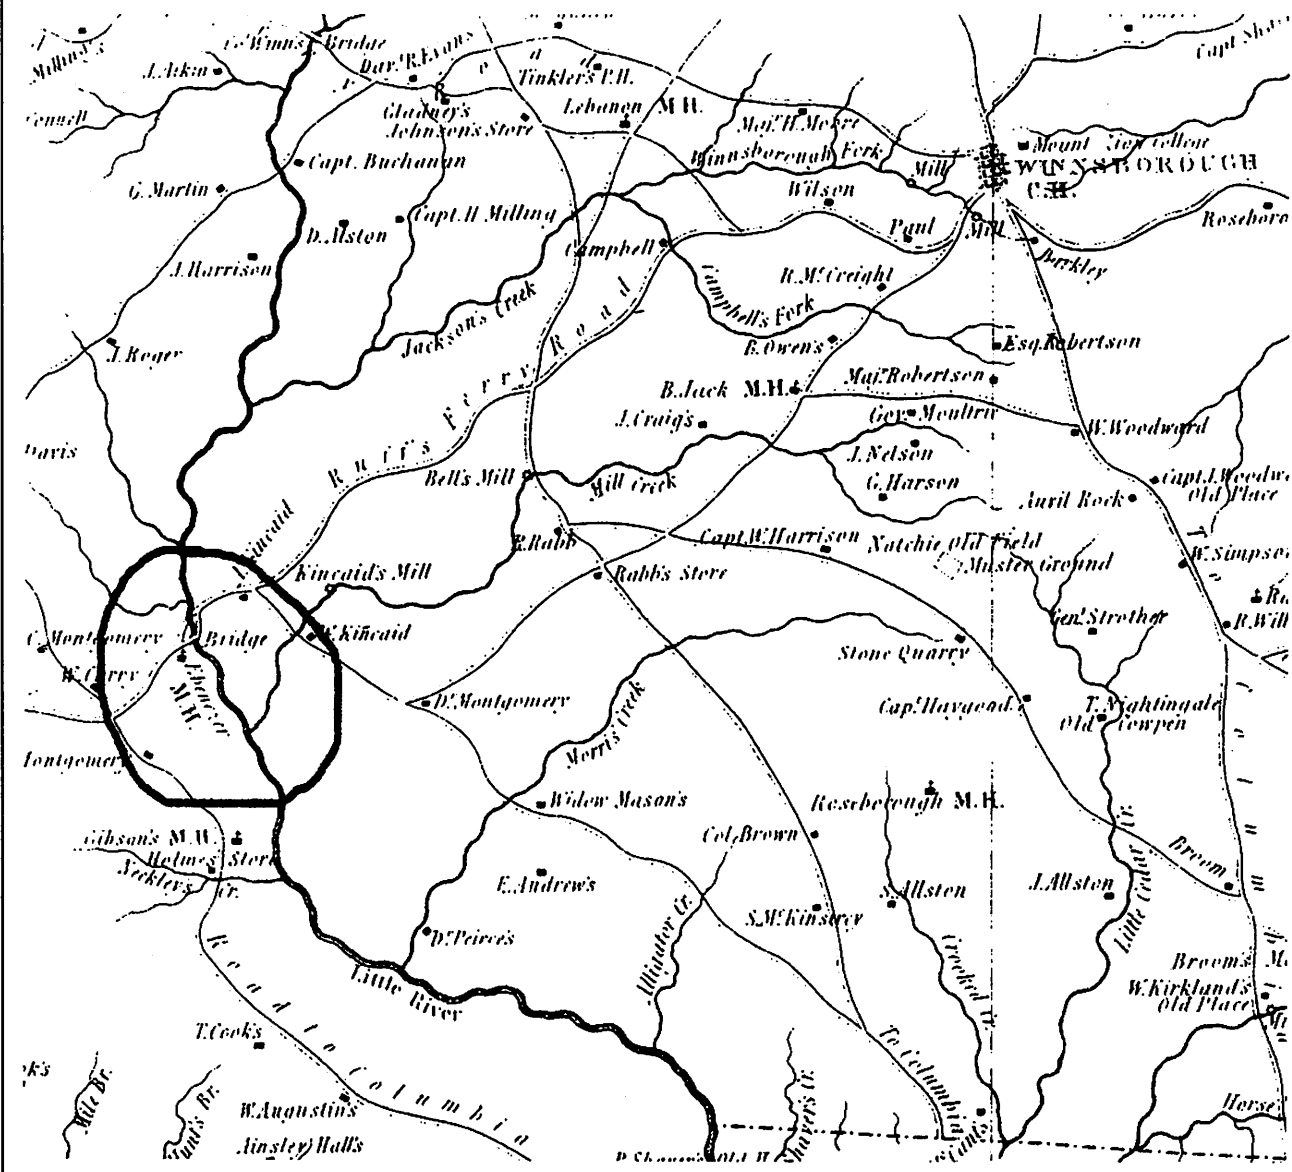

The Old Brick Church, under the official name of Ebenezer Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church, was restored to the roll of Catawba Presbytery on November 18, 1973. No active congregation exists, but as the years come and go we are reminded of the part this church once played, and continues to play, in the life and mission of the denomination.

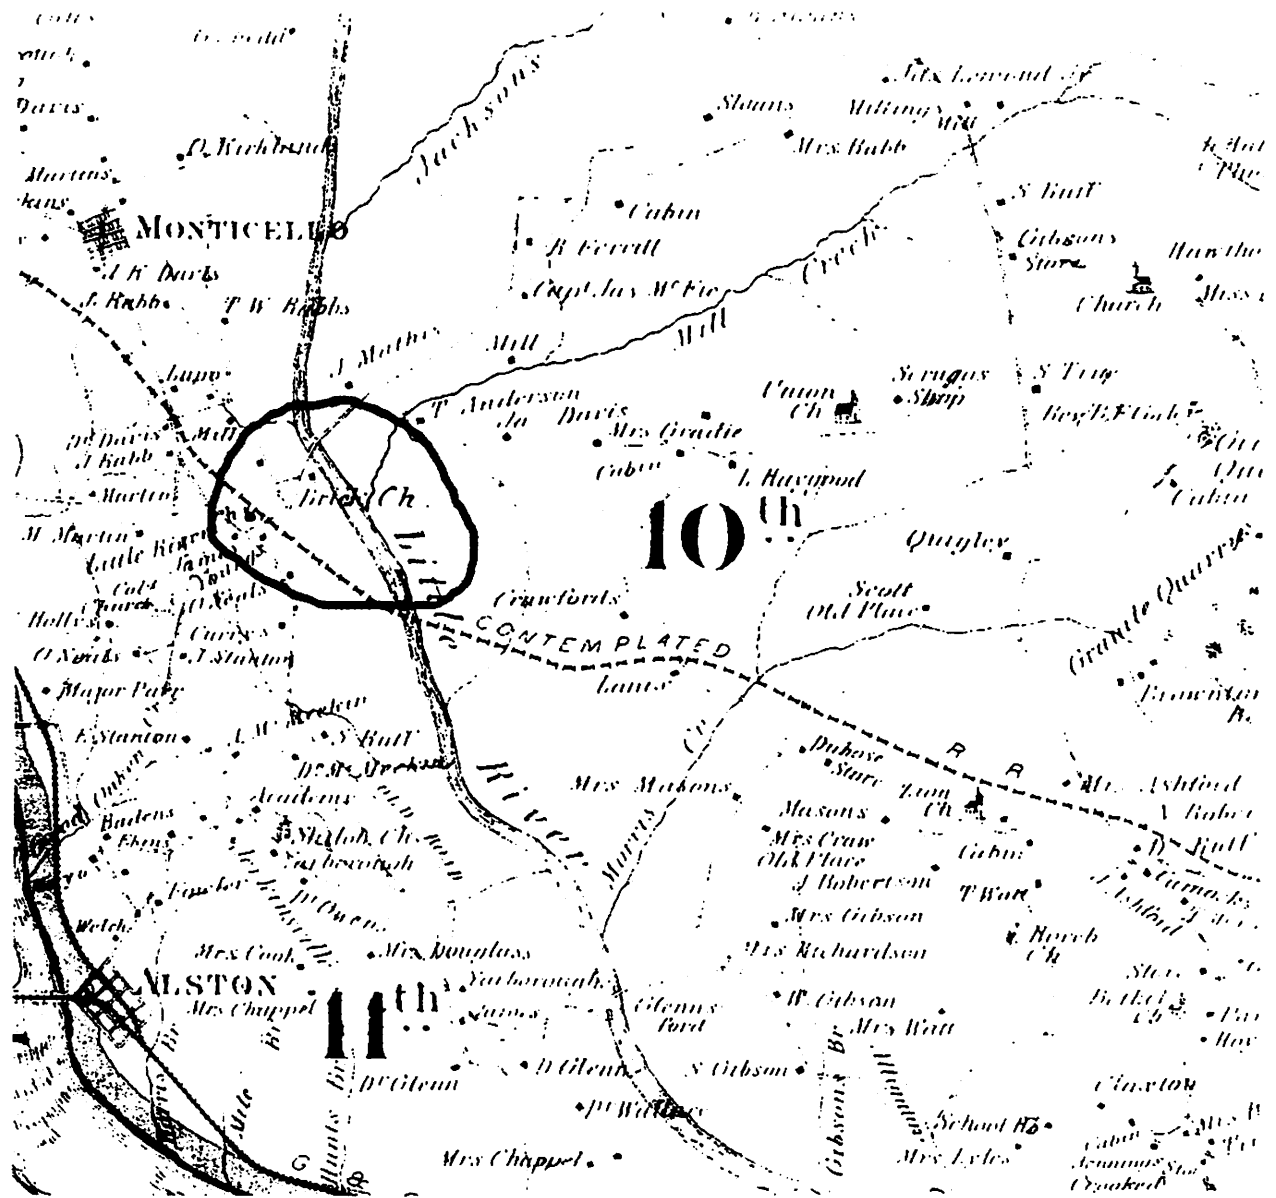

OLD BRICK CHURCH (EBENEZER) Fairfield County, S. C.

Historic birthplace of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church. Built by its own congregation in 1788 from hand molded bricks and local timber. Union Cavalry crossed nearby Little River in Feb. 1865 by using the flooring of the church. A written apology still legible on the woodwork reads: "To the citizens of this community—please excuse us for defacing your house of worship. It was absolutely necessary to effect a crossing over the creek. Signed, A Yankee."

It is also interesting to note that the Old Brick Church has been put on Fairfield County maps as far back as 1820. On the Robert Mills 1820 county map it was labeled as "Ebenezer Meeting House", on the 1876 county map it was labeled "Brick Church", on the 1908 county map it was labeled "Old Brick Church A. R. P.", and on the 1972 historical map of the county it was labeled "Old Brick Church 1788". So as you can see this little church on a little hill by the Little River has its name in print even as far back as 1820 and before that because of it being the home of the 'The Associate Reformed Synod of the Carolinas'. It is really funny how something so small can be so big! — Linda Malone
