

Room 224

“ Room 224! Room 224!” That’s what students hear while running down the hallways in order to beat the tardy bell. When students are late to class or to school they must report to room 224, the Attendance Office. Students must stay in this room until the bell rings to change classes. Ms. Broome assigns all students in this room two working lunches. Some students feel that the consequences of receiving the first tardy are fierce. Freshman Meagan LaRose says, “The first time you are late you should not get anything because you can’t expect us to be perfect. Then maybe the second time you should get one working lunch.” And, for those who decide not to serve the working lunches, there is always Saturday Academy. So don’t be caught in room 224.

Summer Aragon

Right: The Entrance to the dreaded Room 224.

Below: Late to class, Diandra Johnson signs in with Mrs. Broome in the Student Management Room.

