

Teen Institute

Above: The members of Teen Institute attend conferences and conventions all over the southeast. These students are in a discussion group at a conference in Atlanta.

Below: Mr. Danny Miller speaks to the members of Teen Institute before venturing out into downtown Atlanta on a recent field trip.

The Teen Institute is a club for young adults in the middle school or high school. Throughout the year, the club plans and implements alcohol and other drug abuse programs throughout the community. It is designed to teach students how to effectively create alcohol and drug abuse prevention programs that appeal to the senses of other students and their community. Members are committed to serving this goal in many ways throughout the year.

While there is much work involved with Teen Institute, the members also have a good team while accomplishing their goals. Through the interaction in the club and with other students, they increase their knowledge and help to give all students alternatives to using drugs and alcohol. The Teen Institute influences everyone to “Just Say No!”
