

Senior Prophecy

John Ruff — After becoming famous as the stuntman in "E.T. Part Two," John returned to Winnsboro where he manages "The Gulfa" and Ruff's Bar And Grill.

Brad Gaddy — After being discovered as Coach Robinson's long-lost son, Brad fled to Oklahoma, where in his spare time, he designs album covers for AC/DC.

Rob Pope — Kicked out of the Citadel for not shining his shoes, Rob Pope is Mr. February 2004 on the Playgirl Calendar.

Russell Wilkes — After publishing his brochure "Creative Ways on How to Get Out of Writing a Term Paper," Russell became a professional member of The Womanless Weddings.

Robin White — Ridgeway, South Carolina is now known as the "Home of the Whoppa" in honor of Robin White, police chief, highway patrolman, and Mayor of Ridgeway.

Bobby Castles — After assassinating Mr. Rogers, Bobby took over the neighborhood and now teaches the little children dirty words.

Dean Taylor — Married a midget softball player and became an abused husband.

Dena Reeves — Soon after receiving her degree in Criminal Justice, specializing in Youth Services, Dena was prosecuted for child abuse. Dena later married one of her much younger clients, which was no surprise — we all know she specialized in robbing the cradle.

Herman Mattox — Our local Elvis imitator croons "Love Me Tender" to little old ladies in the Winnsboro Music Club.

Liz Harden — After being fired as an auctioneer because she talked too fast, Liz became the hostess of her own talk show in which her guests just listen to her talk.

Ritchie Monteith — is seen annually as Bobo The Clown at the State Fair where he gets paid for hurling insults at innocent passers-by.

Robin Lever — Won the Nobel Peace Prize for never causing any trouble.

Laura Bost — Unhappy with her salary as an accountant, Laura Bost turned to a life of crime. She is now a terrorist leader in Zimbabwe.

Betsy Barrineau, now Mrs. Julio Iglesias is a whining opera star with the Metropolitan Opera in New York. She comes back to South Carolina every Monday, however, to collect the weekend news for print in The Winnsboro Enquirer.

Becky DuBard can be seen on local t.v. commercials as Becky Beta and her vast vocabulary trying to sell her version of DuBard's Dictionary. Thus far she has sold only four copies, notably all to DuBards. Could it be that only a DuBard can understand it?

David Herndon, after retiring as President of Manhattan Industries, is now host of his own t.v. show "Fishing with Red."

Eric Steele, voted most valuable bagboy at Winn Dixie, can still be seen wearing his Clemson sweatshirt and RWA football and baseball jerseys. Big Eric.

Gene Price, owner of the How Soon Do Ya Want to Git There Bus Transit, can still be seen driving Coach Gasque's truck running errands.

Fran Miller, after a dazzling career on the Erskine Basketball team, took over John Madden's place on the Miller Beer Commercials. She has now gained the ability to crush a beer can with a single hand.

Wylie Wright, President of the Buckwheat Greeting Card Company, now plays Ernest on the Hancock Buick commercials.

Tina Evans, after seventeen unsuccessful marriages, became a professional clogger at The Dry Gulch Saloon.

Ken Pitmon took over Stutt's Photography and continues the tradition of taking advantage of the sentimentality of parents.

Troy Beckham co-stars on the Knight Rider and is a substitute Drivers-Ed teacher at a local high school.

David Branaham, millionaire owner of the Branaham Empire, has not let success go to his head. He can still be seen pumping gas at the station or styling hair at Ora Lee's Beauty Salon.

Becky Mattox, after practicing while at work in Mattox's Packaging Store, became a world famous wine tester, thanks to her ex-husbands Ernest and Julio Gallo.

Scott Porter, the local game warden, teaches classes on his personal hunting techniques.

Penny Renwick, after a career as the first female statistician for The Pittsburgh Steelers, retired and now enjoys her dancing career as a Solid Gold Dancer.

Tracy Haygood, convicted of selling the top secret information to the Russians, was hanged as a traitor and buried according to her wishes in Siberia.

Scott Jiggs Jeffers — 20 years later it was discovered that he had fallen overboard on the cruise.

Elisa Hare does the 12:00 news for the local t.v. station. Naturally she never arrives until 12:15 and is always chewing gum!
