

Students Leave Classroom

Field trips, speakers, aerobics, and art were only a few of the varied experiences offered students during Mini-Course Week in January. This special week was planned by the faculty as an interim between semesters. It gave students the opportunity to learn outside of the traditional classroom settings.

High School students visited places like the Summer Nuclear plant, the Congaree Swamp, and the Riverbanks Zoo. Also, there were trips to the mountains, a ski trip, and a trip to Charlotte to ice skate. The French Club took an exciting three-day trip to New York City. A concert of religious rock music by Gary Davis and a performance of storytelling and reading of original poems by local artist, Tommy Scott Young, highlighted the week.

Sub-Freshmen went to art museums, the State House, and on a arrowhead hunt. Middle School Students enjoyed a trip to Discovery Place, learned art stenciling and hunter safety, and participated in gymnastics.

Lower school students were introduced to computers, went on field trips, and enjoyed special art projects.

These seniors found Whitewater Falls especially picturesque during Mini-course week.

Top: Tommy Scott Young, local artist, poet, and storyteller, thoroughly entertained middle and high school students with his captivating style.

Bottom: Todd Childers is dwarfed by this high pine tree in Congaree Swamp.