

JV Boys Have Class

Head Coach Randy Stogner and his assistant Robbie Barth faced a real challenge at the first of the JV Basketball season. They had over 20 enthusiastic young men try out for the team which had to be cut to 13. Of these 13 only three had ever played basketball on a team, and these three had very little playing experience.

The patience and hard work of the coaches and the tremendous effort and desire of the team paid off, however; it was evident to the spectators that the team improved every game. Even when they were beaten by older more experienced teams, the Eagles never gave up. They continued to hustle and play with intensity. Coach Stogner commented that he had never worked with a team with more heart.

The future looks bright for these young athletes. This year of experience will have prepared them for a very competitive season next year.

JV Boys Basketball: (bottom) Bruce Baker, Cal Caldwell, Matthew Rambo, Christopher Bass, Turner Pope, (Manager) Brent Kelly; (middle) Coach Barth, Rion Fetner, Heath Cope, Steven Murray, Jeff Ralston, Jack Livings, Coach Stogner; (top) George King, Jason Wade, Matthew Mazat, and Brian Clyburn.

Matthew Rambo, the team's leading scorer, shoots over Calhoun's center.

The Eagles learn by setting up and running the offense with patience, two points are not hard to come by.

Rion Fetner scores from the free-throw line.

