

Senior spirit

During the football season, when the Seniors left school at 12:00, we did not go our separate ways; instead we met at someone's house to see just how wild we could look for the 2:10 pep rally. We became experts in the art of painting faces, changing hair color, and dressing up in blue and gold.

After we won the spirit stick with the help of noise makers, the rest of the school began to catch on to the spirit. How we would show up for the next pep rally was always a surprise because nobody ever knew what we would do next.

The time we dressed up as Eagles with beaks and feathers was probably the most memorable pep rally other than Homecoming.

Although the football team had a losing record, we never gave up on them and always showed our support through our spirit.

When there was a home game, Seniors could often be seen with blue hair, painted faces, and carrying various noisemakers. The participants in this pep rally were Ed Pope, Brian Clyburn, and Freddie Glenn. Complete with Eagle beaks were Kay Gustafson, Beverly Rice, and Michelle Benson.
