

Brian Bonds Asst. Coach

When Brian Bonds was injured in the tenth grade, he did not quit football. Instead, he decided to become a manager of the varsity football team. This was not an easy job. Brian taped ankles, lined the field, cleaned the locker room, and anything else that needed to be done. Coach Smith commented, "Brian is one of the most responsible high school seniors I have ever met. He is the kind of guy that makes coaches lazy because he takes care of them so much." Even though Brian could not play football, he found a way to become an important part of the team.

by Kay Gustafson

Janet Spencer and Louise Cathcart discuss the latest news before English class starts.

Mr. Stogner's Modern Math class works diligently to find the answer to the problem.

Not only was Brian Bonds trainer for the football team, but he was also the president of the newly formed FCA. Here Brian Bonds leads the group in a devotion.