

Four-year-olds Develop skills

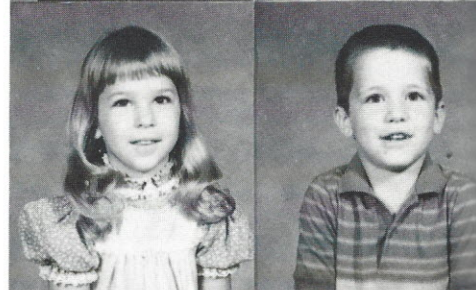

Even though there were only four people in four-year old kindergarten, they still remained busy. They learned to distinguish the colors, and how to write numbers and letters. Besides learning these things, they were taught to share and obey rules. The skills that they learned will be valuable in their future.

Like most kindergarteners, Steven Davis thinks that playtime is the best part of the day.

Since there were only four people in four-year old kindergarten this year, each student was able to receive lots of special attention.

After playtime is over it is always important to clean up. Here Mrs. Martin helps Callie Ladd put away the toys.
