

“When I Grow Up . . . ” FUTURE DREAMS AND ASPIRATIONS

The seniors of '93 have high hopes for the future. Although their ideas are somewhat different, they are primarily geared toward one goal: BIG BUCKS!

“I would like to be a CPA,” commented Donna Faulk, “and go into business for myself or work for a company.”

Michelle Moody had other ideas for her future. “I want to be an international or entertainment lawyer. I want to work in a big city, but I want to live in the mountains.”

“I want to be a biologist, or a doctor maybe,” responded Casey Bonds. “But I know I want to major in biology at Clemson University or maybe Carolina.”

Senior John Martin has similar plans in the field of medicine. “I would like to attend U.S.C. and study to become a nurse anesthetist and work at Baptist Hospital.”

Robbie Black has narrowed it down to two choices. “I want to be an engineer or a doctor.”

Children are the main interests of Mary Lee Hodges and Priscilla Rambo. “I want to be a middle school English/literature teacher at a small Christian school,” replied Mary Lee.

“I’d like to have a successful practice in child psychology,” said Priscilla, “and to be married with three boys.”

Reagan Lewis and Jamie Cooper aspire to work in the sports field. “I would like to be a physical therapist for a professional baseball or football team,” answered Reagan. “First on my list are the Atlanta Braves or the Atlanta Falcons.”

“I would like to either play professional football or be a coach,” said Jamie.

Bill Dove replied that he wanted to be a game warden.

Camak Blair and Ashlee Spires simply want to enjoy whatever they choose to do. “I want to sell lemon-ice at Myrtle Beach,” joked Camak, “or just do something I enjoy.”

“I’m not sure what I want to do yet,” answered Ashlee. “There are too many opportunities for me to choose one when I am 17 years old.” She added, “I want to be happy when I grow up.”

Whatever the future holds for these twelve seniors, we wish them much success!
