

More Than Just a Teacher

Most students have a favorite teacher, one who inspires them to work harder, or just one who is there when needed. Here are some high school favorites of the senior class.

"Mrs. Nicholson is my favorite," commented Bill Dove. "She always cares."

Ashlee Spires couldn't pick just one. "Coach Copeland has helped me tremendously in math and a lot of other things. And "Miss Nick" has tried to teach me to sing!"

"My favorite is Coach Copeland," replied Jamie Cooper. "He taught me not to quit when I was feeling down."

Reagan Lewis has several favorites. "Mrs. Allen really cares about what we learn. I've really enjoyed working on the yearbook staff with Mrs. Ladd. And Mrs. Dillingham made school exciting and fun. Her class was always an adventure. I actually looked forward to her classes."

"Mrs. Turner taught me how important English grammar really is," answered Donna Faulk. "And Coach Copeland has made Algebra fun and easy to learn and understand."

All the seniors expressed a similar message that they appreciated teachers who cared and took interest in making their classes fun.

The High Price of Seniorhood

Although becoming a senior brings that sense of "power", it also seems to bring an emptiness to the wallet. When we asked if seniorhood proved to be more expensive, these were a few responses:

"My senior year has definitely been the most expensive year yet," replied Reagan Lewis. "I want to buy everything to keep for memories.

Also, the prices for applying to colleges range from $15 to $45 each."

"Buying caps and gowns are expensive, plus college applications," said Donna Faulk.

"It is because we have to buy caps and gowns and invitations," answered Bill Dove. "We also have to pay for our senior cruise."

"Yes, because we have to pay for SAT, along with invitations and caps and gowns," commented John Martin.

Camak Blair seemed to have a different opinion. "So far my senior year hasn't been any more expensive than any other year."

"It hasn't yet," replied Michelle Moody, "but I'm sure that it will since I still have to pay for graduation expenses and college application fees."
