

RWA Wins Runner-Up Title for . . .

Once again this year, RWA participated in the Nationwide Insurance Prom Promise Program. This is a special program held across the nation that teaches young people the dangers of drinking and driving.

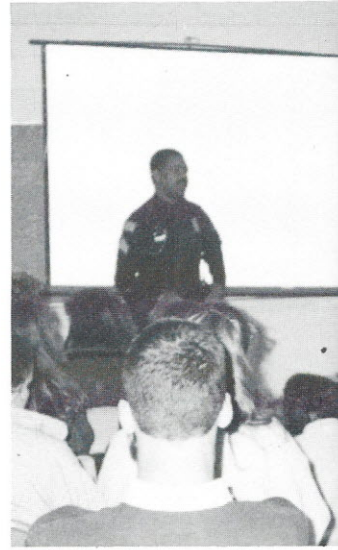

Led by their faculty advisor, Mrs. Ellen Nicholson, the junior class was the driving force behind this worthwhile program. The parent advisors, Mrs. Sandra Jones and Mrs. Mary Gail Douglas, coordinated with a student committee to arrange speakers from MADD, assemblies, and a memorial service for the many victims of drunk driving.

As prom night neared and anticipation grew, Prom Promise pledge cards were distributed. By signing these pledge cards, students promised, in front of their peers, not to drink or do drugs on prom night.

The big night finally arrived, and thanks to 100% participation in the pledge signing, the 1993 Prom was incident free. Along with the pledges and a scrapbook, our school competed with other statewide entries. In addition to capturing the runner-up title, the school was presented a check for $1000! Thanks to all who made this year's program a BIG success!

Sargeant Staten from the Winnsboro Public Safety Department discusses the consequences of drinking and drug use.

Each member of the Jr. class drew names of students from grades 6-8 for Pick-a-Pal groups. This unique "mentor" program let the younger kids talk with the Jrs. about drugs & alcohol.

Prom Promise banners and bulletin boards such as these could be seen all over RWA during the campaign. MADD posters also helped to emphasize the drug and alcohol free message.

Kensy Stevenson signs her Prom Promise pledge card at the last assembly. Pick-a-Pal groups watched as each student in grades 9-12 signed his pledge card. This helped to develop positive role models and reinforce the idea that alcohol and drugs are not needed to have a good time.
