

ABOUT FACE. While visiting Yorktown, the students witnessed a first-hand demonstration of how Revolutionary soldiers loaded and shot their heavy muskets during a battle.

LOCKED AWAY. Ashley Tolbert and Stephanie Schachner try out the stocks in Williamsburg. Although they are smiling, it is hard to imagine having a pleasant experience in them.

A FOWL FRIEND. RWA students listen as the Jamestown guide tells the group about the rooster that "guards" the settlement. They were eager to learn about this fowl friend.

HECKIN' IT OUT. The procedure of tanning deer and other animal hides is a common practice among the Native American tribes. Jim McMurray examined the texture of this hide at the Powhatan Indian village at Jamestown.

POUNDIN' IT DOWN. Joseph Cook tries out his hands and muscles as he gets an idea of how the Indians ground maize into meal. This may be fun for a short time, but you wouldn't want to do it for long. Right, Joseph?!
