

SIXTH GRADE

What are the phone rules in your house?

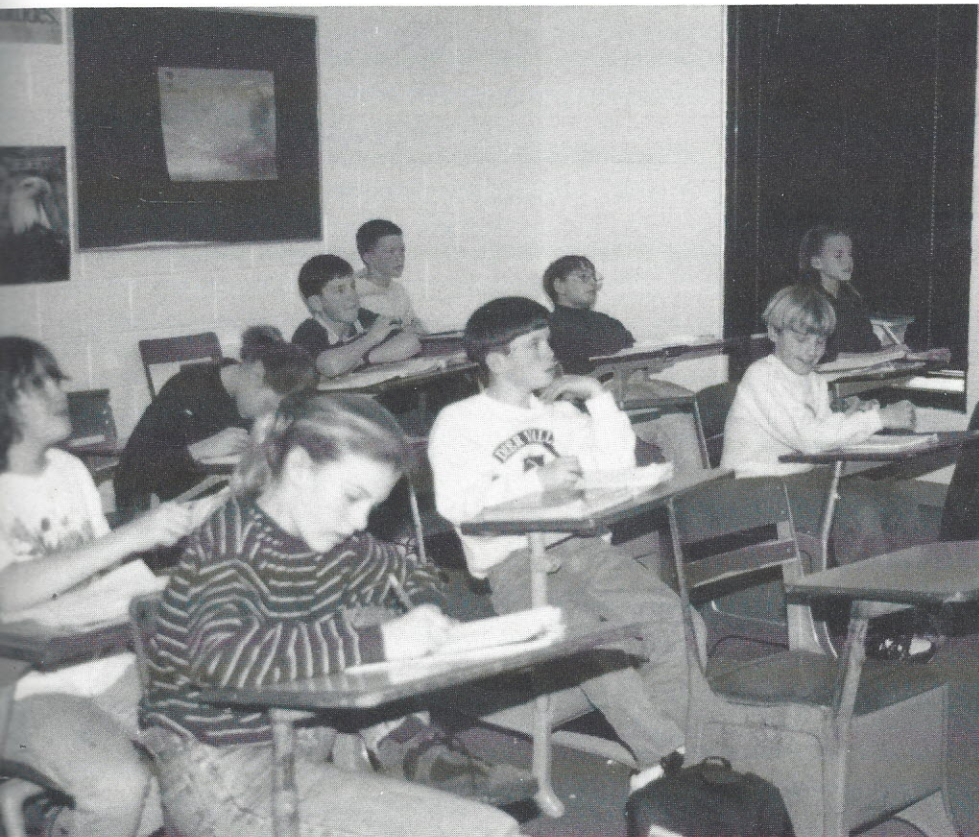

"I've got to get off the phone when my parents need to use it; I can not call long distance before five, and I can only call 1-800 numbers not 1-900 numbers." — Edward Frazier

"We don't really have any except I can't talk on the phone after 10:00 pm on school days." — Mary Ellis

"I really don't talk on the phone unless it is an emergency; usually my sister is on the phone hour after hour. My dad won't let her talk after ten and I can't either. My younger brother can only stay on the phone until seven. I think my dad is being fair about the phone rules." — Eddie Montgomery

"Don't eavesdrop on my parents." — Justin Swearingen

A LITTLE SPIRIT GOES A LONG WAY. 6th graders Nichole Collins and Callie Ladd buck the trend on Tacky Day. This dynamic duo are just two out of a very spirited group!

WHO SAID LEARNING IS FUN? They may really seem hard at work, but these 6th graders are ready for the bell to ring. To them, math class redefines the definition of eternity.

PUFFING TO VICTORY. Several sixth graders puff and puff their way to the finish line. While studying wind energy, the sixth grade science classes got to work together to create an award winning puff mobile.

PATRIOT-IN-TRAINING. Wylie Clarkson gets a lesson in revolutionary life from a "real" American Patriot during a trip to Washington, D.C. The group got a good history lesson (while having a lot of fun) during the Middle School Trip.
