

THE HEART OF DIXIE LAND. The group of sixth and seventh graders stops long enough from their busy sightseeing schedule to pose for a picture on the steps of the Confederate Museum. Located in Richmond, Virginia, this was one of the final stops the group made before boarding the Amtrak train back to SC.

THIS IS HOW IT'S DONE. While touring the Jamestown village, Cory, Mac, Edward, and Justin stop for a demonstration on how to split wood rails. The entire tour offered lots of demonstrations and hands on experiences for the students and chaperones.

"GIVE ME LIBERTY, OR GIVE ME DEATH." St. John's Episcopal Church in Richmond was another stop on the busy tour. The students, parents, and teachers were relieved to get to sit down as the lady addressed the group about the historical significance of this building. Most important of all mentioned was that this is where Patrick Henry made his fiery speech for freedom.

THE THREE MUSKETEERS? Donning helmets and chest armor, Wylie Clarkson, Tyler Thigpen, and Paul Atkerson get a taste of colonial warfare. Thank goodness for modern technology, right guys?

ROW, ROW, ROW YOUR BOAT. A few seven grade girls find a canoe in the Indian settlement Jamestown to relax in. Being one of the more popular places, Jamestown offered the students a taste of the life in the early days.
