

Circle to the Right. Todd Johnson and Alyssa Atkerson promenade during the annual Square Dance. Students of all ages attended the Square Dance and had a blast.

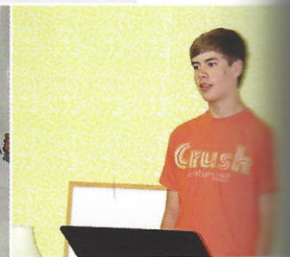

Mr. GQ's, Maybe? Mitchell gives a smirk while Tyler proudly sports his Ray Bans. These guys were dressed in 20's and '80's attire for Decade Day during Spirit Week.

I Am King. Bryant sits on top of Mitchell Gibbons during one of the pep rallies. Each class had representatives that competed in exciting and sometimes funny games at each pep rally.

What's Up? Hunter flashes a quick smile at the camera in his camo garb. Hunter was one of the many who wore camo during Spirit Week.

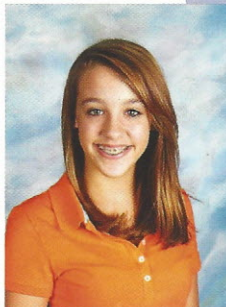

Drum Roll, Please. Caleb presents his job shadowing experience to cohorts in 8th grade Academics Instruction time during this week. It allowed 8th graders to become more aware of their learning styles and helped them focus on their own goals.

Musical Chairs. Students have a hard time deciding which seat will be theirs in Ms. Ladd's class. As this was the first day of school, these students were excited to see their friends again and were eager to hear about each others summer vacation time.

Hang on Tight. After a pep rally, Kennedy gives her friend, Grace, a free ride. The eighth grade girls developed even closer relationships through the course of the school year.

Reading Buddies. Emily Keys helps first grader Peyton Patrick read through a book before Peyton's first grade end of the year program. Upperclassmen enjoyed the opportunity to mentor younger students as much as younger students wanted to be a part of the upper school lifestyle.

Can You See Me Now? Kyle, looking like a creature from the swamp, is decked out in his camo. Kyle won the award for Camo Day during Spirit Week.

Picassos in the Making. Parker and Hunter D carefully paint their masterpieces in Ms. Ladd's class. The second year, Ms. Ladd had her students paint and write about an important person in their lives.
