

The End! B, Rebecca, and Webb complete their assignments during 7th period enrichment and spend their last few minutes indulging in a good book. The students benefitted from having study hall during this time on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Elizabethan Style. These ninth graders offer food of the era at their station during the Shakespeare Festival. This new event was part of their literature studies.

You Can't See Me. The ninth grade boys are well rehearsed at pretending to read and enjoy the latest edition of Weekly Reader. Ms. Trammell, a first year teacher at RWA, was no fool when it came to their less than obvious old school tricks.

Reading, WRITING, 'rithmetic. John tries to remain focused during his writing assignment. He managed to finish despite the camera in his face.

1, 2, 3, .... CHEESE! Marion Walker, Nancy Blair, and Chrissy seem to understand the directions. Gunnar on the other hand was a little overzealous about having his picture taken.

Who's the Man? Rob O' Connor aces his first test for Coach Berry. Rob is a very hard and determined worker inside the classroom and on the basketball court.

Alright Alright Alright. Gunnar is not too shy to show off his wardrobe and spirit on Character Day. Which character was he impersonating?

Blast From the Past. The ninth grade has nearly 100% class participation during Homecoming Week activities. They could hardly live for the current themed day waiting with much anticipation of each other's dress for tomorrow.

I'm Awake! Jaycie Johnson tries to pretend she didn't fall asleep in Mrs. Gibbons class. Often times after late night returns from away ball games, student-athletes struggled to stay actively attentive.

Friends that Braid Together... Together. Meg touches up Chrissy's hair during homework center. Meg and Chrissy were on the Cheer Squad and have established a great friendship.
