1. The fifth graders parade through the school hallway showing off their Patriots Day attire. 2. Graedyn Bartell stands up at the board as her teacher Mrs. Wells, traces out the silhouette. 3. McKenzie Wilson and Ainsley Martin smile for the camera before they take part in the next activity. 4. Coach Inman entertains some of the fifth grade boys with his humor. 5. The boys gather around a table to practice writing laws in their books while the girls work on candle making skills.

Game On! All the students took part in badmitten games, a traditional form of recreation even many years ago. Students loved taking advantage of this activity while also getting some exercise.

WHAM! Fifth grader Joey Sanchez has no shame in serving the birdie over the net while playing badmitten. It was obvious that these kids loved playing this game while going back in time for a day.

Leaders of the Pack. Graedyn Bartell and Gavin Douglas lead the Patriots Day parade in the hallway. The fifth grade students had fun reliving the past and learning the old customs of that time period.

Ladies in Waiting. Two of the fifth grade girls sit, along with their classmates, and await the beginning of their badmitten activity with Coach Berry. They quickly found out that the colonial attire they were wearing made the game a little more challenging.
