

Field Day

Fun in the Sun Celebration

What's not to love about the annual Field Day event? There are always lots of fun games, competition between classes, and a day away from the classroom and books! However, this year's event started out with chilly temperatures, which made the water games a bit more challenging and had many reaching for towels!

"Coolin" It. Second grader Ella Grace Harrison takes a break from Field Day and some of the fun activities. All of the lower school students had a blast and fun in the sun on this eventful day.

Austin Robinson manages a smile even while drenching himself with cold water. 2. The fourth graders use their toes to gather marbles in the cold pools of water. 3. Scotty Timms tries hard to keep his water from spilling out as he hurries to the next part of the relay where he must pour the water into another container. 4. Ethan Dean and Sydney Boulware really work together during this fun-filled relay to accomplish their goal of transferring as much water as possible into the skinny-neck bottle without spilling it on Sydney's head.
