

DEATH...On last Sunday, Adam Blake, living on Mr. H.L. Elliott's place, breathed his last. Perhaps no citizen of our town was better acquainted with the history of Winnsboro than old Adam. He came to this place in 1813 a mere lad, and had lived here continually ever since. He had a remarkable memory, remembering the merest details of happenings in and around our town for over a half century. To illustrate his wonderful memory, we have only to say he hauled the town clock from Charleston, and remembered the weight of almost every article connected with it...Peace to his ashes.
