GRANDFATHER MOUNTAIN HIGHLAND GAMES AND GATHERING OF THE CLANS

As it turned out, there was plenty of gasoline available for our annual trek to Grandfather Mountain, North Carolina, and we began our activities with the Buchanan Society CEILIDH which was held on Friday evening. The CEILIDH was well attended and after an excellent buffet dinner we were entertained by our own pipers and dancers. In addition we had the opportunity to renew old acquaintances and meet a number of our new members.

Our hospitality suite was also a gathering spot and we were privileged to be entertained by pipers, banjo players and singers during the course of the gathering.

The Games started on Saturday with the usual large crowd making the trip up the mountain to MacRae Meadows. It was a typical Scottish day. The morning mist drifted over the mountains and across the meadows and a party of hunters rode out behind the hounds as bagpipes droned in the background. As usual, the approach to the Meadow, where the Clans gather and the games are held, was surrounded by vendors selling all manner of Scottish goods. Everything from marmalade to bagpipes. Inside the gate the profusion of tartans continued to burst into view with the profusion of the wild flowers which blossom in the desert after the spring rains.

Genealogical experts matched individuals with their Clans while the shifting parade of marching pipe bands kept up a constant skirl in the air. In the infield the dancers pranced through the Highland dances while the athletes engaged in their more rugged pursuits of tossing the Caber, Hammer and Stone.

The guests of honour who participated this year were:

The Countess of Sutherland, Chief of Clan Sutherland

> Andrew Mac Thomas Chief of Clan Thomas

John MacRae Chief of Clan MacRae

Elizabeth Rose Chief of Clan Rose

Lord David Kennedy & Malcolm Colquhoun (sons of)
The Chiefs of Clan Kennedy & Clan Colquhoun

The Clan Buchanan Annual meeting was held in the Presidents tent in the afternoon amid several other meetings. It was the will of the Society members to hold our future annual meetings at the Ramada Inn in connection with the Ceilidh so that we will be able to conduct our business under more favorable circumstances.

The Sunday program began with the Worship Service, which was followed by the Kirking o' the Tartan. Then all the Clan Societies joined in the Parade of Tartans where we had the apportunity to display our banner before the guests of honour.

The afternoon saw the continuation of the athletic events including the running of the Kilted Mile and the Tug-o'-War. This was also the time when we were able to see and visit with many old friends who we hadn't seen since the last gathering.

With the evening, came the time to strike our banners, pack our equipment and bid our farewells while in the background we could hear the strains of the pipes playing... "Will ye no come back again"... to which we must say, YES, we will come back again!

THE SEPTS OF CLAN BUCHANAN

There is a chapter in Frank Adams' "Clans, Septs, and Regiments of the Scottish Highlands", entitled "The Septs of the Scottish Clans". The late Lord Lyon, when he edited the book, said that the word "Sept" is an "inexact" term. Actually the word "Sept" seems to have been first used by Sir Walter Scott and while he seems to imply that it is the Gaelic word for "Clan", this is difficult to follow, because it is common knowledge that "Clan" is from the Gaelic word "Clanna", which means family. Consequently the word "Sept" and its derivatives remains something of a mistery. The facts are that the old Clans were not divided into septs or any other sub-groups on the basis of surnames. By the time surnames came into use, the clan system had been long established.

The historical evidence leads to the belief that Malcolm Ceannmor (1057-1093) directed his chief subjects to adopt surnames from their territorial possessions. It seems that King Malcolm III was influenced by his Saxon bride, Queen Margaret, who had a great civilizing influence on the whole of Scotland. As the Nobles adopted surnames, so then did the common people. The source of the names were generally (a) Territorial or Local (Buchanan is a territorial name) (b) Patronymic (this was the cumbersome system wherby the child was known as the "son of" so and so, e.g., John, Son of James of Buchanan. This also led to use of the affectionate or pet diminutives of proper names such as "Watson" or "Richardson") (c) Official and Trade name. (These Scottish surnames were derived from the office or trade of their first bearers, e.g., "Harper", who was the Chiefs' Harp Player). Other sources included nick-names and of course, Christian names.

The origin of clan sept names are traced to a number of causes such as (1) those of the blood of the clan who in order that they might be better distinguished from their namesakes, adopted a name which would so identify them; (2) the names of those related to the Chief by marriage - though not a blood relative of his clan; (3) those who, though unconnected by blood with the clan had become bound to it by bonds of man rent; and (4) clan names which for one reason or another became Anglicized. So we can see that for these reasons the Clan Buchanan recognizes almost 100 different names as being Septs of the clan.

It should be pointed out, however, that a number of names can be grouped together because the names are either synonymous or affiliated. In this article we shall deal with the Sept, MAC COLMAN. This grouping includes:

Colman, MacColman, Mccalman, MacCalmont, Dove, Dow, Murchie, Murchison, MacMurchie, MacMaster, Masters, Masterson, Rusk, Ruskin

As you can see we are able to group fourteen names under the single heading of MacColman.

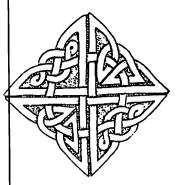

The ancestors of the MacColmans, according to Buchanan of Auchmar, was Colman, third son to Anselan, third of the name and Seventh Laird of Buchanan. He further indicates that Colman was the brother of Gilbert who was the first Laird to assume the surname of Buchanan. Colman was an ordinary Christian name which was in common use in Scotland. This Colmans' son migrated to Argylshire during the reign of Alexander III settling near Glen Lonan. From this descendant of Colman evolved the MacCalmans who supplied a tannery which was located in this area with bark for use in tanning the leather. From the nature of their work they acquired the Gaelic name NA RUSGAIN - the Ruskins - which comes from rusg (peel or bark). Thus, they lost their patronymic clan name to their trade name.

Another of Colmans descendents migrated to Kintail, settling on the Earl of Seaforths' land, this man's name was Murcho MacColman and from him we have the names Murchison and MacMurchie. Some of Murchos' descendants were known by the name of MacAmhaisdir from which derives MacMaster, Masters and Masterson. It is suggested that their progenitor was a Minister, a Master of Arts.

The names Dove and Dow are anglicizations of the name Calman and appear to have neen adopted by descendants of Colman who emigrated into the Lowlands.

In the next issue we will review another block of the Sept names.

THE BUCHANANS IN THE CIVIL WAR

Every family in America felt the Civil War; so, too, the various Buchanans went to war in 1861. Some fought for the Union, some for the Confederacy. Buchanans were wounded and killed in action; others lived as heroes. One was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, another died in Andersonville. In some individual Buchanan families, brothers went to war against each other. As with all other families, the Buchanans played their part in history.

This three part article will examine those Buchanans who are listed in the Offical Records of the Union and Confederate armies and navies. It is true that other Buchanans were involved in the war, but not having regimental histories for every unit, the author is limiting the immediate study to the 50 Buchanans whose role was important enough to be listed in the official communiques.

PART I: BUCHANANS IN THE UNION ARMY

The leading clan member on the Union side of the Civil War was ROBERT CHRISTIE BUCHANAN, a career soldier who had been fighting Indians several years before the war broke out. At the outbreak of fighting, he was assigned to Fort Dalles in Oregon, ordered to San Francisco, then sent to New York with the 9th United States Infantry in November of 1861.

Combat command came the next spring in the Seven Days Battles, where he led the 3rd, 4th, 12th, and 14th U.S. Infantry Regiments through that week of fighting. At Mechanicsville, his men drove back the Confederates and held their ground against repeated attacks. Further actions ensued for the units at Cold Harbor and White Oak Swamp. Then on the last day of the battles, July I, 1862, Buchanan and his men formed the rear guard of the Union Army and successfully held back the Confederates at Malvern Hill.

Later that summer, at the 2nd Battle of Bull Run, Buchanan's brigade retired under heavy artillery fire, but his regular troops continued an orderly withdrawal despite the crumbling of the units around them. In the Maryland campaign that fall, the brigade guarded the massed batteries of the Union Forces, and in December, at Fredericksburg, Buchanan's men led the Union forces across the Rapahannock on the 13th, then held the advanced line near the stone wall for 24 hours while the rest of the Union Army was being mauled.

The year 1863 saw Buchanan assigned assistant Provost Marshall General duty in New Jersey, serving as a superintendent of recruiting volunteers in New Jersey. The next year, as a full Colonel, he commanded the 1st U.S. Infantry in New Orleans, the post he held for the duration of the war.

Lieutenant A.S. BUCHANAN served on the staff of Brigadier General Jerome L. Sullivan of the Western Armys. In the records he is seen in that position in 1862 during both the battles at Iuka and Corinth.

Private ANDREW J. BUCHANAN of the 15th Pennsylvania Cavalry, Company E, is listed in the records twice. He was cited first for his participation in the Battle of Mufreesboro, Tennessee; then, in December 1862, he is listed as one who obeyed orders to move to the front during a mutiny of his regiment. In the latter case he is listed as paroled, indicating the possibility of his having been captured and exchanged.

Commended for bravery, Corporal ALEXANDER BUCHANAN of Company C, 30th Ohio Regiment, saved his regimental colors at Antietam after the color bearer had become a casualty.

EVEN BUCHANAN, being a commissary general, was listed several times in the records. As a Captain, he was listed as commissary of subsistence of volunteers in May 1862 and again in September at Antietam. Two years later, he is mentioned in the same postition with the 6th Army Corps. The Captain met his unfortunate death on September 30, 1864, when a party of men from Charleston, Virginia, ambushed him.

Sergeant EZRA B. BUCHANAN of the 79th Indiana Volunteers found himself in command of the escort for Brigadier General Samuel Beatty at the battle of Chickamauga. Commenting on the escort, Beatty said that they "carried themselves bravely and accompanied me in the thickest of battle."

The highest decoration possible went to Private GEORGE A. BUCHANAN of the 148th New York Infantry. Commended for gallantry in action at Chaffin's Farm near Richmond, Virginia, his Congressional Medal of Honor was awarded on September 29, 1864. Tragically, the recipient died of his wounds after the recommendation for the medal was made.

Not much is written about Lieutenant GEORGE H. BUCHANAN who commanded Company B of the 15th Iowa at Vicksburg.

HORACE BUCHANAN, serving as the Adjutant of the 24th Wisconsin Infantry Regiment served in the Army of the West. During the Atlanta campaign in 1864, he was severely wounded, presumably ending his war career.

An Ohio surgeon named J.G. BUCHANAN entered the service with the 125th Ohio about the middle of the war. Serving in the West he was present at the battle of Chickamauga. Another J.G. BUCHANAN, this one from Illinois, served in the West with Company B of the 97th Illinois, which he commanded at the battle of Vicksburg.

JACOB S. BUCHANAN from Indiana rose to the position of Commanding Officer of the 3rd Indiana Cavalry in October 1862. Such command evolved on him when his commanding Colonel became ill, leaving the unit in his hands.

Two JOHN BUCHANAN'S served in the United States Army during the war. One, serving with Mundy's Cavalry as a Captain, was complimented for his action at Perkins Mill on December 28, 1862. The other, Lieutenant JOHN BUCHANAN of the 28th Iowa Infantry lost his arm at the battle of Port Gibson, or Champion's Hill, Mississippi in May 1863 and he died shortly thereafter of his wounds.

Two ROBERT BUCHANAN'S also served in the Union Army, one as an engineer, the other with Missouri troops. The first, ROBERT C. BUCHANAN, was cited for his invention of light frames and double canvas paulins for making pontoons. It was said that he could throw a pontoon bridge together faster and better than any other engineer in the service. The second ROBERT BUCHANAN rose through the ranks with the 7th Missouri (Union), ranked as a Captain in the battles for Raymond and Vicksburg, Mississippi in 1863 and as a Lieutenant Colonel at Memphis in 1864. Captured by General Lyon the day after he arrived at Smithland, Missouri, in 1864, Buchanan was paroled

Among the casualties of the Buchanan Name was that of Lieutenant THOMAS B. BUCHANAN of the 7th Kentucky Infantry (Union) who died of wounds received at the battle of Vicksburg in 1863.

W. JESSE BUCHANAN appears twice in the records, both times in command positions. In the first, he is mentioned as the Adjutant of the 3rd Michigan Cavalry and a company commander at the Battle of Iuka. He is mentioned again in 1865 when he was made Assistant Adjutant General for Major General J.J. Reynolds, by the latter's orders, on March 7, 1865.

Another person appointed to a high position at the end of the war was Assistant Surgeon WILLIAM F. BUCHANAN. On May 2, 1865, Buchanan, who was well-known for his skills, was appointed the Assistant Medical Director for the Department of the South.

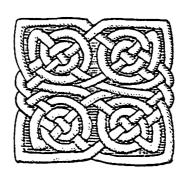

Not so much is known about WILLIAM B. BUCHANAN who is noted as a 2nd Lieutenant in 1863 when he was sent as a prisoner to Richmond. One other WILLIAM C. BUCHANAN served as the Adjutant of the 1st Missouri Militia Regiment.

These were the BUCHANANS of the Union Army that are noted in the Official Records.

There is much essential work to be done to the fabric of these hallowed buildings and, furthermore, there is a vital need to build up a maintenance fund for the future. All these requirements are further explained in a brochure available from the committee.

Accordingly, with the Patrons of this Appeal, I earnestly seek your participation and financial support in bringing these very worthwhile purposes to a successful conclusion as soon as possible.

HAROLD'S HERALDIC CORNER

What is the meaning of the term "ESQUIRE"?

Anyone who obtains a grant of arms is automatically created an ESQUIRE since this term occurs in the grant. Originally an ESQUIRE was the follower of a Knight, one who himself aspired to wear the gilded spurs. Gradually, the term came to be applied to persons who were of gentle birth and who were of the class from which the Knights were made. In the course of time, elaborate rules were framed to define the classes of persons who could be termed ESQUIRE. These rules still exist but have become almost obsolete owing to the universally popular use of ESQUIRE on commercial communications.

What is the meaning of the Scottish expression "OF THAT ILK"?

It is a term used to designate the Laird of an estate when the name of the estate and the surname of the family are identical. This is a fairly frequent occurrence with the very old recorded families. For example the Laird of Buchanan was known as BUCHANAN OF THAT ILK.

APPOINTMENT WITH DESTINY

Duncan Campbell, Laird of Inverawe Castle answered the door on a rain drenched night to see a fugitive from justice seeking a warm meal, dry clothes and protection from the law. He explained that he had killed a man in a fair fight and begged Duncan Campbell to hide him from the authorities. Duncan agreed to do so and led the man to a cave on his lands and instructed him to hide there. That night as Duncan was preparing to retire, he was confronted by the ghost of his cousin who said, "Shield not my murderer, Duncan" and left as mysteriously as it had appeared. Duncan dismissed this as a hallucination.

The next night a repetition of the previous event occurred, this time the spirit said, "Turn my murderer over to the authorities, or execute him yourself, or else!" The next morning Duncan went to the cave with the intent of turning the murderer over to the authorities only to find that the fugitive had fled, and there in the cave reappeared the ghost of his cousin saying, "We shall meet again, cousin, at Ticonderoga." For years Duncan asked everyone he met about a place called Ticonderoga, but to no avail.

Many years later the 42nd Regiment of the famed Black Watch (of which Duncan Campbell was Commanding Officer) was sent to the new world to fight against the French in the French & Indian Wars, their objective was to take a fort known as Fort Carillion. As they approached the fort, Duncan learned the Indian name for Fort Carillion was "TICONDEROGA". That night as Duncan made ready for bed the ghost of his cousin appeared and told him that his doom was near. The next day the British forces captured Ticonderoga, but Duncan was wounded and died during the night...

THE YEAR OF THE SCOT

The International Gathering Scotland 1981 will open with an International Burns Supper in January and will close with an International Saint Andrew's Day Dinner in November. From Friday, May 22, until Saturday, May 30, it will be based in Edinburgh. From June 1 to June 6 the visitors will disperse to every corner of Scotland for further reunions throughout clan, family, and home territories. In early July the Inverness Games will take place, with exhibitions and a "village" of Clan Tents round the field.

Overseas visitors will be given opportunites to share the industrial, commerical and cultural achievements of 20th century Scotland.

The underlying success of the 1977 International Gathering stemmed from the family atmosphere of the Ceilidhs, dinners and dances. The international Gathering Scotland 1981 will be based mainly on supporting what the appropriate organizations propose by way of functions for their visitors.

Although the central fortnight will make a strong appeal there will be visitors for whom the attraction will be the annual and ongoing events taking place elsewhere at other times.

The full programme will, in due course, carry details of the activities from May 22 to June 6, but will also provide a guide to other activities throughout Scotland during the whole of the season.

The International Gathering Scotland 1977 has been followed by the International Gathering, Nova Scotia, 1979, to be opened on June 28 by H.M. the Queen Mother and covering a six-week period to August 12. It is hoped that this will be the forerunner of many such International Gatherings organized in response to the growing wish of overseas Scots to build on their heritage.

The International Gathering now under planning, with its broader concept of extending the scope to make 1981 the Year of the Scot, is a further stage in using established ethnic links to strengthen international friendship.

International Burns Supper - January
The industrial, commercial and cultural achievements of 20th century Scotland

THE PIPERS AND DANCERS CORNER

A number of members have inquired as to the activities in which our pipers are performing, other than the usual competitions, and I'm pleased to give you a report on ROB LYNN of Wilmington, Delaware.

On December 31, 1978, Rob had the honor of piping for the "Scots Confession Service" which was held at the Red Clay Creek Presbyterian Church in Wilmington. This is a rather unusual service. The Scots Confession was written during the protestant reformation it reflects the fervor of that period in the Church's history. The banner used in the confession features the Celtic Cross and the Hamilton Tartan in honor of the first Scottish martyr. Emblazoned on the banner is a ship which symbolizes Gods' presence, and the sword of the Spirit which represents Gods' word. It is a most impressive service.

In May, 1979 Rob was asked to perform as the piper in the Mt. Pleasant High School production of "Brigadoon". Rob reports that he thoroughly enjoyed the experience. Then in June 1979 he and another of our pipers, Dan DeBuchananne, piped the graduating class of McKean High School in and out of the graduation exercises. This is a tradition that McKean High School has and Rob has been piping here for several years.

Rob didn't make it to Grandfather Mountain this year because he was traveling in Scotland, England, Belgium, and Germany during the summer. He took his pipes and kilt with him so I'm sure that he did our tartan proud wherever he traveled.

If you find that an incorrect address is listed (and not just a typographical error) please notify either the membership secretary or the editor of THE BANNER ... or both. We both need to know.

I do not plan to redo this list anytime soon; however, I will make additions to it periodically which will reach you via THE BANNER. It is my hope that you will take pride in all of the members of our society, remembering that we are barely ten years old. And you may find new friends among your kinsmen listed above.

Since no list remains accurate for long, I wish to make the following additions to the list of LIFE members which was published in the Summer issue of THE BANNER:

Mr. & Mrs. Robert J. Bell, 3027 W. Viewmont Way, W., Seattle, WA 98199 Mr. Bell is the son of Mrs. Beulah Bell of Kingsville, Texas.

Dr. & Mrs. John K. Youel, Jr., Drawer D, Earlysville, VA. 22936 Dr. Youel is the son of Ken Youel, one of our LIFE members.

If you have not found your name included in these lists it may mean that you have not renewed your membership for the year 1979-1980. It would help your Society so much if you would do this promptly. It is costly and time-consuming to have to send out past due notices individually. Your cooperation will be greatly appreciated by the Executive Committee

Good News!! Kathryn Buchanan, LIFE member, is now Mrs. Glen R. Hogan at the same address listed.
