GLENN, GEORGE WASHINGTON (Glynn) (1781–1866). Son of DAVID GLYNN (1745?–1784).

Physician and planter of Newberry District, George Washington Glenn was born 6 June 1781, the son of Colonel DAVID GLYNN and Rosannah Glynn (1753–1825). Glenn received his primary education at Mount Bethel Academy operated by Elisha Hammond and Josiah P. Smith and attended South Carolina College, where he was a member of the Euphradian Society. He graduated with an A.B. in 1807. The source of his medical education is not known. In 1820 Glenn owned fifteen slaves in Newberry District. The 1830 census recorded that he owned thirty-eight slaves and by 1840 had increased his slaveholding to forty-seven slaves. Glenn retired from his medical practice prior to 1850. He called himself a farmer in 1850 when he owned thirty-six slaves and real estate valued at $10,000. According to the 1860 census he owned real estate valued at $7,600 and his personalty, including thirty-two slaves, was worth $183,750.

George Washington Glenn represented Newberry District in the Twenty-second (1816–1817) and Twenty-seventh (1826–1828) General Assemblies. While a member he served on the committees on free schools (1816–1817), education (1826–1828), and medical accounts (1826–1828). Other public offices Glenn held were: member (1817) of the licensing board of physicians at Columbia; commissioner to approve public securities (1841, 1854, 1857); free school commissioner (1834, 1843) in Newberry District; and trustee of Aveleigh Presbyterian Church, Newberry (1849). Glenn represented Newberry District at the Nullification Convention where he voted for and signed the Ordinance of Nullification (1832). He later represented his district at the Southern Rights Convention (1851).

LOGAN, JOHN (1793?–1866). Brother-in-law of JAMES AUGUSTUS BLACK (1793–1848).

Physician and planter of Greenwood, South Carolina, Dr. John Logan was born circa 1793 in Abbeville District, the son of Revolutionary War veteran Colonel John Logan and Rachel Perry, daughter of Josiah Perry. He practiced medicine in Greenwood, South Carolina, and was a substantial planter in Abbeville District. In the 1830 census Logan reported that he owned nineteen slaves. By 1840 the number of his slaves had grown to twenty-two and in 1850 he owned thirty-three slaves. In that year he called himself a physician and his real estate was valued at $10,000. A decade later Logan had retired from his medical practice and called himself a farmer by profession. In 1860 his real estate was worth $15,000 and his personalty, including thirty-seven slaves, was worth $39,110.

Dr. John Logan represented Abbeville District for one term in the Twenty-third (1818–1819) General Assembly, where he was a member of the committee of claims (1818–1819). Logan was a trustee of the John De La Howe estate (1831) and represented Abbeville District at the Nullification Convention where he voted for and signed the Ordinance of Nullification (1832).

Logan was twice married. His first wife was Susan Winter Wilson (1799–1827). She died 28 January 1827 survived by her husband and two children, John Henry Logan (1822–1885; m. Eliza C. Calhoun); and Sarah C. Logan (b. 1827; m. Reverend John McLees). On 22 January 1839 John Logan wed Rebecca M. Chapman, daughter of G. Chapman of Columbia. They were the parents of Mary S. Logan (b. 1840?); Ellen S. Logan (b. 1845?); and Sarah E. Logan (b. 1849?). John Logan died 29 August 1866. In his will he disposed of his town lot in Greenwood and his plantation on Coronaca Creek. Among his other property was $6,000 worth of stock in the King's Mountain
