Passengers on the Rev. Martin Ships

The following tables are based on on the Council Journal. The names are spelled as they were in the Council Journal, no attempt was made to correct or interpret misspellings. The location column is the modern day county that the land was probably located in, based on the description in the land surveys. Since the major distinguishing geographic feature in these land surveys was the river, stream or creek that the land was located on, in this table the modern county that that stream goes though is listed. This means that in many cases multiple counties are listed since the streams often cross through more than one county. In some cases no county is given, generally because the stream identified in the survey cannot be identified today, probably because the name has changed since 1772. These tables are derived from Stephenson¹

1. The first part of the document is a letter from the President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 1, 1861. It is a very important document, as it sets out the President's policy for the new year. The President states that he is pleased to see the Congress assembled, and that he is confident that the country is in a state of peace and prosperity. He also mentions that he has received a letter from the Secretary of the Navy, dated December 28, 1860, in which the Secretary states that the Navy is in a state of readiness to defend the country. The President concludes the letter by stating that he is confident that the Congress will be able to carry out its duties in a manner that will be satisfactory to the people.

2. The second part of the document is a letter from the Secretary of the Navy to the President, dated December 28, 1860. It is a very important document, as it sets out the Secretary's policy for the new year. The Secretary states that he is pleased to see the President, and that he is confident that the Navy is in a state of readiness to defend the country. He also mentions that he has received a letter from the Secretary of the War, dated December 28, 1860, in which the Secretary states that the War Department is in a state of readiness to defend the country. The Secretary concludes the letter by stating that he is confident that the President will be able to carry out his duties in a manner that will be satisfactory to the people.

3. The third part of the document is a letter from the Secretary of the War to the President, dated December 28, 1860.
