

FIRST GENERATION

1. Alexander DOUGLASS immigrated about 1790 to from Ballymena, Ireland. He was born in County Antrim, Ireland.¹ He was buried in Old Stone Manse Presbyterian Church Cemetery, 6 miles North of Winnsboro, Fairfield County, SC.² THE DOUGLAS HEART (DESCRIPTION)
Douglas, known for his cautious and sensible methods in battle, for once forgot his military principles. He allowed himself to be enticed into a reckless pursuit of a number of fleeing Moors. He had been deceived by a tactic perfected by the Moors and cut off with three of his friends from the main Chinese army. He was surrounded by the enemy who turned back from their apparent flight. Tradition has it that Douglas, realizing that he could not escape, took Bruce's heart from the casket about his neck and flung it ahead of him into the midst of the Moors, crying, "Forward, brave heart, as ever thus were wont to do, and Douglas will follow thee or die." That same tradition tells us that when Douglas' body was found after the battle by his grieving men, it was ringed by Moors. Douglas had died in battle fighting with the fierce courage he had always displayed in the service of Robert Bruce. Bruce's heart was brought back to Scotland by William Keith of Galston for burial in Melrose Abbey. Douglas' bones, too, were returned to Scotland by William Keith and placed in the church of St. Bride in Doulgasdale. To this day, the motto of the Douglas family, to which many belong, is "Forward" and evocation of that cry by which the most celebrated bearer of this name guaranteed his lasting fame. This story, like Drumlanrig Castle, has a beauty all its own. Those visitors, who delight in the story as they do in the Castle, are convinced that what they have heard is the truth because it is a part of the history, which Drumlanrig so admirably represents.

Coat of Arms Description:

"There are three silver stars on a blue chief, the heart of Bruce and later the heart was royally crowned by the Imperial Crown. Sliver, a human heart gules, ensigned with an imperial crown of gold, on a chief of azure and three molets argent." [also from the Highlander Magazine]

Douglas is derived from the Gaelic, dubh meaning black and glas meaning water. It is therefore thought that the first ones to claim this last name lived by a pond or stream that looked like black water. The first recorded person using this name was Wiliam de Duglas. There have been three distinct lines of Douglas lineage from all Douglas' have their origins. There are the Blac Douglas clan--the oldest. Douglass of Douglassdale is from here. The people of this clan were illustrious in the war of independence with England. Morton Branch--closely

 It Is Beautiful to Live

It is beautiful to live as he lived, to bless mankind.
 Scattering gems of holy thought from his treasure laden mind;
 Giving kindly words and actions, the weary ones to cheer,
 To many o'er the wide earth, his name will e'er be dear.
 It is beautiful to die, as he died, with angels near,
 And glimpses of bright of heaven dawning on his vision clear,
 Leaving earthly home with assurances of a better home on high,
 With the knowledge of a well spent life, it is beautiful to die.
