

ANDREW FEASTER

The Feasters (Phister) came to America from the Canton of Berne, Switzerland, and settled in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. It was here that Andrew Feaster, son of Peter Feaster, was married. The name of his first wife is unknown. His second marriage was to a widow, Margaret Frey Cooper, who had two children by a previous marriage, Adam and Eve Cooper.

The story of Peter Feaster's philosophy and faith in his Maker is traditional in the Feaster family. When plans and preparations were being made for the move from Pennsylvania to new lands, one of the chief concerns was for Peter Feaster. He was advanced in years and in failing health. It was felt that he would not be able to withstand the rigors of travel. But, he steadfastly refused to be left behind or have the plans postponed on his account, saying that should he die he would be as near to God in one place as another. As was feared, he died enroute, and was laid to rest somewhere in Virginia.

Andrew Feaster continued his trek southward and settled in the northern part of western Fairfield County, S. C., giving his name to that area that is still known as Feasterville.

He was an advocate of the Dunkard faith. German Baptists, or Brethren, as they were usually called, held to trine immersion with a kneeling position and forward bending of the body in the rite of baptism, which earned them their nickname.

Andrew Feaster was credited with having the power to conjure, or "using" as attested to by an excerpt from an article written by William Ederington in 1880. "Being at leisure, I thought I would add something in regard to four or five Tunkers who were amongst the first settlers on Beaver Creek that I saw when a boy, viz: Andrew Feaster, Sr., Adam Cooper, William and Isiah Mobley, and Matthew Hoosh, a Hessian. The first four wore long beards and I think the last did also. These were called Dunkards and were the only men seen with unshaven faces then, and forty years afterward. This denomination is called in history, German Baptists. Andrew Feaster, Sr. was a native of Switzerland and removed here from Pennsylvania, as I was informed by his great-grandson.

I rode behind my mother about the year 1811 to Old Daddie Feaster's a distance of six miles, her purpose being to get him to cure one of her arms which was paralyzed. On riding up to the house gate my mother hallowed, and the first object that attracted my notice was the big white hogs, the next the old man's long white beard, the first I had ever seen. We alighted and were invited into the house by the good old man. I kept my eyes on him until we were seated in a chair when a long rope attracted my attention...this was used for the purpose of drawing up bags of flour into the loft. (After dinner), my mother was seated in a homemade chair. Exposing her bare arms to view, the old man knelt at her side, rubbing her arm from the hand to the shoulder and muttering unheard of language to me, all the time. This was called "using" for the purpose of curing maladies such as felons, wens, cancers, warts. Whether "using" cured the arm or not, or the faith she reposed in the old man's mystic art, or time, I know not, but it was after a short time well as before."

The children of Andrew Feaster were: Martha, a daughter by his first wife, and Andrew, Jacob, John, Susan, Alice, and Margaret, children of his second wife, Margaret Frey Cooper.

Andrew Feaster, Jr. died a tragic death while still in the prime of his life. His brother-in-law, Ezekiel Wooley, a constable, had a warrant for the arrest of Shadrack Jacobs. As the two approached the vicinity of Jacobs house Feaster was killed by a rifle shot, fired by Jacobs.

Jacobs fled to Georgia and some 20 years elapsed before he was returned to Fairfield County to be tried. Testimony at the trial brought out the fact that Andrew Feaster was riding Wooley's horse. The shooting occurred at dusk, and Jacobs had mistaken Feaster for the constable. For this unwarranted deed Shadrack Jacobs was sentenced to death and was hanged by Sheriff Moore in 1829.

Jacob Feaster married Margaret Kennemore and died without issue. They are buried near their old homesite, in unmarked graves.

John Feaster wed Drusilla Mobley, daughter of Samuel and Mary Wagner Mobley, granddaughter of the pioneers, Hans Wagner and Edward Mobley. John Feaster built a two story frame house, where he lived until his death in 1848. This house was purported to have had the first glass windows north of Beaver Creek. He carried on extensive farming operations and amassed a vast estate. He is noted for having built the Feasterville Male and Female Academy and a dormitory, (or Boarding House, as it has always been called) for students attending the school from other areas.

He donated the land for the Liberty Universalist Church. Ederington's "History of Fairfield" states, "Liberty Church was built by those of the Universalist faith, and it was intended as its name indicates for the use of any and every denomination that was disposed to worship in it. There were others who contributed to the building besides Universalists."

Children of John and Drusilla Feaster:

Jacob md. Isabelle Coleman
 Andrew md. Mary Norris
 Savilla md. Robert Gregg Cameron
 Susan md. Robert F. Coleman
 Mary md. Henry Jonathan Coleman
