John H. Gibson, Coroner For 29 Years, Dies In Columbia Jan. 19

John Hollis Gibson, 76, coroner of Fairfield county for more than 29 years, died Saturday evening at 7 p. m., in the Columbia hospital, after an extended illness of many months.

Mr. Gibson was born in the Biddle section of Fairfield and had spent virtually his entire life here. In December, 1916, he succeeded the late Thomas F. Smith as county coroner and had served continuously in this office since that date.

He was a Mason and had recently been issued a life membership in this organization, and was a member of the Baptist church.

Mr. Gibson is survived by one daughter, Mrs. C. McMullan of Columbia; four grandchildren, William, Lewis and Paul Dennis and James John Chappel, all of Columbia; and four great-grandchildren.

Funeral services, which were in the charge of the Masons, were held from the First Baptist church Winnsboro, at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon.
