A Chronicle of Hayneville
an Alabama Black Belt Village

1820 – 1900

By
MILDRED BREWER RUSSELL

Prominent among the first settlers at Benton were the Hardys, Walkers, Thurbers, Blackmans, Mays, Greenwoods, Covingtons, Robinsons and Canteys.

Whitehall, first called Sandtown, was settled by John and David Steele who came from Virginia in 1819. The near-by hamlet of St. Clair was in earlier days known as Frank's.

Graves' Landing on the Alabama river was named for William Graves whose daughter, Dorothy, married Captain Bird Fitzpatrick.

Pleasant Hill was first called Fort Rascal by a German trader who was angered by certain proclivities of his Indian customers.

Before 1830, a number of families, more or less related, and many Virginia-born, settled in the eastern part of the county. Among these were the Graves, Masons, Jeters, Harrisons, Walkers, Harrisers, Gilmers, Chappells, Hudsons, Powells, McReas, Friersons, Daniels, Huffs, Porters, Huffmans, Campbells, the Bird Smiths, Davises, Deans, Grants, Mothersheds and Lewises. ←

Hayneville's First Settlers

Hayneville, one of the youngest settlements in the county, was founded in 1820. Three years before, Allen B. Powell, a Georgian, purchased land east of the present site of the village, and Lawrence Rambo from South Carolina, lands on the north. Job Givhan of Colleton District, South Carolina, owned most of the land on which the village was later located. The first settlers came from Edgefield, Abbeville and Colleton Districts, South Carolina. A little later many came from the southerly counties of North Carolina and from eastern Georgia. Virginia gave to Lowndes her bluest blood.

Few names of Hayneville's pioneers survive. The Givhans, Crenshaws, Hardys, Whipples, Montgomerys, Woods, Tuggles, Applebys, Cunninghams, Franklins, Dunns, Wades, Orgain and Howell Tatum, Enoch Spruill Phelps, his son Jones, and his Roberts kinsmen, Carrs, Carruthers, Patterson, Rogers, Batchelors, Wasdens, Whites, Nunns and Fishers were among the first to locate on the swamp-surrounded sandbank on which the village was founded.
