Salutes the First Harison Family Reunion Committee*

The off springs of Peter and Harriet Harrison are grateful to these three Harrison cousins who worked as a committee of three to plan and facilitate the first reunion in 1977.

In a hotel room in Las Vegas, Nevada in the summer of 1976, Irene Harrison Singleton shared her dream with two sisters Ruth and Janet, Brother-in-law Cephus, and her son John. Irene was enthusiastic to bring her extended family together after watching "Roots" on television. Upon returning to South Carolina, she went immediately to sister Elizabeth's (Fat) house and proclaimed she wanted to have a family reunion but needed a place to have it. Fat offered her house and yard to host the first reunion. The two of them hooked up with cousin Aileen and thereby formed the first Harrison Family Planning Committee. Irene and Aileen served as Co-Chairs and Fat agreed to be the treasurer.

Thanks to these three courageous Harrisons, Irene's dream became a reality and the first family reunion was enjoyed by about 280 Harrisons in Fat's yard in Blythewood, South Carolina in 1977. Aileen's husband Walter was instrumental in arranging the printing for the first book. The first letter inviting the Harrison's to come together was drafted by Irene's son John. There was no seed money, so caring relatives chipped in to provide initial postage.

We are grateful to Irene, Aileen and Fat for providing a solid foundation for a mighty family to know and grow together.

A Short Historical Sketch of the Life and Times of Peter and Harriet Edmunds Harrison

Sharon C. Avery*

In April of 1865, Peter and Harriet Harrison, like hundreds of other slaves in Fairfield County were free to begin new lives. Already the parents of five children, Reuben, Mary Ann, Richard, Robert and Letta, they decided to remain in Fairfield County. Much of the property in the county, both buildings and crops, had been destroyed earlier in the year as the Union troops moved north from Columbia to Charlotte. Little food remained in the county; times were exceedingly difficult for all. The situation was well expressed by a former slave, Violet Guntharpe, from the area of Dutchman's Creek in the 1930's.

"Honey us wasn't ready for de big change dat come! Us had no education, no land, no mule, no cow, not a pig, nor a chicken, to set up housekeeping. De birds had nests in de air, de foxes had holes in de ground, and de fishes had beds under de great falls, but us colored folks was left widout any place to lay our heads . . . Lots of de chillun die, as did de old folks, while de rest of us scour de woods for hickory nuts, acorns, cane roots, and artichokes . . . (with spring) plums, mulberries, and blackberries come, and de shad come up de Catawba River."

Some black families left the county with the northern army, many others migrated west and north in the ensuing years in search of greater opportunities. Peter and Harriet became tenant farmers or sharecroppers, seeking out a meagre living from the soil. Unfortunately for county residents, crops were poor between 1865 and 1867. Not even the weather would cooperate with the farmers, two years of statewide drought were followed by too much rain. The difficulties of the farmers was compounded by the lack of horses, mules and oxen for agricultural work. Hunger was prevalent in the county. In 1867, Peter Harrison paid a poll tax of $2.00. Despite a dry spring, the 1868 county crops were good.

By 1870 the family's circumstances had improved somewhat. In that year the federal agricultural census showed Peter Harrison owning $10 worth of farm machinery, a horse, a milk cow, oxen, and other farm animals. The only crop produced by Harriet and Peter according to the census was Indian corn. By 1870 the family had increased to seven children with the arrival of two more sons, Frank and John. In addition, Peter's mother Rose, was listed as living with the family.

January 1, 1874 was a red letter day for the Harrison family. Peter purchased for $1000 a farm consisting of "200 acres more or less" in Township #5 from Edward P. Mobley. When his brother-in-law, Henry Harrison, acquired land a short time later he traded fifteen bales of cotton for the land. Peter and Harriet and the children must have made a bumper crop of corn, or more likely cotton, to have raised such a large sum of money.

Hard work and industry continued to pay off for Harriet and Peter. The 1880 federal agricultural census showed Peter tilling 58 acres of land with 170 acres in woodlands and producing 150 bushels of Indian corn, 17 bales of cotton, 10 bushels of sweet potatoes and 10 gallons of molasses. The family by then also owned two horses, one mule, two milk cows, three other cows, three hogs, and 10 chickens. As well as providing milk for the family, the cows produced 100 pounds of butter and the chickens laid 40 dozen eggs. The agricultural census valued their farm land and buildings at $600, their farming equipment at $20, livestock at $120, and estimated the value of their farm production at $950. In comparison with their neighbors, both black and white, Peter and Harriet were doing well.

Not only was their farm prospering, their family was continuing to grow also. Between 1873 and 1876 four children were added to family—two daughters, Louise and Sallie, and two sons, Hampton and Chamberlain.

In 1880, their oldest daughter, Mary Ann, and her husband, Frank Jackson, and four young children—Peter, Harriet, Mary and Nancy—lived in a neighboring house. At a slightly greater distance in the neighborhood lived their son, Reuben, and his wife Mary and three more grandchildren—Reese, Frossey and Thomas. Other family members also lived nearby; those identified from the 1880 census are Peter's three younger sisters—Caroline, Martha and Lucy Harrison. Caroline and her husband, Henry Harrison and seven children: Margaret, Minny, David, Henry, George, Sallie and Silla were neighbors of Harriet and Peter's. Henry and his mother, Margaret, had been slaves of David Harrison, a brother of Harriet and Peter's owner, John Harrison, Sr. David Harrison's will had requested that Margaret and her children be freed upon his death. Also in same township in 1880 resided Martha Harrison Adamson and her husband, Frank Adamson, five little Adamsons'—David, Henry, Janey, Tomy and Eliza. Frank and his parents, William and Lavinia Adamson, had been slaves of the Peay family. Years later, Frank indicated that his father selected the sur name of Adamson because when he first arrived from Africa he had been purchased by the Adamsons. Peter's third sister, Lucy married Julius Durham about 1870 and they lived in township #8 close enough for the Durhams and their children—John, Maggie, Boykin and Fannie—to remain a part of the Harrison family circle.

As today, births, weddings and other family get togethers were no doubt the high points of Peter and Harriet's lives. Government interviews with former slaves made during the 1930's about their lives after emancipation are packed with stories of courtships and weddings. Wedding ceremonies were frequently very elaborate. For example, one former Fairfield slave interviewed stated that he was married in the bride's home:

"We had a big wedding and she wore a white dress wid two frills on it. I wore a dove-colored suit and a high brim hat wid a small crown. I bought de hat for $7.00 jes' to marry in . . ."

Another former Fairfield slave recalled getting married at fifteen, in a blue worsted dress with a red balmoral over a white tucked petticoat. She wore white stockings with low quarter shoes and had sweet shrubs in her hair. Similar wedding festivities probably marked the marriages of Peter and Harriet's children, beginning with Mary Ann who married Frank Jackson by 1873.

Religion was an important part of the lives of most black families. Under slavery, blacks had not generally been allowed to establish their own churches. Some owners encouraged their slaves to attend their churches where they were required to sit in the back of the church or in the church balcony. Other slave owners made no provision for worship services for slaves.

After the war was over the former slaves built "brush arbors" to hold meetings in and held baptisms in the creeks. Creeks were dammed up just deep enough for baptizing. Several churches were established in the county shortly after the war including those of the Baptist, Presbyterian and African Methodist Episcopal denominations. Revivals were held that lasted several days.

Interviews with former slaves contain numerous statements of faith and the fervent belief that injustices would be righted in the hereafter. One former slave woman remembered that the white folks loved to hear her church choir sing, they said it was because "we can carry de song better." She didn't agree; she felt they sang better because they loved the Lord just a little bit more and what was in their mouths was in their hearts.

Peter and Harriet remained on their farm, planting and harvesting the crops and paying the taxes each year. He paid the property taxes for the last time on December 28, 1899 and died the following year. Harriet survived her husband by more than two decades, remaining on the farm with her daughter, Sallie, and son-in-law, the Reverend Prince J. Johnson. She died on October 7, 1921 at the age of 88 years. Both Harriet and Peter are buried in the cemetery of White Oak Baptist Church #1 near their beloved farm.

Peter and Harriet's farm of 203 acres of land remained in the Harrison family until it was sold by the estate in 1948.

Before the Civil War.

Prior to 1865, Peter and Harriet Harrison were both slaves of John Harrison, Sr. He was one of the largest slave owners in Fairfield County. In 1843 he was taxed on 223 slaves. His father, Reuben Harrison, had moved down from Virginia before the Revolution and acquired thousands of acres stretching from Ridgeway to Longtown. John Sr. was one of several large planters in the area who raced horses for sport.

The 1860 federal agricultural census gives a good description of the Harrison plantation where Harriet and Peter lived in 1860. In all the Harrison place contained almost 8000 acres which produced, 50 bushels of rye, 7000 bushels of corn, 1000 bushels of oats, 400 bales of cotton, 600 pounds of wool, 50 bushels of peas and beans, 15 bushels of Irish potatoes, 400 bushels of sweet potatoes, 6 tons of hay, and $50 worth of garden products. Other production included six gallons of wine, 1000 pounds of butter and $500 worth of homemade manufactures.

On a plantation of this size—there were undoubtedly a number of skilled craftsmen among the slaves such as weavers, mill wrights, wheelwrights, tanners and blacksmiths. Different skills and occupations often resulted in a class structure of slaves on the large plantations. In an interview in the 1930's, a former slave of Nicholas Peay, who lived at his large Melrose plantation site made the following observation:

Dere was just two classes of de white folks, buckra slave owners and poor white folks dat didn't own no slaves. Dere was more classes mongst de slaves. De first was de house servants. Dere was de butler, de maids, de nurses, . . . and de cooks. De nex' class was de carriage drivers and de gardeners, de carpenters, de barbers, and de stable men. Then come . . . de cow men . . . All dese have good houses and never have to work hard . . . then comes the cradles of the wheat, de threshers and de millers of de corn and de wheat, and de feeders of the cotton gin . . . (the lowest class was the common field (hands) . . .

Contemporary accounts reveal that these huge plantations often looked like small communities in appearance with houses in rows and streets wide enough for wagons to pass through. Most of the slave houses in Fairfield County were small frame structures, with fireplaces made of mud and sticks and all too frequently dirt floors. Housing conditions varied greatly from plantation to plantation. Parents, children and grandparents often shared a single house: sometimes aunts, uncles and cousins also lived in the same house, with barely enough room for everyone to stretch out at night. Reminiscing near the end of his life, one former slave fondly remembered his slave house:

"Us lived in a log house wid a little porch in front and de mornin' glory vines used to clumb 'bout it. When they bloom the bees would come hummin' and suck the honey out of the blue bells on de vine . . . dat was a pleasant memory . . ."

The size of John Harrison, Sr.'s plantation and his apparent wealth would generally imply that Peter and Harriet's housing should have been adequate on the plantation. Records do not indicate that this was the case. Law suits brought by Harrison's relatives complain that he was mismanaging their property, including slaves. They specifically charged that the living conditions of the slaves were unhealthy and that the slaves were "wasting away." In 1855, John Sr. admitted in a court answer filed that he had lost more than forty of his own slaves "in the recent past due to ill health." Hopefully the situation of the slaves improved after the court testimony.

Harriet Edmunds Harrison and her two oldest children had been purchased by John Harrison, Sr. for $1240. Harriet first shows up in 1835 as a small child valued at $75 in a slave inventory of the property of the Estate of Robert Edmunds of Richland District. Her mother appears to have been a slave named Mary. They were listed together on the slave inventory and they were both among the eleven slaves of Robert Edmunds transferred by his Estate to his daughter, Mary Edmunds, the wife of Richard B. Harrison. Mary died in 1847 and Richard shortly thereafter. Harriet and Mary were next transferred to their minor children, Mary Harrison and John Harrison, Jr. John Harrison, Sr. of Fairfield, was appointed by the Richland District, Court of Equity as their legal guardian and he took control of their slaves by 1851. He brought all eleven slaves to his plantation where they lived together with his slaves. Harriet and Peter probably met at this time at the Harrison plantation and may have married shortly thereafter. Most plantation owners encouraged their slaves to marry. They believed slaves would be less likely to run away and they wanted the slave women to produce as many babies as possible. Slave couples were often given small garden plots to cultivate.

Twan't no dressing up fer marring in slavery times; just say 'gwine to be a marriage tonight! and you see bout 40 or 50 folks to see it. If it be wa'melon time, dey had a big feast after de wedding. Old man preacher Tony would marry you fer nothing. De keep de wedding cake fer three weeks befor it was eat.

Many slaves married slaves from other nearby plantations. Visits were generally limited to one or two a week and passes had to be gotten from the owners for slaves to travel between farms. Sometimes the owners would work out a slave trade to bring husbands and wives together. These marriages were especially shaky as one family might move away and separate the couple forever.

Peter and Harriet were fortunate that when the Fairfield District, Court of Equity, ordered the sale of Harriet and the other slaves belonging to the two young Harrison children (Mary and John Harrison, Jr.) that she and her two small children were purchased at auction by John Harrison, Sr. thus keeping Peter and Harriet on the same plantation. The auction was held at the Fairfield County Court House. Mary, the slave thought to be Harriet's mother was purchased by Robert Edmunds, thus she returned to the Edmunds family.

Food on the plantations for slaves were generally ample but lacking in variety. They received what was called rations. This weekly dole of food usually consisted of bacon and fatback, meal, grits, peas and beans, 'lasses and 'tators. Their diet was supplemented with buttermilk and in the summer with fruit from the orchards and vegetables such as collards, turnips, okra, pumpkins and peanuts from the garden. One former slave remembered fishing in the river:

They fished with hooks and old-time canes. They had fish baskets, made of wooden splits, with an opening at the end like the wire baskets now used.

Those slaves who worked in the big house always got the best eatins'. The food was prepared in big wide chimneys located away from the mansion house by plantation cooks. There were iron rods run through the chimneys to hold pots, pans and kettles. Brick ovens were used to make molasses from sugar cane. Most of the slaves ate together at big long tables or trays set on planks. Iron spoons for eating and cooking utensils were produced at the blacksmith shop on the larger plantations.

During the summer the slaves wore homespun cotton and in the winter homespun wool. The Harrison plantation produced 400 pounds of wool in 1859. The cloth was dyed with a variety of dyes such as red dirt and mulberries for red, green walnuts hulls for green, maple tree bark for gray and bark from the walnut tree for brown. However, cloth dyed blue with indigo was much preferred. The children wore little during the summer months—boys were in their shirt-tails and girls in one piece homespun slips. One former slave felt it wasn't a hardship as "we didn't know and didn't care nothing 'bout a 'spectable 'pearance in those days. Another reasoned that there were just so many of us and so little to go around. Shoes for slaves, when they had them, sounded terribly uncomfortable. They were made of raw-hide leather which had to be soaked in warm water and greased with tallow. The soles, or bottoms, were made of wood.

Plantation hours were long, particularly for the hands working in the fields, some owners worked their slaves from dawn to dusk seven days a week. Others observed the sabbath. On rainy days when they couldn't work in the field they would perform other tasks such as spinning and weaving or shucking corn. Plantation life was tightly regulated and controlled.

Much research remains to be done to further identify the families of Peter and Harriet. All those interested in continuing research on the Harrison family history should contact reunion organizers. If there is sufficient interest, research will continue.

State of South Carolina

Office of the Governor

MARK SANFORD
GOVERNOR

POST OFFICE BOX 12267
COLUMBIA 29211

GREETINGS

On behalf of the people of South Carolina, welcome to the 16th Biannual Harrison Family Reunion.

While you gather to pay tribute to your ancestors, I hope you'll use this time to share experiences and celebrate your history of endurance, courage and faith. In today's world of spread out families and over-extended schedules, it is important to take the time to get together to honor the legacy of your ancestors and celebrate the heritage that will continue for generations to come Fellow South Carolinians join me in welcoming you to the Columbia area. Regardless of where you've traveled from, we hope you have a chance to enjoy the warm hospitality, fine food and natural beauty to be found in the Midlands and throughout the Palmetto State. Take care.

Sincerely,

August 2007

Greetings.

Welcome to the City of Columbia. I am delighted that the Harrison family has chosen Columbia as its bi-annual family reunion site. We are delighted to have been hosting your family reunion since 1985.

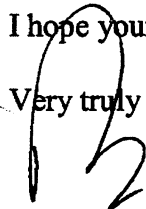

The reunion tradition itself is worth commenting upon. It is an exciting and honorable experience to assemble family members who seem more and more to scatter through our vast country and beyond. I hope there will be an abundance of reflection, affection and humor, along with a strengthening of bonds. Not only does it benefit elder participants, but hopefully, younger Harrison generations will be moved by the event and continue valuing family and such assemblages in the years to come. For the members of your family, I understand this is a long, rich and important tradition.

I also know many of you traveled from great distances and busy schedules to attend today and celebrate heritage. I admire your commitment to family and hope you will choose Columbia again as a destination.

I hope you enjoy your stay at the Marriott Hotel. I am certain you have many plans for this special weekend, but I hope you will also enjoy Columbia's many offerings. This city has a blend of beauty in its history and culture. Be sure to visit the Vista, Five Points, the Riverbanks Zoo, the State Museum or the Columbia Museum of Art.

I hope your family reunion gives you pause for old memories and time to make new ones.

Very truly yours,

Robert D. Coble
Mayor

*The South Carolina Committee
Salutes the First Harison Family Reunion Committee*

The off springs of Peter and Harriet Harrison are grateful to these three Harrison cousins who worked as a committee of three to plan and facilitate the first reunion in 1977.

In a hotel room in Las Vegas, Nevada in the summer of 1976, Irene Harrison Singleton shared her dream with two sisters Ruth and Janet, Brother-in-law Cephus, and her son John. Irene was enthusiastic to bring her extended family together after watching "Roots" on television. Upon returning to South Carolina, she went immediately to sister Elizabeth's (Fat) house and proclaimed she wanted to have a family reunion but needed a place to have it. Fat offered her house and yard to host the first reunion. The two of them hooked up with cousin Aileen and thereby formed the first Harrison Family Planning Committee. Irene and Aileen served as Co-Chairs and Fat agreed to be the treasurer.

Thanks to these three courageous Harrisons, Irene's dream became a reality and the first family reunion was enjoyed by about 280 Harrisons in Fat's yard in Blythewood, South Carolina in 1977. Aileen's husband Walter was instrumental in arranging the printing for the first book. The first letter inviting the Harrison's to come together was drafted by Irene's son John. There was no seed money, so caring relatives chipped in to provide initial postage.

We are grateful to Irene, Aileen and Fat for providing a solid foundation for a mighty family to know and grow together.

A Short Historical Sketch of the Life and Times of Peter and Harriet Edmunds Harrison

Sharon C. Avery*

In April of 1865, Peter and Harriet Harrison, like hundreds of other slaves in Fairfield County were free to begin new lives. Already the parents of five children, Reuben, Mary Ann, Richard, Robert and Letta, they decided to remain in Fairfield County. Much of the property in the county, both buildings and crops, had been destroyed earlier in the year as the Union troops moved north from Columbia to Charlotte. Little food remained in the county; times were exceedingly difficult for all. The situation was well expressed by a former slave, Violet Guntharpe, from the area of Dutchman's Creek in the 1930's.

"Honey us wasn't ready for de big change dat come! Us had no education, no land, no mule, no cow, not a pig, nor a chicken, to set up housekeeping. De birds had nests in de air, de foxes had holes in de ground, and de fishes had beds under de great falls, but us colored folks was left widout any place to lay our heads . . . Lots of de chillun die, as did de old folks, while de rest of us scour de woods for hickory nuts, acorns, cane roots, and artichokes . . . (with spring) plums, mulberries, and blackberries come, and de shad come up de Catawba River."

Some black families left the county with the northern army, many others migrated west and north in the ensuing years in search of greater opportunities. Peter and Harriet became tenant farmers or sharecroppers, seeking out a meagre living from the soil. Unfortunately for county residents, crops were poor between 1865 and 1867. Not even the weather would cooperate with the farmers, two years of statewide drought were followed by too much rain. The difficulties of the farmers was compounded by the lack of horses, mules and oxen for agricultural work. Hunger was prevalent in the county. In 1867, Peter Harrison paid a poll tax of $2.00. Despite a dry spring, the 1868 county crops were good.

By 1870 the family's circumstances had improved somewhat. In that year the federal agricultural census showed Peter Harrison owning $10 worth of farm machinery, a horse, a milk cow, oxen, and other farm animals. The only crop produced by Harriet and Peter according to the census was Indian corn. By 1870 the family had increased to seven children with the arrival of two more sons, Frank and John. In addition, Peter's mother Rose, was listed as living with the family.

January 1, 1874 was a red letter day for the Harrison family. Peter purchased for $1000 a farm consisting of "200 acres more or less" in Township #5 from Edward P. Mobley. When his brother-in-law, Henry Harrison, acquired land a short time later he traded fifteen bales of cotton for the land. Peter and Harriet and the children must have made a bumper crop of corn, or more likely cotton, to have raised such a large sum of money.

Hard work and industry continued to pay off for Harriet and Peter. The 1880 federal agricultural census showed Peter tilling 58 acres of land with 170 acres in woodlands and producing 150 bushels of Indian corn, 17 bales of cotton, 10 bushels of sweet potatoes and 10 gallons of molasses. The family by then also owned two horses, one mule, two milk cows, three other cows, three hogs, and 10 chickens. As well as providing milk for the family, the cows produced 100 pounds of butter and the chickens laid 40 dozen eggs. The agricultural census valued their farm land and buildings at $600, their farming equipment at $20, livestock at $120, and estimated the value of their farm production at $950. In comparison with their neighbors, both black and white, Peter and Harriet were doing well.

Not only was their farm prospering, their family was continuing to grow also. Between 1873 and 1876 four children were added to family—two daughters, Louise and Sallie, and two sons, Hampton and Chamberlain.

In 1880, their oldest daughter, Mary Ann, and her husband, Frank Jackson, and four young children—Peter, Harriet, Mary and Nancy—lived in a neighboring house. At a slightly greater distance in the neighborhood lived their son, Reuben, and his wife Mary and three more grandchildren—Reese, Frossey and Thomas. Other family members also lived nearby; those identified from the 1880 census are Peter's three younger sisters—Caroline, Martha and Lucy Harrison. Caroline and her husband, Henry Harrison and seven children: Margaret, Minny, David, Henry, George, Sallie and Silla were neighbors of Harriet and Peter's. Henry and his mother, Margaret, had been slaves of David Harrison, a brother of Harriet and Peter's owner, John Harrison, Sr. David Harrison's will had requested that Margaret and her children be freed upon his death. Also in same township in 1880 resided Martha Harrison Adamson and her husband, Frank Adamson, five little Adamsons—David, Henry, Janey, Tomy and Eliza. Frank and his parents, William and Lavinia Adamson, had been slaves of the Peay family. Years later, Frank indicated that his father selected the sur name of Adamson because when he first arrived from Africa he had been purchased by the Adamsons. Peter's third sister, Lucy married Julius Durham about 1870 and they lived in township #8 close enough for the Durhams and their children—John, Maggie, Boykin and Fannie—to remain a part of the Harrison family circle.

As today, births, weddings and other family get togethers were no doubt the high points of Peter and Harriet's lives. Government interviews with former slaves made during the 1930's about their lives after emancipation are packed with stories of courtships and weddings. Wedding ceremonies were frequently very elaborate. For example, one former Fairfield slave interviewed stated that he was married in the bride's home:

"We had a big wedding and she wore a white dress wid two frills on it. I wore a dove-colored suit and a high brim hat wid a small crown. I bought de hat for $7.00 jes' to marry in . . ."

Another former Fairfield slave recalled getting married at fifteen, in a blue worsted dress with a red balmoral over a white tucked petticoat. She wore white stockings with low quarter shoes and had sweet shrubs in her hair. Similar wedding festivities probably marked the marriages of Peter and Harriet's children, beginning with Mary Ann who married Frank Jackson by 1873.

Religion was an important part of the lives of most black families. Under slavery, blacks had not generally been allowed to establish their own churches. Some owners encouraged their slaves to attend their churches where they were required to sit in the back of the church or in the church balcony. Other slave owners made no provision for worship services for slaves.

After the war was over the former slaves built "brush arbors" to hold meetings in and held baptisms in the creeks. Creeks were dammed up just deep enough for baptizing. Several churches were established in the county shortly after the war including those of the Baptist, Presbyterian and African Methodist Episcopal denominations. Revivals were held that lasted several days.

Interviews with former slaves contain numerous statements of faith and the fervent belief that injustices would be righted in the hereafter. One former slave woman remembered that the white folks loved to hear her church choir sing, they said it was because "we can carry de song better." She didn't agree; she felt they sang better because they loved the Lord just a little bit more and what was in their mouths was in their hearts.

Peter and Harriet remained on their farm, planting and harvesting the crops and paying the taxes each year. He paid the property taxes for the last time on December 28, 1899 and died the following year. Harriet survived her husband by more than two decades, remaining on the farm with her daughter, Sallie, and son-in-law, the Reverend Prince J. Johnson. She died on October 7, 1921 at the age of 88 years. Both Harriet and Peter are buried in the cemetery of White Oak Baptist Church #1 near their beloved farm.

Peter and Harriet's farm of 203 acres of land remained in the Harrison family until it was sold by the estate in 1948.

Before the Civil War.

Prior to 1865, Peter and Harriet Harrison were both slaves of John Harrison, Sr. He was one of the largest slave owners in Fairfield County. In 1843 he was taxed on 223 slaves. His father, Reuben Harrison, had moved down from Virginia before the Revolution and acquired thousands of acres stretching from Ridgeway to Longtown. John Sr. was one of several large planters in the area who raced horses for sport.

The 1860 federal agricultural census gives a good description of the Harrison plantation where Harriet and Peter lived in 1860. In all the Harrison place contained almost 8000 acres which produced, 50 bushels of rye, 7000 bushels of corn, 1000 bushels of oats, 400 bales of cotton, 600 pounds of wool, 50 bushels of peas and beans, 15 bushels of Irish potatoes, 400 bushels of sweet potatoes, 6 tons of hay, and $50 worth of garden products. Other production included six gallons of wine, 1000 pounds of butter and $500 worth of homemade manufactures.

On a plantation of this size—there were undoubtedly a number of skilled craftsmen among the slaves such as weavers, mill wrights, wheelwrights, tanners and blacksmiths. Different skills and occupations often resulted in a class structure of slaves on the large plantations. In an interview in the 1930's, a former slave of Nicholas Peay, who lived at his large Melrose plantation site made the following observation:

Dere was just two classes of de white folks, buckra slave owners and poor white folks dat didn't own no slaves. Dere was more classes mongst de slaves. De first was de house servants. Dere was de butler, de maids, de nurses, . . . and de cooks. De nex' class was de carriage drivers and de gardeners, de carpenters, de barbers, and de stable men. Then come . . . de cow men . . . All dese have good houses and never have to work hard . . . then comes the cradles of the wheat, de threshers and de millers of de corn and de wheat, and de feeders of the cotton gin . . . (the lowest class was the common field (hands) . . .

Contemporary accounts reveal that these huge plantations often looked like small communities in appearance with houses in rows and streets wide enough for wagons to pass through. Most of the slave houses in Fairfield County were small frame structures, with fireplaces made of mud and sticks and all too frequently dirt floors. Housing conditions varied greatly from plantation to plantation. Parents, children and grandparents often shared a single house: sometimes aunts, uncles and cousins also lived in the same house, with barely enough room for everyone to stretch out at night. Reminiscing near the end of his life, one former slave fondly remembered his slave house:

"Us lived in a log house wid a little porch in front and de mornin' glory vines used to clumb 'bout it. When they bloom the bees would come hummin' and suck the honey out of the blue bells on de vine . . . dat was a pleasant memory . . ."

The size of John Harrison, Sr.'s plantation and his apparent wealth would generally imply that Peter and Harriet's housing should have been adequate on the plantation. Records do not indicate that this was the case. Law suits brought by Harrison's relatives complain that he was mismanaging their property, including slaves. They specifically charged that the living conditions of the slaves were unhealthy and that the slaves were "wasting away." In 1855, John Sr. admitted in a court answer filed that he had lost more than forty of his own slaves "in the recent past due to ill health." Hopefully the situation of the slaves improved after the court testimony.

Harriet Edmunds Harrison and her two oldest children had been purchased by John Harrison, Sr. for $1240. Harriet first shows up in 1835 as a small child valued at $75 in a slave inventory of the property of the Estate of Robert Edmunds of Richland District. Her mother appears to have been a slave named Mary. They were listed together on the slave inventory and they were both among the eleven slaves of Robert Edmunds transferred by his Estate to his daughter, Mary Edmunds, the wife of Richard B. Harrison. Mary died in 1847 and Richard shortly thereafter. Harriet and Mary were next transferred to their minor children, Mary Harrison and John Harrison, Jr. John Harrison, Sr. of Fairfield, was appointed by the Richland District, Court of Equity as their legal guardian and he took control of their slaves by 1851. He brought all eleven slaves to his plantation where they lived together with his slaves. Harriet and Peter probably met at this time at the Harrison plantation and may have married shortly thereafter. Most plantation owners encouraged their slaves to marry. They believed slaves would be less likely to run away and they wanted the slave women to produce as many babies as possible. Slave couples were often given small garden plots to cultivate.

One former slave from Newberry District recalled wedding on his plantation:

Twan't no dressing up fer marring in slavery times; just say 'gwine to be a marriage tonight! and you see bout 40 or 50 folks to see it. If it be wa'melon time, dey had a big feast after de wedding. Old man preacher Tony would marry you fer nothing. De keep de wedding cake fer three weeks befor it was eat.

Many slaves married slaves from other nearby plantations. Visits were generally limited to one or two a week and passes had to be gotten from the owners for slaves to travel between farms. Sometimes the owners would work out a slave trade to bring husbands and wives together. These marriages were especially shaky as one family might move away and separate the couple forever.

Peter and Harriet were fortunate that when the Fairfield District, Court of Equity, ordered the sale of Harriet and the other slaves belonging to the two young Harrison children (Mary and John Harrison, Jr.) that she and her two small children were purchased at auction by John Harrison, Sr. thus keeping Peter and Harriet on the same plantation. The auction was held at the Fairfield County Court House. Mary, the slave thought to be Harriet's mother was purchased by Robert Edmunds, thus she returned to the Edmunds family.

Food on the plantations for slaves were generally ample but lacking in variety. They received what was called rations. This weekly dole of food usually consisted of bacon and fatback, meal, grits, peas and beans, 'lasses and 'tators. Their diet was supplemented with buttermilk and in the summer with fruit from the orchards and vegetables such as collards, turnips, okra, pumpkins and peanuts from the garden. One former slave remembered fishing in the river:

They fished with hooks and old-time canes. They had fish baskets, made of wooden splits, with an opening at the end like the wire baskets now used.

Those slaves who worked in the big house always got the best eatins'. The food was prepared in big wide chimneys located away from the mansion house by plantation cooks. There were iron rods run through the chimneys to hold pots, pans and kettles. Brick ovens were used to make molasses from sugar cane. Most of the slaves ate together at big long tables or trays set on planks. Iron spoons for eating and cooking utensils were produced at the blacksmith shop on the larger plantations.

During the summer the slaves wore homespun cotton and in the winter homespun wool. The Harrison plantation produced 400 pounds of wool in 1859. The cloth was dyed with a variety of dyes such as red dirt and mulberries for red, green walnuts hulls for green, maple tree bark for gray and bark from the walnut tree for brown. However, cloth dyed blue with indigo was much preferred. The children wore little during the summer months—boys were in their shirt-tails and girls in one piece homespun slips. One former slave felt it wasn't a hardship as "we didn't know and didn't care nothing 'bout a 'spectable 'pearance in those days. Another reasoned that there were just so many of us and so little to go around. Shoes for slaves, when they had them, sounded terribly uncomfortable. They were made of raw-hide leather which had to be soaked in warm water and greased with tallow. The soles, or bottoms, were made of wood.

Plantation hours were long, particularly for the hands working in the fields, some owners worked their slaves from dawn to dusk seven days a week. Others observed the sabbath. On rainy days when they couldn't work in the field they would perform other tasks such as spinning and weaving or shucking corn. Plantation life was tightly regulated and controlled.

Much research remains to be done to further identify the families of Peter and Harriet. All those interested in continuing research on the Harrison family history should contact reunion organizers. If there is sufficient interest, research will continue.

"My First Christmas In Heaven"

I See the Countless Christmas Trees Around The World
Below With Tiny Lights, Like Heaven's Stars, Reflecting On The Snow The Sight Is So Spectacular, Please Wipe Away That Tear For I Am Spending Christmas With Jesus Christ This Year.

I Hear That Many Christmas Songs That People Hold So Dear
But That Sounds Of Music Can't Compare With The Christmas Choir Up Here

I Have No Words To Tell You The Joy Their Voices Bring
For It Is Beyond Description To Hear The Angels Sing.

I Know How Much You Miss Me, I See The Pain Inside Your Heart

But I Am Not So Far Away, We Really Aren't Apart So
Be Glad I'm Spending Christmas With Jesus Christ This Year.

I Send You Each A Special Gift, From My Heavenly
Home Above

I Send You Each A Memory Of My Undying Love
After All "Love" Is The Gift More Precious Than Pure Gold
It Is Always Most Important In The Stories Jesus Told

Please Love And Keep Each Other, As My Father Said To Do
For I Can't Count The Blessing Or Love He Has For Each Of You

So Have A Merry Christmas and Wipe Away Those Tears
Remember I Am Spending Christmas With Jesus Christ This Year.

WHAT'S YOUR IDEA ?

I believe a man made chemical could be manufactured that would replace gasoline for cars. This Chemical would be like a flint rock every time you strike a flint rock a spark is caused and a fire can be started. Everytime the engine is turned on the spark causes a spark that hits the gas and explodes in the engine and pushes the pistons down to make the car move. A substance could be manufactured that would explod but last over many years.

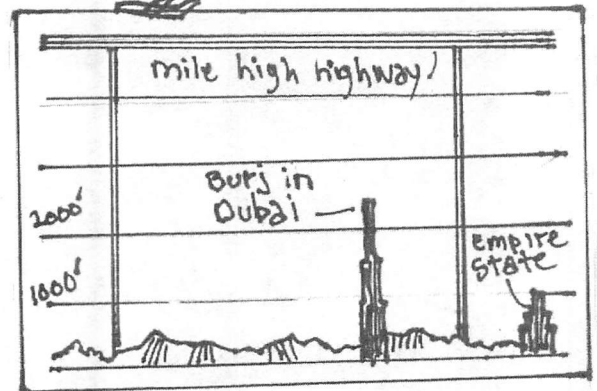

WHAT IS YOUR DREAM ?

If you look at your table when the sun shines on it you will see dust settled on the table. At about twenty six miles up in the heavens outerspace meets with the earth's gravity that is where dust from car exhaust and other that rise to where the gravity and outer space meet when the sun shines the dust that has risen from earth holds the earth heat and stays there. I believe a type of exhaust like on a car could be built and launched into space or built in space using NASA'S Space Station. This exhaust hardware would be about the size of a football field and about thirty yeards high filled with magnetized plastic that would have the look of steel wool. This hardware would orbit the earth under solar power directed from earth. The orbit would be in a figure eight pattern around the earth. The dust captured in the magnetized plastic would be burned up in space using solar energy.

WHAT'S YOUR IDEA ?

My idea is a bridge a mile high that would go from east coast to west coast and from north to south. The bridge would go over rural areas. Car speed would be eighty miles per hour controid by Satellite. Once on the bridge the driver would turn to a designated radio station which would be in tuned with a satellite. The car could only get on or off in certain states. An example going to California the driver would get on some where in Virginia and get off after driving three hundred mioes. The idea is one could drive to California from Virginia in half the time it would take going by ground highway. The bridge span would be a mile apart. The four lane highway in the sky would have cables under the steel concrete highway in sections so the highway could bend or move. A mile is five thousand two hundred and eighty feet. The Empire State Building in New York City is One thousand two hundred and fifty feet.

Suited to the Tee.....

At 13 years old logging 15 tourneys a year, you could say Mariah Stackhouse loves the sport of Golf.

"I love golf, because it is a family sport. My brother and mom play, And my dad is the reason I started playing."

At age 13, Mariah has 70 wins under her belt and has played in 125 tournaments, not to mention she has a 4.0 GPA. The Riverdale Georgia golf guru shot a 68 when she was only 11; not bad for a rookie ...

Mariah with Parents

The Harrison Connection

Mariah's Parents are

Ken and Sharon Brown Stackhouse

Grandparents are the

Late John and Bernice Jackson Brown

Great-Grand Parents:

Dave and Mariah Bagley Jakson

Stackhouse Rallies for 1-up Victory at Georgia Women's Match Play Championship. She becomes the youngest champion in the 10-year history of the event, at Sunset Hills Country Club, Carrollton, Ga.

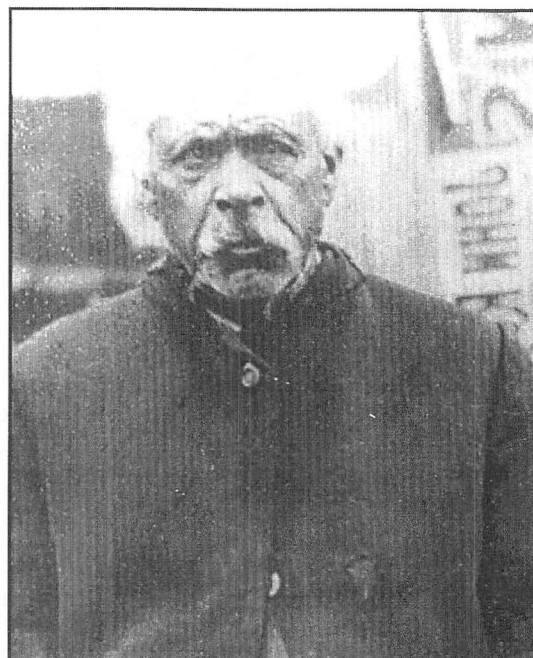

Mariah's brother, John plays golf also. He just earned his Black Belt in Karate.
