The Hicklin Coat Of Arms

Azure (blue) three bars, Or (gold) in chief, as many Lion's Heads, erased, of the second.

Crest: A Leopard's Head, erased, on Pelletter. (Pelletee means sprinkled with black dots or pellets. Pellette signifies money or wealth in the family.)

The Bars signify military service, and the Lions' Heads signify strength, and war, the emblem of undaunted courage. The most notable of the common charges is the Lion or Leopard and appears in the arms of monarchs and nobles of high estate.

The Leopard indicates brave and fierce fighters.

Mottoes were not granted until 1600.

Colors represent the personal characteristics of the bearer, and are granted only upon merit.

Blue denotes loyalty and truth, piety, and sincerity.

Gold denotes generosity and elevation of the mind.

Hicklin or Hicklin is an English local surname, taken from a place-name. There is a HICKLING, a Parish in Nottingham, and Hickling, a parish in Norfolk. One of these districts, or what is more likely, both districts, gave rise to the surname Hickling.

In the earlier days, when a man moved to a new locality, he was likely to have the name of his former locality added to his one and only name. In the day of surname formation, this might be adopted by his children and become a surname in the modern sense. If an Englishman moved to another country, he might be given the name of his native land. Thus English is in Scotland a Scottish surname. Conversely, in England, Scott is an English surname. No man in Scotland would be called Scott, for all men there are Scots.

Without question, this surname had its beginning as Hickling. For some centuries after surnames were adopted in Europe, people never saw their own names in written form. When the rolls were made up, the person or clerk spelled it, as he caught it from the lips of the man who bore it. With the English, spelling was a matter of little consequence until the reforms of the nineteenth century. We find Medieval rolls with the name of man and wife, standing side by side, yet spelled differently. We find the name of an individual in a single page of a document spelled in several different ways.

The following are from English rolls: Brian de Hikeling, County Norfolk, 1273, Hundred Rolls

Thomas de Hikeling, County Norfolk 1273 Hundred Rolls

Henry de Hikelyng, Nottinghamshire, templ Edward I

Nicholas de Hickling, pr bend of Norwich Cathedral, 1371, History of Norfolk

Adam de Hickling, prebend of Norwich Cathedral 1371, History of Norfolk

1806 married: William Hickling and Mary Vause, St. George Hanover Square, ii, 315.

It appears that the Hickling form of the name is more frequent in the U. S. than is the Hicklin form. The Massachusetts Historical Register has records of three marriages between the Hicklings and the descendants of Governor Bradford. According to the London Directory, the derivative holds its own well with the original form.

Now when the writer treats of personal nomenclature, he considers that he has finished his part of the task, when he has pointed out the place giving rise to the surname. It remains for the student of geographical names to explain the origin of the place name itself. I do not find an explanation of the parish name Hickling in any work to which I have access. However, I give you my own idea of its origin, for what its worth. It is as follows:

The second element of the name "ling", means a heath. The plant Ling is the common heather of England and Scotland, and Ling is a very common East Anglian surname. The frequency of the name is due, in large part, to a Ling in Suffolk, a Lynq in Norfolk, and a Lynq in Somerset.

The first element of the name, Hick, is from one of the many nicknames of Richard. This very popular Christian name produced a series of nicks in D: Dick, Dob, Dodge, and a series in H: Hick, Hob, Hodge, as well as the more obvious Rich and Rick. The surnames from these nicks, with their diminutives and variants are legion. Hick produced a softened form, Higg, which finally won over it, so that Hick, Hickson, Hickens, Hickox, etc are outnumbered in our directories by Higgs, Higgson, Higgins, Higginsons, etc.

And so, I think, that the parish name of Hickling means the heath of Hick, the dwelling place of Hick (Richard). One could think of it as meaning the home of the Hicklings, -ling, or -ing being the patronymic suffix of the Anglo-Saxons, and signifying the family and kindred of Hick, or Richard.

The above was obtained from Mr. Jackson Hicklin of San Diego, California, 1960.

The Hicklin Family of South Carolina, as compiled by Ann Carson Hicklin
Aiken, N. C. Jan. 11, 1968.

The first Hicklin to arrive in South Carolina was Arthur Hicklin. Jason Calvin Hicklin, great, great grandson of Arthur I, in his journal, stated that the family came from Tyrone County, Ireland, to Pennsylvania. Their stay in Ireland was of short duration, probably not more than 20 years. Sometime between 1750-1760, they, along with several brothers came to Penn. Again they did not tarry, but came to the Carolinas with that great migration of other Ulster-Scots, prior to the Revolution.

The first positive date of Arthur's South Carolina residency is a Land Grant in the S. C. Archives, Columbia, S. C., dated June 18th, 1765.

The Land Grant reads: One hundred and fifty acres, situate in Craven County, (now Lancaster County) on a branch of Rocky Creek, bounded on all sides by vacant land. What a story that tells of the great primeval forests to which he and his family came.

Arthur I died in 1789, and his wife, Jane, died in 1791. They as well as all other members of the family who died there, except George, are buried in the family burying ground, about 3 miles from the Catauba River in Lancaster Co., on land now owned by the Duke Power Co.

To reach this place from Lancaster, go south on the Great Falls road to Mt. Moriah Negro Church. Across the road is a cemetery, in one corner of which is the Douglas family plot. Turn right at crossroads, and go 2 or 3 miles. When you cross creek, go up a steep hill. The hill on the left is the place where Arthur Hicklin I lived. The burying ground is on it, and the graves are unmarked. Just beyond is the Jack Caskey farm. (Information supplied by Dr. Robert Davis).

Jane and Arthur Hicklin had the following children:

- ① William Hicklin, who was probably born in County Tyrone, Ireland, about 1734, and died Oct. 10, 1819. He married Sarah Isbell, sister of Lyttleton Isbell, Rev. soldier from Kershaw District, S. C. Sarah Isbell Hicklin died July 29, 1841, at the age of 93 years.
2. George Hicklin, born April 27, 1754, died Nov. 15, 1824. He was a Methodist and a Bible teacher. His Bible is preserved in the descendants of the Cole family. George never married but he reared the two daughters of his brother, Arthur II and wife, Elizabeth Williams Hicklin. George is buried at Camp Creek Methodist Churchyard. Dates from George's Bible.
3. Arthur Hicklin II, born March 7, 1758, died Nov. 19, 1799, mar. Elizabeth Williams, b. 1762 - D. 1803.

4. Hugh Hicklin

5. John Hicklin

6. Elizabeth Hicklin married George Hammond and lived in the Southern part of Lancaster County.

Some years of peace were spent on the forest, but "The Dogs of War" were turned loose. Having had some experience in the treatment given by the Royal Government, the sons of Arthur Hicklin, one and all, soon decided on which side they would serve. So the Whigs were strengthened by the five sons of Arthur Hicklin.

In the Archives at Columbia are the following documents, which confirm the Revolutionary service of:

William Hicklin compensation for 57 days duty in Cavalry in March and April 1781, and 30 days in Capt. Turners' Co. in May 1781, for 8 days duty under Gen. Thompson in July 1782. This document is dated 31 Nov. 1787.

John Hicklin, for 40 days service under Col. Kershaw, from Feb. 23, 1779 from Aug. 9th, 40 days service under Gen. Morgan, from Feb. 10th, 40 days service under Gen. Henderson, amounting to 12 pounds, 2 shillings, and ten pence. this document dated 22nd June 1785.

Arthur Hicklin, for 40 days in Capt. Turner's Co. in May and June 1781 and for 40 days in Cavalry Sept. 1781, 8 pounds, 11 shillings and 5 pence sterling. This document dated 5 June 1786. Documents were signed by claimants, hence they were living several years after the Rev. War was over.

Family 2:

William Hicklin and his wife, Sarah Isbell, had the following children:

Jason Hicklin, never married

Arthur Hicklin III, also never married. He and Jason were both men of intelligence and possessed much business tact. They were partners in their undertakings and prospered. They built the first mill at Thorn's old mill site on Fishing Creek. This they sold to Charles Thorn, and ever since it has gone by Thorn's name. They owned the home place of the late Dr. William Clout, and they had a mercantile business there until Arthur's death. Then all their joint holdings were sold, and Jason went to Lancaster and opened a new store. Later he established another at Camden. These he continued until his death. In addition to his mercantile business, he had a considerable estate in land and negroes.

Jane McKewen and James Clout.

6. Reuben Hicklin, never married. Went to Washington County, Ga. and was a member of the Ga. Legislature.

7. Sarah Hicklin, married Reuben Hall.

After William's children were of some age, he bought a tract of land near Catholic Pres. Church and thither removed, so that all the family could attend church there. His children were given a portion of the old homestead in Lancaster County, when they became of age, until all were provided for, except the two youngest ones. He then sold the tract near Catholic Church, and with his wife and two youngest children, Reuben and Sarah, went to Washington County, Ga. Although Reuben died quite young, he arose to some prominence and was quite popular, and was a member of the Ga. Legislation at the time of his death. Sarah married Reuben Hall.
