

Hollis to speak at St. John missionary program

The Women's Missionary Society of St. John A.M.E. Church will hold its annual missionary program, Sunday, March 11, during the 11:15 a.m. worship service.

The theme will be, "Life In The Village" meaning, C.A.R.E. Connect, Act, Respond, Experience.

Jeron Hollis will be the main speaker.

Hollis is a licentiate under the leadership of Bishop Henry Allen Belin Jr. of the Seventh Episcopal District of the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

Also participating in the service will be Elder Mingo H. Singleton, and the pastor, the Rev. Henry T. Brown.

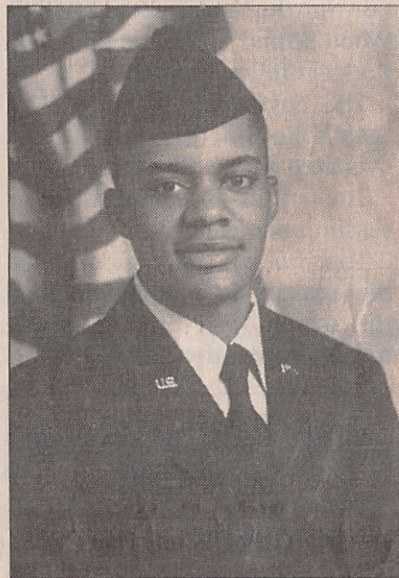

Hollis is a member of the gospel choir, and is a teacher in the Sunday school.

Currently, Hollis is a junior at the University of South Carolina, majoring in religious studies. He is also a senior airman in the South Carolina Air National Guard.

Recently, Hollis married the former LaChina Moore of Winnsboro. The couple lives in Columbia.

Hollis is the son of Bernard and Carol S. Hollis. His grandparents are Maggie M. Sims and the late John K. Sims.

St. John A.M.E. Church is located in The Middlesix community, on Old Camden Road.
