HENDERSON'S ISLAND

file Lyles :

Located in the Broad River between the mouths of the Tyger and Enoree Rivers, Henderson's Island was originally granted by the King to John Marlowe in 1757. Later in the possession of Daniel Mazycke the island was known as Mazycke's Island. Purchased by 1800 by John Henderson of Newberry District the island has ever since been called Henderson's Island. This circa 1800 plat identifies surrounding plantations. John Henderson's second wife was Elizabeth Liles (daughter of James and Lucy Liles Liles and grand-daughter of both Ephraim and Williamson Liles). Their only son, James Madison Henderson and his wife Sallie Anderson Glenn (daughter of James Blanton and Eliza beth B. Liles Glenn, grand-daughter of Ephraim and Elizabeth Frances Foote Liles, and great-granddaughter of Arromanos and Rebecca Valentine Liles), lived on the Island for many years prior to the Civil War.

Among the plantation site's included on the plat is that of Reuben Sims. Two of Reuben and Nancy Saunders Sims daughters, Mary and Drucilla, married sons of Arromanos and Rebecca Valentine Liles, John and Valentine Liles, respectively. Another daughter, Cecilia Sims married James Liles (son of Little Ephraim Liles and his first wife and grandson of Williamson Liles and his first wife).

Edward Mobley and Descendants

Edward Mobley, a large land and slave owner, laid the foundation of the great wealth of his family before the Civil War. He sold his cotton to the O'Neil's in Columbia, and their old books show that he was the largest cotton producer in the up-country, of his times. He married Mary Mabry.

Many tales are told of Edward's love and courtship. Here is one, most probable in connection with her father's will and the U. S. Census of 1790. The will names her brothers and sisters, and recites that she is single; Mr. Mabry was a Whig and the Mobley's were Federalists. He opposed the marriage on this account. The match was not consummated until after his death. When Mr. Mabry died, Edward again appeared as a suitor, but the mother said: "I will not hear of it until my year and a day of mourning expires." Edward went to the brother, Dan, and said: "Dan, I will do anything, if you will either persuade Mary to run away with me, or your mother to give her consent to give her consent of our marriage, at once" Dan replied: "I would not, for anything, allow my sister to run away with you in our mother's present grief, but I might persuade mother to consent to an early marriage. You say you'll do anything; will you join our party?" Edward said: "I'll join your old party and go with you-anything to get Mary." This brother and Mary persuaded the mother, and the marriage took place, quietly, on the 4th day of July 1790. His descendants are the following.

(f) Cicely Narcissa (Lily) married Dr. T. J. H. Douglas --

Instead of praising her, we take her space for the following letter:

Editor of The Lantern: "Sometime in April, between the surrender of Lee's army and that of Gen. Johnston's, Mrs. Davis with her escort reached our mother's home, nine miles south of Chester on Ashford Ferry road, and stated that they had spent the night a Woodward Baptist church. Had intended reaching our home the night before, but owing to the condition of the roads, darkness had overtaken them and they camped at the church. We remember one lady with Mrs. Davis besides a white nurse and the three children. Maggie, Mrs. Davis' oldest child must have been eight or ten years old; then there was the boy "Little Jeff" and the baby, Winnie, in long dresses. She was placed in our arms by our mother, who told us always to remember our beloved President's little baby girl. They were served with lunch and then went to the rooms upstairs to rest. Mrs. Davis seemed hurried, not staying more than two or three hours. Our mother put up fresh milk for the baby and flowers for the other children, and we remember our mother's tearful farewell to Mrs. Davis." This was signed by Mrs. R. T. Mockbee, Mrs. Alice M. Cornwell and Mrs. L. M. Douglas (cousin Lilly).
