Foreword -

March 20, 1978.

Realizing that our children, with our passing will, have lost the opportunity to find out many interesting facts concerning the history of our families, I have put together the information which has been handed down to me by my elders. Though the facts are meager, they give us an insight into the character of our ancestors who have formed a background for our lives today.

With present day advantages and opportunities, it is difficult to realize the hardships and struggles of pioneer life. The strength of character thus developed in them is something for which we should be thankful. And may our generation see to it that the heritage we hand down to our posterity is as good.

I have followed only the history of our direct descent from generation to generation to avoid confusion in branching off into other lines. A lot of the information came from the South Carolina room and the D A R Section of the Laurens County Library.

History of The Milton Area

The site of what probably was the earliest community of settlement is Laurens County. For here, at the approximate present intersection of SC roads 27 and 38, stood Milton of old, forming the hub of a perimeter of influence in culture, industry, commerce and agriculture which extended for miles in all directions.

It is not known when this once teeming community had its beginning but tradition says that a private school existed there as early as 1767, which suggests that it had a much earlier history.

In pre-Revolutionary times Milton is said to have been the cross roads for stage lines operating between Washington and New Orleans, and between Greenville and Charleston. Here, on the waters of Little River, John Black, around 1800, modernized an already existent grist and flour mill, and built a thick, rock dam with which to power the first sawmill in that section of the state. The present rustic road bridge which spans the river there is said to be based on Black's footings. He once had a busy millhouse and a once imposing rock store building. It is difficult to comprehend now, that this was once the site of a busy and prosperous community which existed long before Laurens, Clinton, and Cross Hill were ever dreamed of.

To this section, around 1771 came our first ancestors, fresh from Ireland, with their children. Although Milton is long gone, it was our birthplace in America.

History of the Scuffletown Area

Tradition says that Scuffletown (presumably referring to the community known now as Ora) was so named for the "incessant scuffling" which ensued around the store and Post Office. Even if this were true, it should not be construed that the so-called scuffling was of a disorderly nature, for scuffling and wrestling was an orderly form of recreation in that time.

Around 1820, after crops were "laid by" the menfolk frequently engaged themselves in such athletic competitions as scuffling, wrestling, jumping, running, pitching dollars, throwing "long bullets" and nine pins. Their families also got together and enjoyed fiddling and dancing, and playing such games as blind man's buff, rimming the thimble, grinding the bottle, dropping the glove and such wholesome entertainment as we of later generations are familiar with. There were a number of communities of that name in those times, so it may not be assumed that it was a derogatory implication.

The settlement by this name probably was the center of influence of a district of the same name. The Scuffletown section had begun to be settled as early as 1766, which was less than ten years from the time when the red men were the undisputed masters of all they surveyed.

This historic area, with which is identified such a vast portion of our history. It is understandable, therefore to our descendants, and particularly those who have remained on, or near, this ancestral site, the section of old which was Scuffletown - its' hills and woodlands, its' meadows, orchards, fields of grain, cotton, and corn, is indeed hallowed ground. For here was born the traditions of fraternity, fidelity and integrity. Here our forbears toiled and saved, shared hardship and triumph, rejoiced and sorrowed.

For here, too, in yonder quietude of Old Fields churchyard, slumber the loved ones of yesteryear until the Master shall call them forth.

Michael McGuire, a Scotchman was perhaps the first white man to settle in this section in which he established himself a family of 200 acres of land in that year - 1766.

Scuffletown is mentioned by "Mills Statistics of S C" as a settlement in 1820. In the summer when the crops were laid by, the men would gather on a knoll and called it "The Muster Ground". The men would scuffle and drill and it was

The Name Ora - The romance of the Rails

September 1885 was a gala month for the citizens along the line of the newly built Greenwood, Spartaburg and Laurens railroad. For not only did its' opening mark an auspicious date in the development of the section where the people had hauled their cotton, grain and lumber to market by ox and cart, but its' construction brought to the area a young and gallant surveying engineer.

On a fine summer day, while engaged as Chief Engineer in surveying the right of way, a little group of comely young ladies of the Scuffletown community came strolling in his direction, and into the focus of his surveyor's transit. Studying this new field of attraction, he perceived that one of them was unusually attractive, and he managed to arrange his duties to intercept their course and, of course, to introduce himself.

The romance of Margaret Ora Huston and Robert Tyler Mac Donald ended in marriage. It brought about, also, the renaming of Scuffletown, by which the community had gone for upwards of a hundred years.

As part of the ceremonies opening the line, citizens were invited to ride on the new rails on especially fitted flat cars, with seats and guard rails. All, that is, save one, for whom was reserved a perch, with the handsome engineer surveyor, on the pilot, or "cowcatcher", of the locomotive. Here is one suitor who did not plead his cause in the lamplit parlor on beaded blee, for as the train sped through the countryside, the surveyor popped the question, and the attractive girl nodded in the affirmative.

The citizens of Scuffletown had long yearned a less odious name for their community, and the railroad asked its surveyor to suggest some short names for its station. Among those submitted was Ora, which was chosen, and we may suspect that the surveyor had a hand in the choice.

Now, when once the small steam locomotives puffed and pattered on the Warriors Creek grade with a short string of cars, four-unit diesels now roar past Ora.

Early Postal Facilities - named Scuffletown post office in 1830 - later changed to Bryson. Among postmasters appointed were William Bryson Feb 19, 1877 and Mrs Bella Bryson Fleming Jan 7, 1914. Scuffletown post office was in operation from its date of origin until Nov 6, 1896, when the name was changed to Bryson. It was situated in the front of Dr Huston Bryson's office on the Lawns road below Ora. The mail bag was thrown out as the passenger train passed. The mail bag was put out to be grabbed on an iron crane, that had a ladder to climb up on. The pins were turned in the direction that the train was going. There were two mails a day, one going North and one South - both in the morning. At that time there was also an afternoon passenger train going North and one South. There was a flag stop further down the road - you had to flag the train to get on. The Sunday Spartanburg paper was thrown out there - since no mail bags were used on Sunday. The Bryson post office was discontinued on Feb 15, 1926.

Enoree, formerly Mountain Shoals

The beginning of the village of Enoree dates back prior to the 1830's for then a grist mill, consisting of two wheat mills and two corn mills, was in operation, just above the junction of Two-mile Creek and Enoree River and a mercantile business was established. These enterprises were owned and operated by James Nesbit, a leading citizen of this section. At that time all property on which the village now stands was owned by James Nesbit.

The beautiful old anti-slavery home was built by James Nesbit, it being the only residence here at that time. Most of the present village site was covered with forest. Going to the grist mill wild turkeys were frequently seen where the mill village stands. He continued to operate his mills and store for a number of years, receiving patronage from the entire county round and from both sides of Enoree river.

The first post office to be established here was named Mountain Shoals.

Pretty soon dreams of a railroad began, which would extend from the village of Augusta to the village of Spartanburg. Tradition says that some old men in Augusta sitting around whittling began to discuss how a railroad from Augusta by Laurens, Spartanburg and into the Northwest would develop the country. One of these men sent an article to an Augusta newspaper concerning the dream of railroad. This led to the first move toward building the old Charleston and Western Carolina through this section.

Enoree owes its existence to the coming of the railroad. Several years went by before the dream materialized and the work was really begun. Finally in 1885 the first trains were run from Augusta to Spartanburg. With this new and much improved mode of transportation, unharvested water power now became valuable. Mountain Shoals, had by this time, passed into the hands of W A McClintock, son in law of James Prescott. McClintock sold to Milliken of New York, William Rose and other capitalists of Charleston, who almost immediately following the completion of the railroad, began the construction at the Shoals of a cotton mill known as Enoree Manufacturing Company in 1888. The railroad had, previous to this built a station near Mountain Shoals, which they named Enoree. Consequently the village changed its name from Mountain Shoals to Enoree.

Mountain Shoals was a beautiful and appropriate name for the lovely manufacturing town nestled among the hills and valleys.

The name Enoree has been given to the river by the Red men. Enoree, in Indian language, means "River of Muscadines." There are to be found many vines of these luscious grapes in the woods up and down the river still.

History of the Enoree River

The Enoree River was formally called King's River - a grant was given at the creek of Enoree River "at the south side of the lake up to the Indian grove upon the hill". Very likely the temporary name of King's River came from the early settlers but could not displace the more vivid and pleasant sounding Indian name, Enoree, meaning "River of Muscadines". This was long before there was a Laurens County (established in 1784) or a Ninety Six district. We wonder if our Nesfitt and McClintock forefathers would recognize the streams now, 200 years later? or the land? Probably only the names Enoree, Durcan, and Durbin remain unchanged.

James Nesfitt could sit on the porch of his hill top mansion and look toward the glassy water of a section of falls. He probably could even smell the muscadines along the banks of the river, as indeed the Indians had done when they gave the river its musical name for the grapes. Today the view of the river is blocked by trees and the river is a color that might worry Nesfitt if he could see it.

A Glimpse of the Times -

This account of early farming was given by an old man from this section. Picture what farming might be today had not modern inventions eliminated much of this routine toil.

A description of farming methods of that day may help to show the struggles of our forefathers. Their farming tools were few and rough. Plow stocks were made by hand as iron was scarce and blacksmiths few, hickory grubs were often used for plowshares. The foot piece was hewed down, and plows fastened on with iron bands, wedged to tighten. Bridles were made of ropes, and ropes were used for traces. Mulberry bark was used for hemesting. There were no wagons in those days for hauling corn and other products. It was done on sledges which were booted up when used for the above named purposes.

Their crops consisted of corn, cotton, wheat, and tobacco. The farmers planted on the average, about five acres of corn. When he stopped plowing his horse or ox at twelve, he would bell him and turn him out to graze. In those days there were no pasture fences. Cotton was raised on a small scale. It required two persons to plow one row, one on each side, scraping the ridge. They never chopped through or thinned the cotton. The seeds were picked by hand from the lint. The lint was worked into cakes and dried before the fire. The men usually picked the seed out while the women prepared, corded, and spun the lint into thread. It was then woven into cloth on hand looms. Woolen cloth was made by a similar method.

Wheat was one of the principal crops. This was harvested with scap hooks. It was threshed at a treading yard, a place made by digging the surface to the clay, and packed down with mauls. The wheat, hauled in on sledges, was placed on this yard and tramped down by horses. They took away the long straw by hand, sieved the wheat to remove the fine straw, fanned it with a sheet to remove the chaff. On windy days a man would stand up on a stump and pour measures of wheat on a sheet, the wind blowing away the chaff.

The early generations were almost all farmers. Before 1880, or thereabouts, this was the expected occupation of nearly everyone. Even those who followed a profession, had a skilled trade, or were merchants, also farmed. Land owners were called planters, while now landowners were called farmers, overseers, or laborers.

During the 1750's Pennington built a Fort on Indian Creek, Newberry Co., to which a number of settlers of other counties repaired when they found their own fort inadequate to withstand the attacks of the Cherokee Indians. Presbyterians and Quakers met with Baptists or "indifferents" at Pennington's Fort.

The manners and dress in the 1760's and 1770's of these early settlers must have been quite primitive. Their dress was as follows: hunting shirt, leggings, and moccasins, adorned with buckles and beads. The hair was clubbed and tied up in a little deerskin or silk bag. At another time they wore their hair cut and rolled up in a black ribbon or bear's gut dressed and dyed black. Again it became the custom to shave off the hair and wear white linen caps with ruffles around. The women's dress was long-sleeved caps, Virginia bonnets, short gowns, long gowns, stays, stomached, quilted petticoats, and high wooden heels.

There is some evidence that in the sparsely settled up-country, human companionship was important enough to overcome the difficulties of travel.

The Laurensville Presbyterian church, now the First Presbyterian church of Laurens, SC was organized in the courthouse on Sunday April 1, 1832. The first pastor was Reverend Samuel B. Levers who for sometime before the organization had been preaching at this place. John McClintock and his wife were two of the fourteen early charter members of the church.

Colonel Henry Young Simpson stated in his address at the church's Centennial service in 1932 that in the early days negroes were received into the membership of this church, infants were baptized, and the funeral services of colored members were conducted by the pastor. This was the common practice of many southern churches at the time. They were taken into the church by the session, in the same manner as white members and occupied comfortable seats in the gallery. The church buildings though, which used to have galleries, have about disappeared. (from History of Laurens Co by Marion R Wilkes)

Mr & Mrs David Martin McClintock, Augusta McClintock, LeRoy Sellers, Grace McClintock and Harold McClintock attended the Centennial in 1932.

In December 1830, the Lawrensille Female Academy was incorporated by the General Assembly.

In February 1831, John McClintock conveyed to the trustees of the Lawrensille Female Academy, a lot of land 184 ft by 240 ft in the village of Lawress for the purpose of erecting a female academy thereon. The deed granted the right to the use of water from a spring on the adjoining property of Mr McClintock. The lot ran 184 feet on the western side of present church street, known as Ladies Street about 1840 and as mentioned in the deed, the approximate center of the lot faced the present intersection of church and Lawens streets.

Subscriptions were taken all over the county for the purpose of erecting a building to house the female academy or seminary as it was both referred to at that time. The school was first taught by Miss Dorothy Teague Young and her sister Miss Flora Young, daughters of Abner Young, who had been educated in a Moravian school for young women at Salem, NC. The campus was later extended and the Female Academy eventually was succeeded by the Laurensville Female College whose college building was constructed about 1856.

(From History of Laurens Co by Marion R Wilkes - Laurens County Library)

About 1900 the property of this college was converted into a public school and the college was therefore discontinued. Rev Zelotes Lee Holmes was a professor there.

John Hunter III and Nancy Fowler Hunter built the splendid brick home in 1830. at Ora a few hundred yards from the old railroad depot. The handsome residence is now owned and occupied by John Hunter McClintock. The old "John Hunter place", as it is now called, is a remarkably preserved structure of brick, which it is said was made of kiln-baked from clay on the place by his slaves, and the lumber saved from the plantation timber. The profusion of boxwood and other evergreens bear evidence of great age. It is not at all unlikely that they were placed there by the hands of Nancy Fowler and John Hunter III. John Lafayette McClintock and his wife Janie Bryson bought the house in Feb 1892 with 152 acres of land. They lived there their entire lives.

The old Ora manse was the former fling home built by Mr Will J Fleming.

I desire you will insert and continue three times in your Paper, the inclosed Letter, which I received from South Carolina.

Yours,

JAMES M'VICKAR.

Larne, 21 Dec. 1772

P. S. My Friend in Charlestown advises me, that they have a great Crop of Rice, but want Ships to carry it to Market.

To Mr. JAMES M'VICKAR, Merchant in Larne.

SIR,

THESE will inform you, that we arrived here all well and in good spirits the 18th instant (five Children excepted who died in the Passage) after a pleasant and agreeable Passage of seven weeks and one day. — Pleasant with respect to Weather, and agreeable with regard to the Concord and Harmony that subsisted among us all: And, to confirm what we have heard you assert, before we left Ireland, we must say, that we had more than a sufficiency of all kinds of Provisions, and good in their kind: And to speak of Captain Workman, as he justly deserves, we must say with the greatest Truth (and likewise with the greatest Thanks and Gratitude to him) that he treated us all with the greatest Tenderness and Humanity:
and seemed even desirous of obliging any one, whom it might be in his Power to serve. If you think proper, we would be desirous you should cause these Things to be inserted in the public News Letter, being sensible they will afford our Friends and Acquaintances great Satisfaction; and we hope they may be of some Use to you and Captain Workman, if you resolve to trade any more in the Passenger Way. Now, in Confirmation of these Things, we subscribe ourselves as follows:

We are, Sir, your Most humble Servants,

✓ Revd Robt. ✓ John Mc.Clinton, Thos. Makee,

Mc.Clinton,

John Dicky, James Stinson,

John Peddan,

John Montgomery, John Thompson,

Joseph Lowry, John Snody, Hugh Loggan,

Timothy Mc.Clinton, John Caldwell, Peter Willey,

Nathan Brown, Robt. Hadden, David Thompson,

Samuel Kerr, Wm. Boyd, Hugh Mansoad,

James Peddan, Robt. Machesney, Robt. Wilson,

Alex. Brown, Wm. Eashler, Robt. Ross,

John Brown, Charles Miller, John Parker,

Thomas Madill, John Rickey, James Young,

✓ Wm. Simpson, Charles Dunlop, Robt. Neile.

P. S. We had Sermon every Sabbath, which was great Satisfaction to us. We omitted to let you know, that the Mate, Mr. Bole, as also the common Hands, behaved with great Care and Benevolence towards us."

It should be noted that the surnames of "Robt. McClintock" and "Timothy McClintock" appear in the Council Journal as "McLinto," "Robert Hadden" becomes "Robert Hadin," and
"Thomas Madill" is "Thomas McDill." These variations indicate the dialect pronunciations used and therefore aid in identifying these passengers in subsequent records.

Charles Dunlop, Hugh Mansoad, James Young, and Robt.
Machesney are not included in the list of those persons arriving on this vessel to whom warrants for land were issued.
However, Robert's son, Alexander Chesney is listed. This is the Alexander Chesney who was a well-known Loyalist during the Revolution and who ultimately returned to Ireland. From his Journal,¹¹ we learn that his father did not apply for free land but instead bought it, thus accounting for his name not appearing on the list. From the same Journal we learn a little about the trip. He says that the smallpox had been severe on the vessel and when the surgeon came on board and reported it to the Governor "we were obliged to ride at quarantine first three weeks, and then a second three weeks and 8 days * * *".

"We had a large house during Quarantine allowed for the sick on Sullivans Island which was kept for the purpose of a hospital; one Robinson has a salary from the Government for living there. We went back and forth from hospital to ship for a change. * * *"

From "Scotch-Irish Migration to South Carolina
— 1772 — Rev William Martin and his wife childrens of settlers.)

Around 1856 - 1868 the manuscript of the Rev Zelotes L Holmes - a Lawrence County Presbyterian minister is recorded. He was a competent historian and genealogist of this section. Rev Holmes was at one time pastor of Old Fields Church at Dra, whose membership was largely of our fourth generation and his information probably came from them.

Margaret Simpson and John McClintock I Scotch emigrants fresh from Ireland with their children came to this section around 1771. McClintock had a tract of 100 acres of land, situated near the confluence of Little River and Beaverdam and north creeks on Jan 15, 1773. Later in that year, however he acquired 290 acres land at Scuffletown and removed there. One of two factors may have influenced him to move to Scuffletown: whereas this section was in the uplands and more healthful, his first site of settlement was swampy and malarial. The first site was near the scene of clashes between patriot and Tory elements among the citizenry - (Alia McClintock Hoodwin's note -) Since the McClintock family has been in America, there has been a John in each generation (seven gen) of the South Carolina family -
 It is hoped there will continue to be a John McClintock -

Rev Robert McClintock

Robert McClintock 1746 was the son of Timothy and Eleanor Hamilton McClintock of County Antrim Ireland, who emigrated to Chester Dist SC, was a relative of John McClintock the Rev Robert McClintock, after a due course of preparation (his son thinks at the University of Edinburgh Scotland) licensed to preach by Presbytery of Ireland and at once set out for America and settled first at Williamsburg, SC where he continued to preach two or three years. Then he returned to Ireland for ordination just previous to the Revolutionary War. For some reason not known perhaps on account of political troubles, he remained in Ireland seven years.

In 1782 or 1783, he again set out for America, but finding the English Commerce still exposed to the habit of pirating, he embarked on board of a French Ship at Bordeaux.

On the passage the ship encountered an unusual amount of rough weather, and though perhaps not entirely wrecked, were so delayed in their passage as to exhaust entirely their supply of provisions. In this emergency they were about to cast lots who among the passengers and crew should be first sacrificed as food for the rest, when providentially they were relieved.

On landing at Philadelphia he set out for the south, and settled this time, as is indicated by endorsements on his sermons, at Wissboro SC and from there he removed to Laurens Dist SC performing missionary work in various sections.

His memoranda show that he baptized the children of a number of families all along the line of his travels from Wiltonburg in the eastern part of the state, up through Fairfield to Laurens. Here he commenced his labors on Indian Creek contributing to the establishment of the Gilders Creek Presbyterian Church.

At Rocky Springs he baptized the McClintocks & other families. Also at Little River opposite the Milton Store house and still at a place he called Concord where in all probability sprung up the beginning of Little River church.

Then again he visited a neighborhood on Cain Creek SW part of Lawrence Dist., where he baptized the Brysons & others, the incipient material of Liberty Springs Church - also at another location, called Rabun Creek and at Fairview. In many of his extended travels performing these labors, he encountered great hazards and hardship.

from the condition of the country

As might be expected, at the close of the Revolutionary War, demoralization, banditti and wild beasts lurked through the forests and along the traveler's paths.

It is related among his descendants that frequently traveling those long intervals which occurred between the sparse settlements, he had to lie out alone with his horse, when in the dead hours of the night, the eager soul of the wolf "off" rising upon his ear, appalling; and yet as appears, without molestation.

This was he employed, preaching, baptizing and probably in some instance organizing churches or gathering up the material out of which they were subsequently organized.

During the most of this period his headquarters were generally at old Mr John

McClintock I, his distant relative from the old country:-

In 1796 at the age of fifty years,
he married John McClintock's daughter, Martha. She being at this time 31 years of age. He now settled two miles below Clinton, selecting the place as central to his labors. They had a son Robert and a daughter Mary. After 4 or 5 years at this place or about 1801, conceiving it more agreeable and eligible he moved to a place near Scuffletown. Here he resided until the day of his death, July 22, 1803.

There is a John McClintock & probably his wife buried in the Lawrence Cemetery.
Between Clinton and Whitmire there is an old cemetery in which some McClintocks are buried.

The legend is seven McClintock brothers came over from Belfast, Ireland. They had lived in Scotland but had moved to Ireland. We think that our family resided near Glasgow, Scotland (from Lowlands).
Some of the brothers settled in Penn.

James McClintock, eldest child of Margaret Simpson and John McClintock I was drowned, near his residence - He was trying to ford the swollen waters of Warner Creek with a wagon and a team of mules when one of the mules missed his footing and fell into the swift current - In the effort to rescue the team, he became entangled in the harness and was drowned before help could be summoned in ~~1805~~ 1810.

The Rev Robert McClintock, a Presbyterian minister, a learned theologian (graduate of Glasgow University) and an inspired and zealous crusader and the organizer of Presbyterian congregations in North and South Carolina. It is related that a short time after the Law family emigrated to Newberry District Sc.

✓ John McClintock II rode down with the Rev Robert McClintock, who was then preaching at Hildens Creek to see the "New Irish" as they were called and in a few months afterwards married one of them - Jane Law. In 1865 John McClintock II was living on the road from Scuffletown to Sandy Ford a mile or two from the former place, Scuffletown Limestone District Sc. He was a farmer with his children and grand children around him, deeply and judiciously devoted to the interest of the church, being himself a member of the Associate Reformed Synod of the South.

Robert McClintock, minister from Ireland went to Catholic Church, Chester District, Sc around 1785. He was regarded by the people as New-Lights was not employed as regular supply. Sometimes he preached in the church and sometimes in private houses. He afterward went to preach at Concord in Fairfield, at Indian Creek in Newberry and at Rocky Spring in Limestone. He was a man of great activity and usefulness in all his widely extended fields of labor. His register of baptisms embraces the names of two thousand and eighty persons.

(The New Lights had loose latitudinarian views that were troubling the churches in the old countries)

McClintock Family Homes - written by John Lafayette McClintock (5th Generation) in 1953

John McClintock I bought 290 acres of land at Scuffletown, in 1773.
probably from Fowler and built a home.
It must have been very large - there remains the evidence of two chimney mounds at each end and the chimney of the kitchen which was built away from the house. A brick from the chimney has been found and is in the possession of John Huston McClintock (6th Generation). It is broken and has the numeral 7, indicating that it was in the date of the corner stone of the house. John and also his son John McClintock II were blacksmiths.
Evidence of where the road entered the shop area and the site of two immense kilns, remains where coke was burned to operate the shop. It seems evident that tools of all kinds were forged and brick was baked here. John McClintock died in 1796.
At his death, his wife made disposition of all of the land except 3 acres which comprised the house and shop.

John McClintock II built a two story house on some of this land that his father owned on the left side of the present black top road, located by a chimney and earth mound brick near a spring - the old spring, tho' six feet removed, remains with the rocks which surrounded it there still in the original place. This was later known as the old Taylor place.

Elizabeth (Betty) McClintock (one of John McClintock II's daughters) married James Taylor and they lived there -

This land is now owned by Harold William McClintock (sixth Generation) He has built a beautiful brick home.
(1975)

John McClintock III's Mother Jane Law McClintock remarried - Hamilton (buried in Old Fields Cemetery) and he and his step father did not agree - His uncle, Billy Mills advised him to go to Columbia to his Uncle Billy Law, his mother's brother, with whom he made his home. Later he came back to Scuffletown, bought land and married Mary Martin of Charleston. He died in the home that he built leaving the property to his wife Mary Martin McClintock. She sold it to her son William Aiken McClintock. The house was built about $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ mile from his father's home. Age has taken its toll of the two story house. nothing remains but one intact chimney, two chimney mounds, the house was painted white and conveniently arranged. His son John died while young and a dove came into the room and alighted on the head of the bed at his death. The land later belonged to David Martin McClintock in the army - He was made a Corporal on April 14, 1861 - served four years - He came out of the army April 9, 1865 married Frances Nesbitt perhaps in June of that year and left his father's home to live in Enoree in the home of his wife - That home "Mountain Shoals" remains in perfect preservation. The spring was at the foot of the hill, enclosed in a concrete house about 18 by 30 - There meat and dairy products were kept the year around. The water ran through the building in concrete troughs thereby constituting a cold water cooling system. William Aiken was overseer of James Nesbitt's vast farming interests, store, flour and grist mills. James Nesbitt was enabled to move to Spartanburg to educate his young children. The first six children were born at Mountain Shoals. At this time John McClintock III had passed away. His wife Mary Martin McClintock lived in Enoree one year and was unhappy, so with her son William and his family returned to the Scuffletown McClintock home (her home) - they resided there until land in Ora was purchased from Elizabeth Fleming (Hallie Fleming's widow) Hallie Fleming obtained the property from the widow of Dr Sam Hunter. He having left before death to practice in Greenville. Deed called for 175 acres. A house was built, the family then came to Ora around 1888 - 89. The land was cleared to build this house. Two chestnut stumps remain under it to this day - the last three children were born in Scuffletown. When they moved to Ora, David Martin was so small that they wouldn't let him carry anything but the coffee pot. There Captain McClintock resided until his death.

This beautiful white home today belongs to the Charles Hills - (1980)

William Dibbs McClintock (4th generation) lived at Mountain Shoals, Ervosee with his wife Frances Nesbitt's parents when they married. Their first child, John McClintock was born there. They moved to a large two story house on their farm (it has burned since then). Later they built a house in Ora. At that time the main road was across the railroad from the house. This was a two story house with a porch upstairs and one downstairs. The long kitchen was built separate on the back of the house as was the custom at that time and the back of the kitchen was used to cure and store meat, smoke hams, etc. When they moved into their new home David was too little to carry anything but the coffee pot. Their preacher, Haddon, teased David by calling him a little girl because of the dresses or aprons that little boys had to wear back in those days and told him that he was going to bring him a pair of his pants for his mother to make him some trousers out of. William graduated from Erskine College and was in the legislature from Lowndes County. He farmed his entire life. Frances graduated from Lawrenceville Female College.

Thomas Augustus) McCarley (3rd generation) went out west building railroads when he was young, before he married, and made a good bit of money.

David Martin McClintock (5th generation) attended Easkeie College - He lived in Ora and farmed all of his life - He enjoyed cooking, making diversity candy, and canning fruits and vegetables.

Alice McCarley lived near Highland Home church. Her mother died when she was eight years old - Her father broke up house keeping. She and her father boarded and moved around for her to go to school. She enjoyed staying in the house and reading books instead of getting outside and playing when she was young. She attended Laurensville Female College, Williamson, which was later changed to Lander College, and she graduated from Chisolm College, which at that time was in Greenville, when she was fifteen years old. She was very musical, played by ear and also took music lessons through college. She taught school for a short time at Gray Court and taught piano lessons there and after she married in Ora.

David and Alice McClintock bought their one story house in 1906 from James McClintock (David's brother). He had built the house in Ora and was moving to Due West. It had a large porch around two sides of the house with a screened in sleeping porch on the north side. They remodeled the house in 1931, taking off the sleeping porch and adding a second story with a closed in sleeping porch and three other bedrooms.

When Harold McClintock was born in 1918 there was snow on the ground for six weeks. They had to send for the Doctor in the buggy and were afraid that the horse would slip on the ice. They bought their first car a few years later.

Like other plantation homes, "the big House" as the farm hands called it, was surrounded by a number of separate buildings to provide adequate facilities for carrying on a comfortable living in a rural community in that period of history. In the fall at times there were as many as 100 bales of cotton in the back yard. The children enjoyed playing on the bales, and jumping from one to the other and playing hide and seek behind the bales. To complete the rural scene and as a necessity in those times), were the cattle, horses, mules, the hogs, dogs, chickens and guineas - the children liked to search for the guinea nests because they would sometimes contain a peck of eggs as the whole flock laid in one nest, usually a long piece away from the house.

When Augusta was quite small, she and the collie dog ran off and walked up the railroad to Grandfather's house - about a half mile - An Aunt came carrying her home the back path -

David and Alice bought a pony and pony cart for their children - the other young people of the community enjoyed riding the pony and in the pony cart with them.

McClintock Coat of Arms.

Burke's Heraldry.

McClintock; (Irish) Per pale gules and azure, a chevron emmine between three escallops argent.

Crest; A lion passant proper.

Motto;

Dicitur et labore (Diture and labor)

The eminent family of McClintock was founded by Alexander McClintock who migrated from Scotland into Ireland in 1680.

He was the ancestor of the McClintocks of Drumcar, Counties Douth and Donegal. His grandson John was a member of parliament for these sections.

The emmine on the shield showed a high official position.

The lion was considered one of the most honorable charges in blazoning of arms, as it was the symbol of great strength and fortitude.

The escallops (shells) referred to participation in the crusades and valiant service in the Holy Wars in Palestine in the early history of the family.

The term "per per pale" means that the shield is divided in half vertically.

The chevron represented the rafter of a gable of a house and denoted protection. It has given by the army on horseback in the militia.

Two Martin brothers married two Aiken sisters - Capt Edward Martin was a brother of David Martin and his wife Mary was a sister of David Martin's wife Margaret. They were married two years after David and Margaret. Mary Aiken and Elizabeth Martin were bridesmaids to Margaret.

Data from "Martin Family" by Henry Joseph Martin is 1880.

Martins applied for U.S. Government pensions in the Revolutionary War.

Note from Mary Martin of Ora, SC in 1953 - Cousin Margaret and Agnes Aiken of Charleston visited the Capt. McCleistock home in Ora around 1890. Cousin William and Margaret Martin of Charleston also visited the home often in the late 18 hundreds - even by train in later years.

David Martin may have been the son of Henry Martin who died about 1780. His wife was Mary. He received land in Virginia in 1729. Died in Va 1780. (I am not sure of this.)

Tradition has the Nesbitts descended from one John Nesbitt (a Coventer) of Hardbill who was executed in 1685 for his religious convictions. There were six of the Nesbitt brothers who came to this country for religious freedom. They settled in what is now Spartanburg County.

Jonathan Nesbitt's home was about one mile from Welford. He nearly lost his life in the Battle of Cowpens when his gun was shot off at the breach. He also saw service as Acting Commissary.

Near Welford is Nazareth Presbyterian Church, of which he was a member and where he was buried with military honors. His wife sleeps beside him. (Also, his son, John McGrady Nesbitt.)

E. P. McCLINTOCK and WILLIAM A. McCLINTOCK

(The following was copied from Confederate Military History, published by Confederate Publishing Company, 1899. VOL. V. - by Brig. General Ellison Capers.) (Page 719).

"E. P. McClintock, now at Newberry County, S. C., was born in Laurens County, June 11, 1845.

"His father was John McClintock, a native of Laurens County, a farmer by occupation, who died in 1870, and his mother was Mary Martin, a native of Fairfield County, who also is deceased.

"Of the two sons living when the war began both served in the Confederate Army.

"Hon. William A. McClintock, the elder, now a resident of Ora, Laurens County, entered the war in the beginning as a Private in Co. G, Third South Carolina Volunteers, and served with it during the first twelve months. Upon the reorganization in 1862, he re-enlisted for the war, and joined Co. G, Second South Carolina Cavalry, was promoted to Orderly-Sergeant and served at this capacity to the end of the war. Since then his occupation has been that of a farmer. He is highly esteemed and has represented his County in the Legislature. He graduated at the Erskine College, Due West, S. C., in 1859.

"Rev. E. P. McClintock spent his boyhood on a farm in Laurens. He was a very precocious youth and at the tender age of twelve years entered the freshman class of Erskine College, and was a member of the graduating class of 1861; but owing to the war the college was temporarily suspended and the degree of A. B. was not conferred until after the return of peace. In the fall of 1863 he volunteered and joined Co. G, Second South Carolina Cavalry, and served to the end of the war as a Private, participating in all the battles and skirmishes in which his command was engaged while he belonged to it, including Brandy Station, Wilmington and others. For the special courage he received a complimentary furlough home, and before the expiration of the furlough the war ended. After the war he spent three years superintending his father's large farming interests, and in 1868 he entered the Theological Seminary of Erskine College, from which he graduated in 1870, since which time he has been in the Ministry of the Associated Reformed Presbyterian Church, in charge of the church of that denomination at Newberry. He has now been Pastor at that place for twenty-eight years, and as such has greatly endeared himself to his own flock and to the people of Newberry. He is Chaplain of James D. Nance Camp, and is Trustee of Erskine College and Theological Seminary.

Reverend McClintock was married May 17, 1870, to Miss Elizabeth J. Young, daughter of the Rev. J. N. Young, L. L. D., formerly of the faculty of Erskine College, and they have two daughters:

Euphemia, who is vice-principal of the Presbyterian College for Women, of Columbia; and Mary Law, who is professor of English in the State Agricultural College of Florida.

Both are graduates of the Women's College of Baltimore, Maryland.

THE DAVID AIKEN FAMILY OF FAIRFIELD

James Aiken, born in 1733, lived at Ballymena, near the Giant's Causeway, in County Antrim, Ireland. His wife was Elizabeth Reid, who was born in 1743. They emigrated to American some time between 1787 and 1789, being of a group of Protestant Irish immigrants who came together - others being the Laws, McClintocks, and Martins - and settled in the Little River section of Fairfield County.

The Aikens appear to have stayed in the homes of their relatives and friends, who had come previously to Fairfield, for a time. In 1791 James Aiken established a home for himself in Fairfield, buying "a tract of land for 100 pounds sterling, consisting of 200 acres on Leek (sometimes spelled Lick) Creek from John Winn. "(This tract was bounded by lands of John Winn and Captain Buchanan)". In 1797 he bought another "tract of 50 acres situate on the waters of Little River". He died January 6, 1798 at the age of sixty-five, and is buried in the Martin-Aiken burying ground near Milling Cross-Roads in Fairfield County. His wife and the younger children left Fairfield for a time after James Aiken's death and lived with their son, Williams in Charleston. She died October 16, 1803, and is buried beside her husband.

The eight children of the James Aikens, all of whom came over to Fairfield either with their parents or within a short time were: (all born in Ireland)

The county and town of Aiken were named for him. He died in 1831 and is buried in St. Phillips cemetery in Charleston. Was married to Henrietta Wyatt of Charleston in 1801. In 1805, with William's financial assistance, he opened a small store in Winnsboro in the old "Sullivan House". As his stock of goods would need replenishing, he would mount his horse, with saddle bags to hold his clothes, and set out for Philadelphia to buy more stock. These goods were shipped by sailing vessels to Charleston and hauled up to Winnsboro in wagons.

County Scrapbook

John McClintock, a Scotch-Irish Presbyterian, born about 1728 in Ireland, left County Antrim, Ireland, from the port of Larne on the ship James and Mary with his wife, Margaret Simpson and children; James, Margaret, Martha, Mary and John. After a seven-week passage they landed in Charles-Town, S. C., on October 18, 1772. Because of smallpox the entire ship was quarantined for seven weeks. During the quarantine a large house on Sullivan Island served as a hospital.

On January 14, 1773, John McClintock received a land grant near the confluences of Little River, Beaverdam and North Creeks in the Milton section. Later that same year, he moved his family to the Scuffletown section on Warrior Creek near the present location of Ora.

John McClintock provided provisions for the South Carolina Militia and also served as a juror in the upper part of the middle division between the Broad and Saluda Rivers.

His children married into local families: James married Margaret Hutchinson, Margaret married John Hunter, Martha married Rev. Robert McClintock (a relative), Mary married Alexander Mills, John married Jane Law, Elizabeth married "Big" Robert Fleming, Nancy married James Fleming, brother of Robert.

John McClintock died in the late 1790s. His wife, Margaret, died in 1817. Both were buried in the cemetery at Warrior Creek Presbyterian Church now known as Old Fields Presbyterian Church at Ora. Some of their descendants still live in Laurens County.

James McClintock, oldest child of Margaret Simpson and John McClintock, married Margaret Hutchinson, daughter of William Hutchinson, who had come from Ireland. James owned land on Warrior Creek in the Scuffletown area where he farmed. A son, John, was born February 28, 1795. James was drowned in 1804 while washing his horses in Warrior Creek near his mill.

John McClintock married his first cousin, Margaret Hunter, daughter of John Hunter and Margaret McClintock and granddaughter of John Hunter, also a Scotch-Irish Presbyterian who came to 96th District, S. C., from County Antrim, Ireland, and received a "head-right bounty" in 1771—in the Milton area. John lived his entire life in Laurens County. In 1832 he and his wife, Margaret, were charter members of the Laurensville Presbyterian Church, now the First Presbyterian Church of Laurens. After Margaret's death John married Elizabeth Foster Bobo, and later married his third wife, Eliza Teague Fairburn. At his death on July 14, 1880, he was living with his daughter Nancy in Waterloo Township.

John and Margaret McClintock had ten children: John J., William, Samuel and Robert Hamilton—died without marrying. Nancy married William C. Dunn; Margaret married Rev. G. H. Brown; Mary Calista married William G. Madison Jones of Greenwood County, S. C.; Laurence Augustus and John Leland, who married Charlotte Augusta Crews, were killed in the War Between the States. James H. married Mary Catherine Arnold, moved to Cobb County, Georgia, in 1848 and on to Attala County, Mississippi, in 1860. They had 9 children and the name McClintock lives still in Mississippi.
