although the Ohit says Wm.D. Thelson came to Georgia in 1821, it may be a misprint. Perhaps he came in 1831 when his father, Thomas, came.

PORTRY.

ALTERNATION OF THE PARTY OF THE THE POLAR STAR.

Thou radiant star,
That lookest down with glance so calm and bright,
Frot the pure usure depths of Heaven afar,
Pouring thy gentle light.

Thon'rt like a king.
Sitting so high upon the vault of Heaven, nd looking kindly down on everything.
Thou and the glorious seven.

How bright art thou!

To the lone sailor in the raging storm.

When the force wards duck o'er his vessel?

And bathe his shrinking form.

He lifts his eye
To thee, thou gentle, kind, and faithful guide,
And, coming from thy radiant throne on high,
I sace gilds the raging tide.

He blesses thee,
When guided by thy light he nears the
abore. abore,
And when with bearing heart he hopes to see
His well beloved once more.

In deserts wild,
How gladly turns the traveller to three-low often has the weary wanderst amiled.
Thy friendly light to see.

Thou faithful guide: Where is the man whom thou hast led who in the desert or the forming tide.

Inquired of thee the way.

The evening star.
That like the queen sits throughd in the West.
Shines with alight more fair and radiant far On the blue bearen's broast.

But her soft light, Shelters itself behind the Western hale, or on the sable mantle of the night, sier radiance she destile.

But then, like one
Placed on the watch live inm he must obey.
Does never, till the appearated time is done.
Refuse to watch and stay.

Then watchful star.
For ever gazing from thy statum high thile, mounted each upon his other on
The planets roun the sky:

** ** ** ** ** ** ** **

Thy charm less light.

Recives, directs and blesses every such
That looks for guidance to thy malance, be
When neglit surrounds the pole.
