Hello Dan,

(Dan Stevenson, 803-713-0942)

First notice the spelling Rev. is Tennent and Fairfield, SC Tennant's.

DNA test will prove if Tennent's and Tennant's are related somewhere in the past.

Is Rev. William Tennant (mentioned in Presbyterian Church Records) from Charleston, SC or Pennsylvania?

This Rev. William Tennant was born in New Jersey, well educated, came to Charleston, SC and preached throughout the upstate of SC raising support for the American Revolution and denouncing The Church of England.

William Tennent, Sr. (Ireland – NJ), parent of:

William Tennent, Jr. (1705 Ireland -1777 NJ) and Catherine Vanbrugh Tennent (1704-1786) parents of:

Rev. William Tennent, III (1740 NJ, 1777 Sumter, SC), parent of:

William, Charles and three daughters none from Fairfield, SC.

Is William Tennent the father of Benjamin? And is he from South Carolina or Pennsylvania?

As far as I can tell the Fairfield, SC Tennant line goes as follows:

Alexander Tennant (1770's) has the following:
Benjamin, Robert, Alexander, and others.

Robert Tennant (1790 SC – Bef. 1850 Fairfield, SC) and Mary Ann Atchinson had the following:
Benjamin Tennant, Robert T. Tennant, William, and others.

Benjamin Tennant later listed as Benjamin Green Tennant, Sr.
Benjamin Green Tennant, Sr. (1820-1900) and Catherine Corder (1828-1901) had the following:
Benjamin Green Tennant, Jr., Margaret S (never married), Ed (later listed as Ebenezer G).

Benjamin Green Tennant, Jr. (1854-1913) and Rosa (Rosannah) Boyd Tennant (1855-1921) had the following:
Walter D, Maggie E, Mary E, Johnnie J, Rosa C, Chalmers Z, William M, Carrie J, Addie T, Eloise B, and Allen B.

Margaret Elizabeth Tennant married Thomas Edward Phillips

Alexander Tennant (1800 SC - TN) and Elizabeth had the following:
Sarah, Margaret, Jane, George W, Catharine

HISTORY
PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN

By GEORGE HOWE, D. D.,
Professor in the Theological Seminary, Columbia, South Carolina.

PREPARED BY ORDER OF THE SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

VOL. I.

COLUMBIA:
DUFFIE & CHAPMAN.

was not inattentive to the distant churches of South Carolina. Agreeably to a resolution to correspond with foreign churches, it addressed the churches in South Carolina, the letter being prepared by the Rev. Alexander McWhorter, of the presbytery of New York.—(Minutes, p. 399.)

BOOK ELEVENTH.

CHAPTER I.

THE decennium on which we now enter covers most of the stirring period of the American Revolution. And though the method we have pursued, of taking the several churches in detail, is liable to many objections, yet, for the purpose of exhibiting the progress of events in each church, we will endeavor to pursue it, though in many respects little satisfactory to ourselves and perhaps tedious to our readers.

We begin again with the oldest of the churches which were then called Dissenting, and, as we commenced, by giving the history of the Congregational churches, we will go through these before entering on the others.

The INDEPENDENT CHURCH in CHARLESTON was served still by the Rev. John Thomas. But early in the year 1771 his health began to fail, he had leave of absence, was instructed to look out for an assistant, and to request Rev. Mr. Simpson, Mr. Alison, Mr. Martin, and other suitable ministers to supply his pulpit. On the 13th of October, Rev. Mr. Zubly officiated, and the church hearing of Mr. Thomas's increasing indisposition wrote to him, with Drs. Witherspoon and Rogers and Joseph Treat, to recommend a minister. Mr. Treat in reply informs them of Mr. Thomas's death, and that just before his exit he had partly engaged the Rev. William Tennent to undertake the pastoral office among them. The circumstances of Mr. Thomas's life, death, and his character, are thus set forth by Dr. Ramsay, in his History of the Independent church :—

“Rev. John Thomas was born in Wales, and educated at a dissenting academy there. In early life, he was sent from England, by the Rev. Drs. Conder and Gibbons, dissenting ministers of London, to whom the church had applied by letter to procure for them a suitable minister. The Rev. Josiah

Smith preached a funeral sermon on the death of Mr. Thomas, in which he observes as follows :

“He was a man of superior genius, and adorned with many excellent natural gifts. His conceptions were clear, his judgment solid and piercing—he well knew how to distinguish, and had a good taste and relish for, the polite parts of learning. If we consider him as a minister, he prayed as a seraph. His compositions were ingenious, methodical, and rational; he was a man of fire and pungency, nor was he a stranger to the art of addressing the passions. His principles were sound and orthodox—a thorough Calvinist, though he was much on the side of liberty and moderation, and loved good men of all persuasions, yet would he contend for the primitive faith and purity. The guilt, pollution, and propagation of original sin—the divinity of Christ—the redeeming efficacy of his blood—his full and proper atonement—the influences of his spirit—the necessity of faith to a sinner's justification before God, and of good works to his salvation, were doctrines which he often insisted upon, and strongly defended against Arians, Socinians, and others.”

“Mr. Thomas left two daughters, one of whom married Samuel Beach, Esq., the other Adam Gilchrist, merchant; they are both now living (in 1815) and have eight living descendants; his widow is still alive, at the age of sixty-nine years.

“The circumstances of Mr. Thomas's death are worthy of notice, both in a moral and medical view. Six months before he died, he was in good health; but in two or three hours of philanthropic exertion, contracted a chronic disease which brought him to his grave. In the first three months of 1771 he paid particular attention to instruct and prepare for death a man who was condemned to suffer the highest penalty of the law. In the course of his conversations with this unfortunate man, Mr. Thomas had abundant reason to believe that he was a true penitent, and the subject of a saving change. This naturally produced a strong attachment and a disposition to serve him; every kind office was rendered to him while living, and measures were adopted to save him from dissection after he was dead. His body was kept private till the shades of night afforded a screen to carry it over Ashley river to James' Island for interment. Mr. Thomas, with a few religious friends, attended the corpse, and at ten o'clock, p. m., in a cold, blowing March night, consigned it to a grave. Mr. Thomas performed in the open air the religious services usual at funerals. On this solemn but unseasonable occasion he was instantly seized with a violent cold, which speedily produced a spitting of blood, and other symptoms so alarming, that, in the summer following, he obtained leave from his church to go to the northern provinces for the recovery of his health; all was in vain. The adventures of this single night laid the foundation of a consumption, which eventuated in his death at New York, September 29th, 1771, in the twenty-sixth year of his age.”

On the 17th of November the congregation made out a call, expressed in beautiful language, for the ministerial services of the Rev. William Tennent, then settled as pastor of the Congregational church of Norwalk, Conn. This zealous and influential clergyman, the third of the name, was the son of the Rev. William Tennent, of Freehold, New Jersey, who was eminent for his piety, talents, and usefulness, and was the subject of the remarkable trance which is so familiar to all who are acquainted with the biography of the American pulpit. His grandfather was William Tennent of “the Log College” at Neshaminy, the friend of Whitefield. The father and grandfather were both born in Ireland. He was born in Freehold, N. J., in the year 1740; was graduated at the college of New Jersey in 1758, under the presidency of Rev. Aaron Burr; was admitted to the degree of A. M. at Harvard in 1763. He was licensed to preach by the presbytery of New Brunswick between 1761 and 1762, and was ordained by the same presbytery in 1762-3. He preached in the bounds of Hanover presbytery, Va., some six months. In 1764 he was invited to settle as the colleague of Rev. Moses Dickinson, then advanced in years, at Norwalk, Conn. To this he consented on condition of his retaining his connection with the presbytery. The presbytery of New Brunswick took measures for his installment over the church in Norwalk, to which the congregation objected, believing it to be an attempt to draw them under the power of presbytery. Mutual explanations being made, Mr. Tennent was in due time installed, still retaining his connection with presbytery. After an acceptable ministry of six and a half years, he was invited to the Independent church in Charleston, having previously been invited to Boston as a colleague to Rev. Ebenezer Pemberton—(Webster, p. 402); and though his transfer was strenuously resisted by his people, he was at length released from his charge and repaired to the city of Charleston. Job Palmer, afterwards a deacon in this church, and the father of Rev. Dr. B. M. Palmer, sen., came out with him. His address to the congregation, April 12th, 1772, on accepting the call, shows his ability and energy of character. He was received with great favor, and wielded a commanding influence both in the pulpit and out of it. October 25th, of the same year, Mr. Tennent suggested to his congregation to build an additional house of worship. In a written speech, drawn up with his characteristic ability, he showed, 1st. That the exigencies of Charleston required it, there not being room in the church edifices then existing for more than two-thirds of the white population. The price of pews was enormous, some in the Church of England having been sold for £1900. 2d. The exigencies of the congregation demanded it. It had grown to its utmost extent of church accommodations, and their children would be compelled to resort to other churches. 3d. The dissenting interest required it. Numbers challenge respect and are secure from oppression. A new church opened commands its assembly. 4th. Two ministers were needed in such a place, and under such a climate. The danger of division would be small. Moreover, a sum of money was already subscribed for the object amounting to £9,000. The congregation acceded to the proposition, and appointed a building committee, who estimated the cost of the new church at £13,000, recommended that both houses should be common property of the society, the ministers serving each alike. The morning sermon in one church should be the afternoon sermon in the other. All these measures were adopted, and a new house, sixty-five feet by fifty in the clear, the walls twenty-eight feet in height, was built in Archdale-street, covered in and the pews put in before the war of the Revolution. Various unsuccessful attempts were made to obtain a colleague to Mr. Tennent. In 1773 Rev. Daniel Jones, of Philadelphia, was invited, and though he discouraged it, they made out a formal call, promising him a salary of £200 sterling, or £1400 currency, which call was enforced by letters both from Rev. Josiah Smith and Mr. Tennent. This call Mr. Jones declined. February 27th, 1775, they wrote to Robert Stewart to visit them as a candidate. He promised to do so when licensed. The same year Mary Lamboll and Josiah Smith, junior, made over property adjoining the new church, which, under no pretence whatever was to be withdrawn from the use of the congregation, worshipping at "the White Meeting-house" in Meeting-street. The number entitled to vote at this time was sixty-eight, of whom twenty were members in full communion.

Mr. Tennent, though devoted to his clerical duties, could not be indifferent to the great issues of the American Revolution. It early took firm hold of all his powers, and to it he devoted no small share of his energies, putting forth in its cause some of his most eloquent efforts. He rarely introduced its topics into the pulpit, but elsewhere he was its earnest and enthusiastic advocate. A favorite of the people, they elected him a member of the provincial congress, and afterwards of the commons house of assembly. "In the different hours of the same day his voice was occasionally heard both in his church and the state house, addressing different audiences with equal animation, on their spiritual and temporal interests." He was appointed with others as a committee of intelligence to communicate to the back country every kind of necessary information, with power to hire horses and send expresses for this purpose. In the same year, 23d July, 1775, with the Hon. W. H. Drayton he was commissioned by the committee of safety to make a progress through the back country to explain the causes of present disputes between Britain and the colonies, to secure a general union; and they were authorized by Henry Laurens, president, "to call upon officers of the militia and rangers for assistance, support, and protection."

On the 19th of April the battle of Lexington was fought, and the news of this engagement was forwarded by express from one committee of safety to another, or, where they did not exist, to prominent individuals in the different localities. The communications of each committee were enclosed in the one next in the order of progress, till in twenty-one days the original news, enveloped in the missive of the first committee, reached its destination, the city of Charleston. The originals of these were preserved until the burning of Columbia, February 17th, 1865, and the evidences of interest they disclose are very exciting. "Disperse the material passages through all your parts." "If you should be at a loss for a man and horse the bearer will proceed to the next station." "For God's sake send the man on without the least delay, and write to Mr. Marion to forward it by night and by day." The country was roused as by the sound of a trumpet. The night after the arrival of these despatches in Charleston, the royal arsenal was seized and the arms removed. The general committee summoned the Provincial Congress, and they set on foot an "association" in which those who subscribed to it bound themselves by "every tie of religion and honor" to stand up in defence of South Carolina and their country. They resolved to raise troops, and appointed a committee of safety, to whom they delegated some portion of their authority, and a general committee with legislative and advisory powers to act in the present emergency. They recommended to this general committee to have "the association" signed throughout the province and to demand their reasons of the recusants; of non-subscribers an oath of neutrality was demanded, and, at least in the town of Charleston and its vicinity, those who refused were disarmed and confined to their houses and plantations. Committees of gentlemen were appointed in the several districts and parishes of the province to consult for the public safety, and the committee of intelligence addressed them all in a circular letter rehearsing the events that had occurred, and calling upon the inhabitants everywhere to associate and pledge their lives and fortunes in defence of their rights as freemen against the tyranny which oppressed them.

It was under these circumstances that Wm. Henry Drayton and Rev. William Tennent, accompanied by Col. Richard

Richardson, of the Camden regiment, Joseph Kershaw, and the Rev. Mr. Hart of the Baptist church, set out from Charleston the 2d of August, 1775, on a tour through the upper country, to strengthen the friends of resistance and to win over the wavering. On the 5th they reached "the Congaree Store," in the vicinity of Granby, where after sermon the people were addressed on public affairs. Mr. Tennent then crossed the Congaree and addressed a crowd assembled for a public election. He visited the churches of Jackson's Creek, Fairfield, and of Rocky Creek, Chester; he accompanied the Rev. Mr. Alexander to his preaching places—to Beersheba on the head waters of Bullock's Creek, in York, to another meeting-house on Thicketty, thence to Goude-lock's, and to the general muster at Ford's on the Enoree; thence to James Williams's, elder in the church of Little river, and the Col. Williams who fell at King's Mountain, where he preached for Mr. Creswell at Little river, and then at his other church at Ninety-six. On the 31st he preached at "one of Mr. Harris's preaching sheds," at Boonsborough on Long Cane Creek, Abbeville, and on the 2d of September at Bull Town meeting-house, fifteen miles from the Indian line, to one of the most crowded assemblies he ever saw. On all these occasions, after the religious services were over, he harangued the people on the state of the country, gave them a "touch of the times," was led often into ample discussions, and obtained subscriptions to the association. Sometimes Drayton, Richardson, or Hart was with him, but often he was alone. In this tour he encountered Fletcherall, the Cunninghams, and Brown, leaders of the Tories, and many of their followers. On one occasion he employed himself in raising a company of mounted rangers and three companies of volunteers. At Fort Charlotte, below Vienna on the Savannah, he gave orders for the erection of platforms, mounting the cannon, and preparing everything for defence, reviewed the troops, addressed them, prayed with them, and so took his departure. Similar vigilance, activity, and quick observation were exhibited on his return home. He visited Capt. Hammond at his "forted house," describes the fortified houses of Augusta, strives to obtain a meeting at New Savannah, in the neighborhood of Beach Island, crosses Briar Creek in Georgia, and returns home, crossing from the Georgia side at the ferry of the "Two Sisters."—(Drayton's Hist. of South Carolina, 1; Gibbs' Documentary Hist.)

Had our space permitted, we would have given extended extracts from the interesting and exciting journal of this tour, because it illustrates so much the character of the man, as persevering, public spirited, energetic, and fearless; eloquent and convincing when he opened his mouth to speak; because it shows the trusts confided to him and the influence he exerted; and above all because it reveals so much concerning the condition of the upper country at the opening of the Revolution, and shows the conflict of opinion and the views held as to public duty in the region over which he passed. It is very evident that this journey of Messrs. Tennent, Drayton, and their companions was of eminent service to the interests of civil liberty; that it brought many over to the cause of the colonies who would otherwise have taken up arms for the king; that it assisted honest but wavering minds to reach opinions which they afterwards steadfastly maintained, and for which they periled their lives. The country they traversed was the most disaffected portion. Dr. Ramsay says the non-subscribers to the association in Charleston amounted to about forty, who in great part were officers living on salaries paid by the king, and that the great body of non-subscribers were found between the Broad and Saluda rivers.

We find Mr. Tennent after this engaged in the duties of his vocation as a minister of Christ amid the events of the Revolution, which were becoming every day more stirring. He employed his pen from time to time in the public prints in the cause of civil freedom, and on 11th of January, 1777, he delivered an eloquent speech in the House of Assembly, Charleston, advocating a petition penned by himself, to which had been attached the signatures of many thousands, against the church establishment which the Church of England had always enjoyed under the colonial government. In this speech he contended that ecclesiastical establishments were an infringement on civil liberty.

"That the rights of conscience were unalienable, and all laws binding it are, ipso facto, null and void; that neither those laws which lay heavy penalties on men for their religious opinions, nor those which make odious distinctions between subjects equally good, ought to be tolerated. Of this last, he contended, were the laws prevailing in Carolina. The laws acknowledge the society of the one as a Christian church—it does not know the others at all. Under a reputedly free government, licenses for marriage were refused by the ordinary to any but the established clergy. The law builds superb churches for the one—it leaves the others to build their own. The law enables the one church to hold estates, and to sue for rights; but no dissenting church can sue at common law. They are obliged to deposit their property with trustees. The law vests in the Church of England power to tax their own people and all other denominations for the support of the poor. The sums advanced by the public treasury for the support of the Church of England for the ten years preceding the 31st of December, 1775, amount to £164,027 16s. 3d. The expense of the year 1772 was £18,031 11s. 1d. The religious estate, drawn more or less from the purses of all denominations by law, would probably sell for £330,000. If the dissenters have always made more than half of this government, the sum taken out of their pockets, for the support of a church with which they did not worship, must amount to more than £82,013 within the ten years aforesaid; and a very large sum of their property, in glebes, parsonages, and churches, lies in the possession and improvement of the Church of England. Meanwhile the established churches are but twenty in number, many of them very small, while the number of dissenting congregations are seventy-nine, and much larger, and would pay £40,000 annually could they be furnished with a clergy. But the deficiency of gospel ministers diminishes the sum very considerably. To the objection that dissenters are tolerated, Mr. Tennent asks if it would content our brethren of the Church of England to be barely tolerated, that is, not punished for presuming to think for themselves. To the declaration of those who would keep up the establishment merely as a matter of superiority, he answers that this operates to the abridgment of civil liberty. It was not the three pence on the pound of tea that roused all the virtue of America. It is our birthright that we prize. To the proposal to establish all the denominations by law and pay them equally, he objects that the establishment of all religions would in effect be no establishment at all. Religious establishments discourage the opulence and cramp the growth of a free state. That state in America which adopts the freest and most liberal plan will be the most opulent and powerful, and will well deserve it. With the new constitution let the day of justice dawn upon every rank and order of men in this state. Let us bury what is past forever. We even consent that the estate which she has for a century past been drawing more or less from the purses of all denominations—an estate of no less value than three hundred and eighty thousand pounds—remain in her quiet possession and be fixed there. Let her only for the future cease to demand pre-eminence. We seek no restitution. Let her be contented with her superb churches, her spacious burying-grounds, her costly parsonages, her numerous glebes, and other church estates, and let her not now insist upon such glaring partiality any longer. It is demanded that this be delayed till a proper time. I think if the time is left to them, it will prove as it did to the man the time of whose execution was left to himself: it so happened that all the persuasions of the executioner could never make him believe that the time present was proper. Is it not a fact that we are now reviewing the constitution; that what was designed only as a pro tempore affair may become so perfected as to be fit to stand? If this matter is not now attended to, will not the Church of England be established by law under the new constitution and become the constitutional church? Must we sit still out of mere compliment? By some it is said to be dangerous to grant this request at the present time. But are we reduced to that situation that it is dangerous to do common justice? Will the danger arise from the dissenting denominations? No: it answers the prayer of their petitions. Will the danger arise from the Church of England? I have the pleasure of knowing too many of them to think so. Many of them have signed the petition. Many more have declared their sentiments in the most liberal terms. They do not desire any longer to oppress their brethren. Grant them the prayer of this petition; grant it in substance if not in the very expression. Let it be a foundation article in your constitution, 'That there shall be no establishment of one religious denomination of Christians in preference to another. That none shall be obliged to pay to the support of a worship in which they do not freely join.' Yield to the mighty current of American freedom and glory, and let our state be inferior to none on this wide continent in the liberality of its laws and in the happiness of its people."

Such is an outline of the noble and effective speech delivered by Mr. Tennent in the House of Assembly while the new constitution was under consideration. The civil revolution of which he was so earnest an advocate, brought with it this revolution in the government of the church and its entire severance from the control of the State, which the rights of conscience and the principles of popular government so clearly demand.

Mr. Tennent did not long survive these efforts in favor of ecclesiastical and civil freedom. His father, William Tennent, senior, of Freehold, New Jersey, a minister of singular piety and usefulness, whose name is widely known for the trance in which he lay for a long time, apparently dead, but from which he recovered, in which he seemed to himself to be caught up to the third heaven and to behold things which it was not lawful to utter—this venerable man died on the 8th of March, 1777. In the course of the following summer, he went to Freehold to bring to his own home his widowed and aged mother. He had reached the high hills of Santee, about ninety miles from Charleston, on his way home, when he was attacked with a nervous fever which terminated his life. He died on the 11th of August, 1777, in the thirty-seventh year of his age, prematurely cut off, as we are wont to say, in the very noon-tide of his usefulness. "I was with him," says the Rev. (afterwards Dr.) Richard Furman, in a letter to Mrs. Tennent, "in his last moments—his life went gently from him, almost without a struggle or a groan. He told me almost in the last words he spoke, that his mind was calm and easy, and he was willing to be gone."

The testimonies to his character by his contemporaries show the high estimation in which he was held. Mr. Simpson met with him May 14th, 1772, before he, Mr. S., left the province for Scotland, and speaks of him as a "very worthy and excellent minister of Christ, very catholic, a fine scholar, a polite gentleman, a real exercised Christian." On the 31st of May he attended in the forenoon "the White" or "New England meeting-house," where, says he, "I heard Mr. Tennent preach an excellent sermon from Phil. iv. 5, last clause, 'The Lord is at hand.' Was delighted to hear such evangelical preaching, and so great an attachment to our Lord and Saviour."

"Few preachers," says Rev. Hugh Allison of James Island, in a sermon occasioned by his death, "had a more majestic and venerable presence, or a more winning and oratorical address. Animated with a sacred regard for the honor of his divine Master, and the salvation of precious, immortal souls, he spoke the word with all boldness. A lively imagination, added to a careful study of the Scriptures, enabled him to bring forth out of his treasure things new and old; yet he never entertained his audience with scholastic niceties or subtle questions, which minister strife and endless disputation, rather than godly edifying, which is in faith. Elegance of style, majesty of thought, and clearness of judgment, appeared in his discourses, and concurred to render them both pleasing and instructive. Or shall we view him as a patriot? His honest, disinterested, yet flaming zeal for the country's good demands from us a tribute of respect. Impressed with a sense of the justice, greatness, and vast importance of the American cause, he engaged in it with an ardor and resolution which would have done honor to an old Roman. For this, indeed, he was censured, and perhaps too liberally, even by his friends. In many of his speeches, which he delivered in the Provincial Congress and General Assembly, of which he was successively a member, he displayed great erudition, strength of argument, generosity of sentiment, and an almost boundless eloquence. His natural genius was prodigiously strong and penetrating; and the unavoidable consciousness of his native power made him sanguine, bold, and enterprising. Yet the event proved that his boldness arose not from a partial, groundless self-conceit, but from a true self-knowledge. Upon fair and candid trial, faithful and just to himself, he judged what he could do; and what he could do, when called to do it, he attempted, and what he attempted he accomplished. But Mr. Tennent's principal ornament was his unaffected and substantial piety. He was remarkably humane and benevolent in his disposition, and possessed every personal grace and qualification that could attract the esteem and reverence of his fellow creatures. He was a kind, affable, and tender husband; a prudent, cautious, and indulgent parent; a generous and compassionate master, and a faithful, affectionate, and steady friend. His appearance in company was manly and graceful; his behavior genteel, not ceremonious; grave, yet pleasant; and solid, but sprightly too. In a word, he was an open, conversable, and entertaining companion, a polite gentleman and devout Christian at once."

He left five children: two sons, William and Charles, and three daughters. One of his daughters married Mr. Charles Brown, one Dr. Joseph Hall Ramsay, and one Mr. Samuel Smith. The church erected a monument to his memory in their Archdale-street house of worship, of which he was the father. On it is the following inscription:

"In memory of the Rev. WILLIAM TENNENT, A. M., pastor of this Church,
and principally instrumental in the erection of this building, dedicated to the worship
of Almighty God,
who died at the High Hills of Santee, August 11th, 1777,
in the thirty-seventh year of his age.
He was distinguished for quickness of perception, solidity of judgment,
energy and firmness of mind,
for inflexible patriotism
and ardent public spirit,
for the boldness with which he enforced
the claims of the Deity,
and vindicated the rights of man,
as a preacher he was prompt,
solemn, instructive, and persuasive—
Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

[1770-1780.]

This monument was transferred to the interior wall of the Independent or "Circular" church when it was refitted in 1858.

Several descendants of Rev. William Tennent yet survive in the city of Charleston and elsewhere, and manuscript copies of his sermons are in existence in the hands of sundry persons.

The congregation do not appear to have remitted their efforts during the lifetime of Mr. Tennent to obtain a colleague pastor. On the 9th of March, 1777, five months before the death of Mr. Tennent, they directed a letter to be written to Dr. Rodgers of New York, whom they had called before in the year 1765, inviting him to a temporary settlement, urging that New York was then occupied by British troops, and that a wide field of usefulness was opened before him in Charleston. They hastened the work on the church in Archdale-street, that it might be commodious for worship. They continued their correspondence also with Mr. Stewart, who at length wrote, discouraging their efforts to obtain his services. On the 17th of August Mr. Edmonds preached for them, and announced the death of Mr. Tennent. On the 31st a call was made out to Dr. Rodgers to become their pastor as the successor of Mr. Tennent, and was signed by the congregation. The salary of Mr. Tennent was continued to his family through the year, and the funeral sermons of Mr. Allison and Mr. Hart on Mr. Tennent were requested for publication. During the remainder of this and the following year their supplies were irregular, and there were frequent adjournments of the congregation without preaching.* In January of the following year, 1778, the constitution of the church, drawn up by Dr. Ramsay, and presented on the 30th of November, 1777, was adopted. The title of the church was declared to be, "The Independent or Congregational Church worshipping in Meeting and Archdale-streets." And it was further declared that "the denomination of this church, the mode of divine service therein, and the government thereof by its own members and supporters, independent of all extrinsic authority, as stated in the 9th, 10th, and 11th articles, shall forever remain unalterable, and no part shall be altered but by the concurring voice of two-thirds of the members and supporters thereof." On the 22d of March Mr. Richard Hutson was commissioned to apply to Rev. Mr. McWhorter to become their pastor, and to offer the same terms as were offered to Dr. Rodgers, and in case of his failure, to apply to Rev. Mr. Duffield, or to some other. On Sunday the 3d of May, the congregation ordered the eight doctrinal articles, the consideration of which had been postponed at a previous meeting, to be entered in the church-book as fundamental articles. On Sunday the 17th, they subscribe the five doctrinal articles of the state, and resolve to secure an act of incorporation, and add three more articles. On Sunday, July 5th, they invite the Rev. Messrs. Piercy and Hill to preach for them, and on the 13th make out a call to the Rev. Alexander McWhorter, D. D., of Newark, New Jersey, with a salary of £2,100. A letter was addressed to the moderator of the presbytery of New York, and another to the church at Newark, urging them to accede to their wishes in relation to Dr. McWhorter, 1. Because of the melancholy state of religion in the state and city; 2. On account of the great opportunity of usefulness afforded by this pastorate; 3. They plead the infant state of literature, and the great advantages which must accrue to civil liberty, and the interests of learning and religion over the whole state, from the established reputation of Dr. McWhorter. On the 20th of September they were ministered to by Rev. Mr. Henderson, and received the letter of Dr. Rodgers declining their call. He was requested to hold it still under consideration, as the destruction of New York might induce him to cast in his lot among them. The salary offered was augmented to £4,000 "during these dear times." On the 20th of January, 1779, they received an interesting letter from Dr. Rodgers, dated at Sharon, Conn., whither the ravages of war had driven him, declining their call, and the congregation continued dependent on such supplies as could be obtained. Charleston was again threatened by the British general Prevost, who had crossed the Savannah on his march towards Charleston. The inhabitants, under the direction of Lieutenant-Governor Bee and the council, made every effort to fortify the city landward. The suburban houses were burned, and lines of defence and an abbatiss were extended from Ashley to Cooper rivers, across Charleston Neck. The enemy, however, though they approached the city and held parley with the garrison, did not make the expected attack. It was on this occasion that Major Benjamin Huger, who had ventured with a party of men without the lines, was fired on and killed by his own countrymen in mistake. We still find the church laboring to keep up its religious services in the midst of these alarms. On the 18th of July they extended an invitation to Rev. Mr. Edmonds and Dr. Percy of the Episcopal church, to fill their pulpit till the following October.

Of the CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH at WAPPETAW, in Christ's Church parish, the notices continue to be very scanty. The Rev. John Martin was its minister in the beginning of this decennium. Mr. Zubly says, writing to Dr. Stiles of Yale College, January 30th, 1772, "I also send you a dissenter's Address to Dissenters, by the Rev. John Martin, A. M., a member of the presbytery and minister on Wando Neck."—(Stiles' MSS., Yale College.) About this time Mr. Martin removed to the Wiltown church. There is in existence a manuscript addressed to the Independent church in Charleston, when the Wappetaw church applied to that church to send its pastor and delegates to aid in the ordination and installation of Rev. Mr. Allen.* Mr. Tennent speaks of the obligations of the city church in Charleston to the church at Wappetaw for the large sum of money they had contributed to aid the former in their schemes of building, and speaks of them as of the same sentiments with themselves. The Rev. Moses Allen, to whom reference is made, was born in Northampton, Mass., September 14th, 1748, was graduated at the college in New Jersey in 1772; and was licensed by the presbytery of New Brunswick, February 1st, 1774, and recommended by them as an ingenious, prudent, and pious man. On his way to the south he spent some days with his friend James Madison of Virginia, where he was solicited to pass the winter. Pursuing his way, however, he arrived in Christ's Church parish, South Carolina, where he was ordained on the 16th of March, 1775, by Mr. Zubly, Mr. Edmonds, and William Tennent, and installed as pastor of the Independent or Congregational church at Wappetaw. He preached his farewell sermon to this church on the 8th of June, 1777, and removed to Midway church, Liberty county, Georgia, to which place he had been called. The British army under General Prevost dispersed his congregation in 1778, burned the house of worship, and the dwelling-houses of several of the people, and destroyed the rice then in stacks. In December he was taken prisoner at Savannah, and instead of being sent to Sunbury on parole with the continental officers, he was sent on board the prison-ships. He was chaplain of the Georgia brigade, and his animated exertions in the pulpit and the field had incurred the peculiar resentment of the British; for notwithstanding his clerical profession he was among the foremost in the hour of battle, and the post of danger was to him the post of honor. Wearied of his confinement in his loathsome quarters, he sought to escape by throwing himself into the river and swimming to an adjacent point, but was drowned in the attempt, on the evening of February 8th, 1779, at the age of thirty years. His body was washed on a neighboring island, found by some of his friends, who requested boards of the captain of a British vessel to make a coffin, but could not procure them.—(Allen's Biog. Dictionary, and J. B. Mallard's History of Midway Church.)

* Mr. Carter, in his pamphlet, "The Claims of Wappetaw," p. 6, says in 1770 or 1771. But Mr. Tennent did not receive his call till November, 1771, nor commence his labors in Charleston till April, 1772; nor was Mr. Allen ordained till 1775.

Rev. Mr. Atkins succeeded Mr. Allen, but at what interval we are not able to say. His melancholy end belongs to the next decennial period of this history.

CHAPTER II.

THE Congregational church of DORCHESTER and BEECH HILL had probably but a feeble existence at this time. Archibald Simpson spent Lord's-day, the 14th of January, 1770, at Beech Hill, and administered the Lord's Supper and the ordinance of baptism. In his MS. diary he says, "On account of the severity of the weather, concluded to put two sermons into one. There was a large and full congregation, a most serious and attentive auditory." He thanked them for their pressing invitation to preach regularly for them, plead his great distance and other duties, and recommended them to secure the services of Mr. Edmonds, who had left Georgia and come to live fifteen or sixteen miles from them on his wife's estate, and to preach around in vacant places. He recommended Mr. Edmonds to them in the warmest manner. He had recommended to them to repair their meeting-house at Beech Hill. This they could not do unless he would collect for them. He promised to read their address to his congregations. Mr.

ancy in the statements as to whether Campbell or Martin came first in order. The accounts sent up to the General Assembly put Campbell first. The other account says he preached one year, and then left because of the dissatisfaction of the people; that they then continued almost destitute until the presbytery of South Carolina was set off from the presbytery of Orange. About the time of Mr. Martin's coming to preach among them, and for years afterwards, there was a wonderful addition made to the number of inhabitants within the bounds of the congregation by emigrants from Ireland. But the influx of these emigrants tended rather to weaken than to increase the strength of this congregation. Some were Covenanters, a few were Seceders, and some were what were called "New Lights," who entertained those loose and latitudinarian views of doctrinal truth which had prevailed to such a degree in Scotland and Ireland.

PURITY CHURCH is situated nearly in the centre of Chester district, about two miles from the court-house, borders upon the congregation of Catholic church, and has been united with it under the same pastorate in times past. It was originally known by the name Bull Run. As a congregation it presented to the presbytery of Orange a call for the labors of James Campbell, which call he accepted in connection with one from Catholic congregation. He remained with Catholic one year and with Purity one year and six months, according to the statement we have before rehearsed. After the removal of Mr. Campbell the congregation continued in a very broken and crippled state, owing greatly to the war, nor did it at all revive until the return of peace.

LITTLE RIVER CHURCH, in Laurens district, near the line of Newberry, continued to be served during the early part of this period by Rev. James Creswell, who also labored in the congregation of Duncan's Creek, in the northeastern part of the district, and in Fairforest church, in the edge of Union. He was an occasional preacher at Rocky Creek, now Rock church, Abbeville, till the time of his death. He was licensed by Hanover presbytery at Tinkling Spring, May 2d, 1764, and ordained at Lower Hico, North Carolina, October 6th, 1765. He settled near Island Ford on the Saluda. Mr. Tennent, in his journal, August 24th, 1775, speaks of him also as minister at Ninety-Six. He was a man of more than ordinary activity in his calling, if we may judge from the pulpits he filled, their distances apart, and the large number of carefully-written sermons left at his death. These were kept by his son in perfect preservation for more than half a century, and at last were destroyed by those mischievous enemies of old manuscripts, the rats. A few exist, not much mutilated, in the hands of his grandson, D. Creswell, of Eutaw, Alabama, written in a small, compact, and beautiful handwriting, and in an easy and scholarly style. In the memorable tour of William Henry Drayton and Rev. William Tennent, Mr. Tennent preached at Little River, August 25th, 1775, to a large and concerned audience, and afterwards spoke for two and a half hours on the subject which then agitated the people. He spoke of this congregation as the centre of the opposition in Fletchall's (a wealthy and influential Royalist) regiment. While in this region Mr. Creswell's house was for some days Mr. Tennent's place of rendezvous.

Mr. Tennent also preached, August 27th, at Ninety-Six, from Nehemiah, ii. 3—"Let the King live forever; why should not my countenance be sad, when the city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire." It is easy to see how this text could have been made the occasion of patriotic appeals which should have moved the hearts of the men of that day.

On the 1st of July, 1776, the Cherokees fell upon the frontier settlements, massacring the inhabitants without distinction. They butchered the family of Aaron Smith, killing him, his wife, five children, and five negro men; Mr. Stringer and one child, and three or four of Gilaspy's family. The inhabitants along the Saluda and Rabun's Creek took refuge in Lindley's Fort, where a part of Col. Williams's regiment were assembled. They were attacked by eighty-two Indians and one hundred and two white men, many of whom were painted and dressed as Indians. They were repulsed by the garrison, and in the rout thirteen of the white Indians were made prisoners, nine of whom were painted. They were sent to Ninety-Six for safe keeping. A letter of Rev. James Creswell to Hon. William Henry Drayton, dated July 27th, 1776, details these and other facts connected with the times. "Such of us," says he, "as are in forts have neither suitable guns nor ammunition for the defence of our lives and little ones, as we were obliged to furnish our army with our best arms."

In Mr. Creswell the advocates of a free government found a congenial spirit, and he continued to exert himself against the Tory influence which was so powerful in that region, and had his life been spared, would have been an actor probably in the scenes which shortly ensued. He died, it is believed, in the fall of 1776, and was removed from those scenes of suffering through which the country was about to pass. But his warm advocacy of Republican doctrines and his public deliverances on the liberty of the people subjected his widow and family, through the war, to frequent petty annoyances from the Tories. On one occasion a marauding party came to her house and demanded a well-known horse belonging to her. Her eldest son, a lad of about twelve years of age, overheard the conversation, betook himself quietly to the lot, bridled and mounted the animal, was seen galloping off, was pursued and fired at as he swam across the Saluda. The early death of Mr. Creswell was a great loss to Presbyterianism at that day—as he was a man of ardent character, of good abilities, and thorough education—and irreparable to his widow and four little children, whom he left with scanty means of support. She managed without assistance to give them the best education the times and the country afforded, and could testify that she had never seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread. She lived to a good old age, a model of piety. The descendants of this worthy pair are all either members or supporters of the Presbyterian church.—(MS. Letter of D. Creswell of Eutaw, Alabama.) His name is variously spelled in our ecclesiastical minutes:—James Crisswell, among the absentees of Hanover presbytery, p. 400 of the minutes of the synod of New York and Philadelphia; James Criswell, in the order erecting the presbytery of Orange in 1770, p. 409, of which presbytery he was one of the original members. For Mr. Creswell's interest in education, see p. 340.

CHAPTER V.

BULLOCK'S CREEK Church in York district was favored in obtaining, in the year 1774, the ministerial labors of the Rev. (afterwards Dr.) Joseph Alexander. He was a native of Pennsylvania, and graduated at the college of New Jersey in 1760; was licensed by the presbytery of Newcastle in 1767, and was appointed by the synod of New York and Philadelphia to visit the vacancies in Virginia, the Carolinas, and Georgia, and to remain if possible a half-year, and as much longer as he might think proper. On the 11th of October in the same year, he produced his testimonials to the presbytery of Hanover of his having been licensed and of his having accepted a call from Sugar Creek, North Carolina, with a recommendation from the presbytery of Newcastle for his ordination. He was ordained at Buffalo, Guilford county, North Carolina, by the presbytery met to install Rev. David Caldwell, March 4th, 1768. In May following Mr. Caldwell performed the service of his installation as pastor of Sugar Creek, where he remained till he took charge of Bullock's Creek in York (then Camden) district in 1774. He was a man of fine education and commanding talents, an animated speaker and renowned as a teacher of youth, and his influence extended far beyond the bounds of his own charge. He greatly aided the churches around him in their destitute condition. Among the places which enjoyed his labors was a church on Thicketty Creek in Union district. In Mr. Tennent's journal, August 22d, 1775, there is the following passage: "Set out from Capt. Beers' on Fishing Creek and rode thirteen miles (crossing Broad river at Smith's ford) to a meeting-house of Mr. Alexander on Thicketty, where I found him preaching to a crowd of people assembled to meet me." He was an ardent and fearless patriot. Filled with a sense of his country's wrongs, he did not scruple to advocate its cause in public and private. He was obnoxious therefore to those who favored the royal authorities, but at all times possessed the warm affections of his own people. The few men that were at home and the lads that were not absent from home at the time on public service, habitually repaired to church on Sabbath mornings with their rifles in hand, and around what was known in the next generation as the "Old Log meeting-house," guarded the minister and the worshipping congregation while he preached. Besides serving his own people he is said also to have organized the Nazareth church in Spartanburg district.

BEERSHEBA seems to have been associated very closely with the neighboring church of Bullock's Creek. It also was visited by Mr. Tennent on the same tour. "Went five miles to Beersheba meeting-house, found assembled a large body of people indeed; preached from Rom. v. 5. Afterwards spoke largely on public affairs. The people seemed entirely satisfied and signed the association almost universally. This, I hope, will bring over Col. —'s regiment, let his intentions be what they will." This shows us that the church was flourishing during the early period of the Revolution and the population in general true to the Republican cause. Mr. Alexander, in all probability, officiated at this church through the period of which we speak.
