John THOMPSON departed Larne, Ireland, August 25, 1772, aboard the snow, James and Mary, arrived October 18, 1772. On this passage of the James and Mary, this was one of five (5) ships containing 467 families Rev. William MARTIN brought to South Carolina--the other four were The Lord Dunluce departed Larne, Ireland, October 1772, and arrived in December 1772, at Charleston, South Carolina; the The Hopewell departed (Larne,) Ireland, October 1772 and arrived in December, 1772, at Charleston, South Carolina; the The Pennsylvania Farmer departed Larne, Ireland, October 1772, arrived, Charleston, South Carolina; and the snow, The Free Mason (or Freemason), departed Larne, Ireland, October 1772, and arrived December 1772, in Charleston, South Carolina.

The snow James and Mary was a regular in the flaxseed and passenger trade between New York and Larne for more than a dozen years before the American Revolution. She was owned by James McVICKAR, a merchant in Larne, with different partners at different times. John MOORE had commanded the snow earlier (1765-1770) and became McVICKAR's partner and co-owner of the James and Mary. John WORKAMAN was the ship's captain in 1772.

Since New York was not the most popular destination for passengers, the James and Mary sailed from Belfast Lough for either New Castle, Delaware, or Charleston, SC on her outward voyage and then on to New York.

The James and Mary arrived from New York in April 1772 with a flaxseed cargo. She also brought in a cargo of rum on which duty had not been paid and it was seized by the authorities. (Belfast News Letter, 28 April 1772) She then made a voyage from Larne to Gottenburg in Sweden and returned with a cargo of Swedish herrings. (Belfast News Letter, July 14, 1772)

McVICKAR and MOORE had meanwhile advertised her to sail for Charleston 10 July. (Belfast News Letter, 13 May 1772) The sailing date was postponed to August 8. (Belfast News Letter, July 29, 1772) The James and Mary actually sailed August 25, 1772, according to Alexander CHESNEY's Journal. She took seven weeks to cross the Atlantic, arriving at Charleston on October 18, 1772. (South Carolina Gazette, October 22, 1772) There was an outbreak of smallpox and 5 children died on the voyage. The ship was quarantined for another seven weeks. This was not so bad as it might be, according to CHESNEY, as there was a large house on Sullivan's Island as a hospital for the passengers and they were able to go "back and forwards between the Ship and hospital which made a change, and beguiled the time a little." (Chesney, Journal, 6) Despite the sickness on board, the passengers sent back a letter thanking Captain WORKMAN, which was published in the Belfast paper. (Belfast News Letter, December 22, 1772)
