

This is a copy of the picture sent to me by John Thinn of Seattle. I also copied the back to show you what John had printed there. I took the picture to a photography shop and had a negative, and some copies made for you. It seems to be a picture made of a painting, but John did not say where he had gotten it.

The widely spaced large dark eyes and dark brows are typically Thinn, as is the high forehead. I could show you portraits of Thinn in Wales who have this same look, as does my great-great grandfather William Thinn, and on down to my father and my own son. See picture below.

RICHARD WYNNE

One of South Carolina's most distinguished soldiers during the American Revolution. Youngest brother of John William, All three were founders of Leinsbars.
