Business Meeting

Our year is half over and I think the society can be proud of its accomplishments. We have had some very interesting speakers at our monthly meetings. A number of new books have been purchased pertaining to the area. I wish to thank the numerous members who have sent us a copy of their books, papers, and other genealogical material. These are very valuable to us so our library can continue to grow.

Many members of the society have made a trip to our location at Richburg, some have been helped, others pointed in a direction that can assist them in finding the info they need. We continue to ask for your help if you are planning to visit us. Please give us the time, surnames being researched, etc., for we all have families and part-time jobs, and arrangements have to be made to make your trip successful. There are times we are unable to help due to other commitments, this we regret, but all are volunteers.

From the Bulletin -- many of our articles have reached back into the seventeen hundreds and contain events and people not always found in court records. Often times we have been privileged to print or publish info contained in private records that might not have seen the "light of day", had it not been for our efforts in retrieving them.

Many of our members save their Bulletins, but what about the Bulletins that were issued before you became a member? Past issues contain as much info as present ones, so if our new members want back issues, they are available from 1978 to the present. You can pass them on to family members, friends, or libraries.

Editor's Notes

We have some good news for those of you that have been searching for info contained in the diary of Rev. James Saye. Mr. Charles Bankhead, a great grandson, has given permission for the society to publish the valuable material contained in this diary. Mrs. Mary Ross has graciously agreed to transcribe this material for us. So many births, deaths and marriages are listed, plus other news in the area.

Below is a part of a page from the diary - note the very small writing - so you know the time involved in transcribing this material.

*been for years a communicant of the Presbyterian Church at Fishing

and
Some Related Lines

By Mrs. Lillian Ogletree Forster, Spokane, Washington, a great, great granddaughter of Maj. Joseph McJunkin, Union Co., S.C.
(1755-1846)

We McJunkin descendants have in our possession several writings on this and related lines, and these writings come to us from a variety of sources: histories of the colonial and Revolutionary War days, even events that occurred in the early 1800's; from The Daughters of The American Revolution records; from writings of some Presbyterian ministers who knew our McJunkins and those related by blood and by marriage; also from personal accounts of battles and skirmishes written and spoken by the men who experienced these. It may be that the most detailed record of Maj. Joseph McJunkin's war service in the Spartan Regiment, South Carolina Militia, from Oct. 1, 1755, to the end of hostilities in 1783 appears in his own deposition in federal court on December 23, 1833, when he gave evidence regarding his service for the purpose of obtaining a larger pension that was commensurate with his rank of Major, and also for a disability payment due to the lameness of his right arm from receiving a British musketball in his elbow at the Battle of Mudlick Creek, Newberry District, on March 2, 1781 (this battle is also known as Roebuck's Defeat).

In addition to all of the foregoing excellent sources, we now have on hand a little more that helps us piece it together as far as family history is concerned, and this newest information takes us back into the last half of the 1600's in Scotland and Ulster.

Some of this comes from what I refer to as "Troup County Records," and this is Troup County, Georgia, a county on the west side of that state. Mrs. Angie Kenney of Lake City, Georgia, was in LaGrange, Troup County, Georgia, one Friday in March 1988, so she went to the court house there to see if, by chance, there were any old records on her ancestors. Her great-great grandfather and grandmother lived in that area in the 1800's; they were John Thomas McJunkin, born January 29, 1785, Union County, South Carolina, a son of Maj. Joseph McJunkin (1755-1846) and his wife Ann Jane Thomas (1757-1826), and Margaret Alexander, b. ca. 1783, a daughter of The Rev. Joseph Alexander, b. ca. 1735, d. July 1809, who was minister at Bullock's Creek Presbyterian Church, York District, S.C. in the 1770's and later.

Angie was shown to a nearly empty room in the court house which county employees were clearing out, and in which there were about eight cardboard boxes containing hand-written, homemade histories of old families of the area. She was lucky to locate our ancestors' history; the paper is very old and the faded writing is difficult to read in some places; the booklets were tied with cloth strips to keep them together. There was no available copy machine, no chairs, and no typewriter available, so Angie copied these old records in longhand, sitting on the floor. We are most grateful to her for taking so much time and being so very careful to interpret the old writing as accurately as possible; also for the kindness of the county employee who showed her this room. These old pages will be microfilmed and each sheet will be laminated for preservation by the county archives people. These pages were not dated or signed; Angie and her sister, Doris Beehner, of Naples, Florida, think it may have been John Thomas McJunkin who wrote them, a very good assumption.

The abbreviation "reg." showed up in these records quite often and, since Angie was not sure what it stood for, she wrote it down whenever it appeared, as shown. Louis Morris, our cousin in Atlanta, asked at the Georgia State Archives if anyone knew its meaning, and he was referred to the archives in Troup County; however, since no one has come along with an explanation, I, myself, believe I have learned its meaning. In Ireland, researchers there speak in their reports of "registers," whereas, over here we say "birth record," "marriage record," or "death certificate," or "death record." We do not usually refer to our records here as "registers." For example, the records in Derry Cathedral in the city of Derry, in County Londonderry, Northern Ireland, are entitled The Register of Derry Cathedral, Parish of Templemore, Londonderry . . .

Therefore, I believe that the compiler of the following data was declaring that certain entries in his compilation were in the registers of Ireland. The following has been copied exactly as Angie Kenney took it from the faded pages; all other question marks show that the writing was difficult to discern or that a page was torn or worn.

EARLY SETTLERS, 1600 TO 1700

LaGrange, Troup County, Georgia
March 4, 1988 (Friday)

"One Robert J. McJunkin(1) is known to have immigrated to Pennsylvania (Cumberland) during mid 1700's from Ireland (Co. Tyrone). He is believed to have been born ca. 1680-85 in what is now Port Williams, Scotland. His wife is reg.(?) as Margaret Caldwell, (dau. of Joseph and Jane (McGhee) Caldwell), born ca. 1686 in Co. Tyrone, Stewardstown(?), Ireland. Her death, ca. 1740(?), (2) in the same locale as birth. Robert J. died ca. 1747-50 in Cumberland Co., Pa.

"Only children reg. are two sons, William and Samuel. William is believed to have been born ca. 1720 and Samuel is shown as being birthed in Co. Tyrone, Stewardstown, Ireland, on 5 Sept. 1725. He married 9 Sept. 1754 in Delaware (Wilmington) to one Mary(?) Mady(?) A. Bogan.(3) He died 25 Apr. 1808 in Hopkinsville (5) (Christian Co.) Kentucky, and was buried in roadside grave with no marker. No further records are available on William or the possibility of other children.

"Mary A. Bogan was born Pennsylvania (Cumberland County) and died 17 Apr. 1781, in York (Whitmire?), South Carolina.(4) Her father is shown to be William Bogan, husband of one Elenore. William is son of Jonah and one Gwenevier Madison.(6) Gwenevier was direct ancestor of Dolly Payne Todd, maker of first American flag,(7) and James Madison, fourth president of the United States.

"Elenore Bogan(8) is believed to be niece of Benjamin Ashmoore. Benjamin had a sister who became widowed before birth of first baby. She died during birth of her baby girl, reg. as Elenora. The child was taken in by Benjamin and his wife Anna Belle Graham and, from all indications, was raised by same. The Graham name is known to be famous in the North Carolina state.

"Robert Black(9) was born 11 May 1698 in Ireland. He is shown(?) to have immigrated to U. S. (Chester County), Pennsylvania, where he married Annabelle Margaret. He died 23 Nov. 1770 in same county. Annabelle is reg. as being born on 8 Nov. 1702 in Yorkshire (Chester County), Pennsylvania. To them was born a daughter, Jane Black, on 8 July 1723, in Chester County, Pennsylvania. She was one of five(?) children and is shown(?) to have married John Thomas, Sr., who served as colonel in Revolutionary War. John Thomas was born ca. 1718 in Wales and married Jane ca. 1745 in Chester County, Pennsylvania. He died 2 Oct. 1811, in Greenville (Greenville County), South Carolina. Jane became a heroine during the Revolutionary War and died 16 Apr. 1811 in Greenville.

"Jane Thomas(10) was daughter of Jane Black and John Thomas. She was born 15 Jan. 1757, in Spartanburg (Spartanburg County), South Carolina. She married Major Joseph McJunkin on 9 March 1779. On March 17, 1826, she died in Union County, South Carolina. Major Joseph was Revolutionary War hero and died 31 May 1846.

"Colonel John Thomas, Sr., was son of Jonathan Thomas and Victoria Newcastle. Jonathan was born ca. 1690 in Great Britain. He married Victoria in Pembroke County, Wales, ca. 1711. His death occurred in Wales ca. 1770. Victoria was born ca. 1695 in Wales and died ca. 1765 in same.

"Parents of Jonathan and Victoria unknown."

Notes:

(1) This is the first time we've seen a middle initial for Robert, and although we don't yet know what the J stood for, I like to think it was for the name Joseph. This is also the first time we have seen a date or place of birth for him, as well as a date and place of death, and it is great to have the information.

As to the county in Pennsylvania in which this family settled, it was first believed to be Chester County, which used to have a coastline, and they may have remained there for awhile, but they did end up in Cumberland County, certainly before Joseph McJunkin was born in June 1755. Joseph said he was born at Carlisle, Chester Co., Pa. but the Chester County Historical Society has told me that there has never been a Carlisle in their county; we also know from the history of county boundaries in Pennsylvania, Chester County never extended west of the Susquehanna River, and Cumberland County is some distance west. It is believed that Samuel McJunkin and wife Ann Bogan were residing in Cumberland County, perhaps near Carlisle Barracks, at the time of Braddock's Defeat close to the time of Joseph's birth. Samuel was a "soldier for the Crown," according to histories in S.C. He was also stationed at Ft. Schuyler, also known as Ft. Stanwix, in New York state, near Rome, but I've learned that such records as his military service "for the Crown," are available only in England.

(2) DAR records state that Robert McJunkin, wife Margaret, and two sons, William (b. 1718) and Samuel (b. 1725) all came to the Colonies in 1741, together. Whether Margaret did pass away the previous year in Co. Tyrone; whether the year 1741 is correct; whether William was born in 1718 or 1720, we're not sure yet.

(3) Regarding Mary Ann Bogan's first name, DAR Lineage Books have shown Mary Ann and Ann alone, for many decades. Accounts of this family in South Carolina records show Ann or Mary Ann also. However, since she herself went by the name Ann, the question rises as to whether her first name actually was Mady or Maudy, which she did not like, and therefore changed it to Mary, but preferred Ann.

(4) Ann Bogan had gone to the home of The Rev. Joseph Alexander in Apr. 1781, where her son Joseph lay ill with smallpox, according to The Rev. James Hodge Saye's account in Memoirs of Maj. Joseph McJunkin. There were a number of ill people in the home, and Ann, along with others, nursed them, but Ann became ill with the disease and died there in the minister's home. Joseph, himself, "fixed the date" as April 17. This was in York District, but we have no idea what the indication "Whitmire" means, or whether Angie did not read it well, perhaps the word was faded; however, perhaps there was a village in the area by that name, which has not shown up in the accounts we've read. There were more people who recovered from the disease than anyone expected; therefore, Joseph McJunkin referred to the Alexander home as a "real Lazaretto," referring to the Bible story in which Christ raised Lazarus from the dead; some reports filed in the Family History Center of the Latter-Day Saints library in Salt Lake City indicate that Ann died at a place called "Lazarette." Surely, there is some grave misunderstanding on this; errors are easy to perpetuate, and the Latter-Day Saints do not vouch for the family histories that are filed with them.

Also, other records show that Ann Bogan was born in Chester Co., Pa.

(5) Samuel McJunkin (1725-1808) was on his way to Knox Co., Indiana, in April 1808 to visit his son John, or possibly to reside with him, for it isn't known for sure. His traveling companions were Richard Steen and John McDonald, and when Samuel became ill, they comforted him and saw to his needs until he died, but prior to death, Samuel made a nuncupative will, a verbal will, and the other men wrote it out in order to present it for proving in both Indiana and Kentucky. This took place in Christian Co., Kentucky, evidently near Hopkinsville. I do not believe that Samuel died "in" the town or city of Hopkinsville, for he was buried "beside the trail," as records tell us. It was necessary to record the death, apparently, in both places; it is found in Christian County, Kentucky, Will Book A, 1799-1814, pp 86, 87, and 88. Provisions of this will were accepted in both states, although Samuel's daughter Nancy Anne, wife of Daniel Comer, contested her father's will, and her complaint was made May 16, 1808, to be found in Knox Co., Indiana, records.

(6) Gwenevier Madison, said to be the wife of Jonah Bogan, William Bogan's father, does not show up in James Madison, Vols. 1 thru 4, by Irving Brant (1950) First Ed. Bobbs-Merrill Co., Inc., or in The Madisons by Virginia Moore (1979) McGraw-Hill Book Co., or in the Encyclopedia Britannica (1966 ed.); neither does Mrs. Barbara Duprel, Bellevue, Washington state, a Madison descendant, show a Gwenevier Madison in her records. President James Madison, himself, begat no children but his own father, and then the president's grandfather, great grandfather, and on back to the mid 1600's had brothers and sisters; if Gwenevier were one of these sisters (a female Madison line) I have not found her yet. However, she could not have been a "direct" ancestor of President James Madison and still have married a Bogan, for I found no Bogan line in the president's lineage back to 1653, and I have found no Madison line at all for Dolley Payne, who was first married to John Todd, an attorney, and then after he died, she married James Madison. Dolley IS her true name, recorded at birth in the family Bible; she was not Dorothy or Dorothea at all. She was from a long line of Quakers, and James Madison was from a long line of Episcopalians. I feel sure that the compiler of the Troup County records was sincere in his or her belief that this was a true statement, but a lot more research must be done to prove or disprove it. James Madison had a Todd line on his father's mother's side, but I don't know whether this was related to Dolley's first husband's Todd line.

(7) "The first American flag" has me stumped. At first I thought that Dolley must have been acquainted with Betsy Ross and was in on the stitching of the thirteen-star colonial flag, but Dolley Payne was born in June 1768, eight years after Betsy Ross made the flag. I haven't done any research as to who made the fifteen-star flag that flew over Fort MacHenry when Frances Scott Key wrote "The Star-Spangled Banner." But, she did not help in making this flag unless the authorities I've researched inadvertently left this fact out of their records. Dolley is not portrayed as a seamstress at all.

(8) The names Elenore and Elenora appear here as Angie read them in the old records, Elenore being the mother and Elenora being the dau. This seems to tell us that Elenore Ashmoore was the name of the mother before she married, but we do not know the name of Elenore's husband who died before their daughter Elenora was born. We have no dates for any of these people. Since Benjamin Ashmoore's wife was a Graham, some of use wonder whether Elenore (the mother) was married to a Graham, possibly a brother to Anna Belle Graham Ashmoore. This occurs in families: a brother and sister from one family will marry a sister and brother from another family; it did occur in the McJunkin and Alexander families in the South Carolina Upcountry; it occurred in the Ogletree and Moore families in Taliaferro County, Georgia, my own lines there. However, we could be in error by using Elenore as Elenora's mother; we need more research.

(9) Black: The paragraph on the Black line has a number of discrepancies with the data that we've been following for many years; it would take too much space here to analyze these differences; I've done a six-page analysis of it, that is, the old and the new information, side-by-side. If anyone is interested, who has the Jane Black Thomas (and Col. John Thomas, Sr.) line, I'll send my work on this and we can figure it out individually person to person.

(10) Thomas: This additional information on the Thomas line is very helpful, and it gives us all more information on which to base our individual research. Remember, John Thomas, Sr.'s., father, Jonathan, was "in the King's Guard," in London, according to accounts in history books in South Carolina. Jonathan's brother, name not yet known, was a Presbyterian minister, and he went to Wales from England in order to avoid religious persecution;

we have no year that this occurred, but for some period of time in the 1500's and 1600's in England no religious denomination, other than the Church of England (King Henry VIII's church) had any rights. The Pilgrims, originally known as the Separatists, began their plans to leave England, as we know, late in the 1500's and finally got out and into Holland, where they remained for twelve years until they could get a ship to the New World, which turned out to be the Mayflower. Further research, probably done in London, will tell us the first name of Jonathan Thomas' minister brother, provided there are any Presbyterian records remaining in London from those days. However, Jonathan's record as a member of the "King's Guard" should be on hand somewhere.

With reference to the statement that no further information has been found on William McJunkin (ca. 1718 or 1720, Co. Tyrone, Ire.) there actually is a bit of information in my files, but I've done no research on him; what I have may or may not be accurate or even helpful to any of his descendants, but whoever wants it may have it. It was sent to me by several other people.

A GENEALOGICAL SKETCH OF THE RIVES FAMILY OF CHESTER COUNTY, S.C.

by

William Boyce White, Jr.

M.A., F.S.A.Scot.

James Rives Childs, formerly United States Ambassador to Roumania, Saudi Arabia, and Ethiopia, was the author of many books, among which was his study of the Rives family history, Reliques of the Rives (1929), regarded by many American genealogists as one of the foremost works of its type to be published in this country. Twenty-eight years after its publication Mr. Childs issued "Amendments," in which he made such corrections and additions as had been made available by correspondents or were the result of subsequent research. In 1959 he kindly sent me a copy of the "Amendments," saying in an accompanying letter: "...The material regarding your family was furnished me, as I recall, by a most delightful gentleman, F. A. Nunnery, with whom I corresponded and who was deeply interested in preserving the family memorials. Would there had been more but I had in general most gratifying assistance...."

And now, thirty years later, the Editor of the CDGS Bulletin has offered me the hospitality of its pages to note certain additions to the history of that branch of the Rives family which settled in what is now Chester County, S.C., just before the American Revolution. I am grateful for this opportunity of following in the worthy footsteps of Mr. Nunnery and of Mr. Childs.

The Rives (pronounced REEVES) family of Chester County, S.C., traces its origins to the fifteenth-century family of Ryves of County Dorset, England. The first of the name to achieve prominence was Robert Ryves (c.1490-1551), of Damory Court and Randleston, County Dorset. During the five generations succeeding the death of Robert Ryves there were some fifty-six members of the family who reached manhood, and of this number, "five had knight-hood conferred on them; one became a Deputy Lord Lieutenant of Dorset; one, Speaker of the Irish House of Lords; one, Warden of New College, Oxford; one, an Alderman of London; three, High Sheriffs; one, Mayor of Shaftesbury; one, Town Clerk of Woodstock; and one, Steward of the University of Oxford. Of eight who are known to have entered the service of the Church of England, one became Chaplain to James I; another, Dr. Brown Ryves, became Chaplain to Charles I and to Charles II and was later made Dean of Windsor; while others served variously as Dean, Archdeacon, Canon, Vicar, and Rector."

This armigerous family was transplanted to America in the person of Timothy Rives, who was born in England in 1625 and who came to Virginia probably during the Cavalier Emigration (second half of the seventeenth century). Descendants of Timothy Rives "have served in the legislatures of every Southern state; seven of the name have been positively identified as soldiers or officers in the Revolutionary War; numbers participated in the War of 1812, the War for Texas Independence, and the Mexican War; some two hundred and twenty-five, War for Southern Independence; and seventy-seven, the World War of 1917-18." These names are nationally recognized: John Cook Rives, founder of the Congressional Record; the Hon. William Cabell Rives, of "Castle Hill," Albemarle County, Virginia, twice U. S. Ambassador to France and U. S. Senator; the Hon. George Lockhart Rives, Assistant Secretary of State of the United States; Charlotte Rives Robertson, Tennessee pioneer heroine; Elizabeth Browne Rives Early, notable Methodist woman of the nineteenth century; the Hon. Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the national House of Representatives and husband of Alice Roosevelt; and, finally, Amelie Rives (Princess Pierre Troubetzkoy) and Hallie Erminie Rives (Mrs. Post Wheeler), internationally famous writers of the twentieth century.

It was about the time of the American Revolution that several groups of the Rives family settled in South Carolina. First, William Rives moved to what is now Richland County about 1770; he was married to Lucy Wyche, served in the state legislature, and left a numerous progeny. Robert Rives, brother to William, moved to Richland County about the same time. A third brother, Timothy, settled in Richland County also, where he was to become an extensive landowner and a founding father of the new state capital, Columbia. Timothy married Priscilla Turner. He was proprietor of Rives' Tavern, which, according to Mr. Alexander S. Salley, stood where the last of the Pride of India trees stood on the present State House grounds. This was on the east side of what was, in ante-bellum times, called Richardson Street (now Main). Before the present State House was built, this street came through where the State House now is, and was lined on both sides with Pride of India trees. The earliest known view of the first State House in Columbia was taken from Rives' Tavern in May, 1794. (See Drayton's View of South Carolina, p. 215.) In 1805 Timothy Rives served as Steward of the newly opened South Carolina College, "following thus in the footsteps of his ancestor six generations removed, Timothy Rives, Gent., Steward of the University of Oxford in 1612," dieting the students at his tavern.(1)

The second group of the Rives family to remove to South Carolina was that of George Rives, born about 1720 in Virginia. He was the son of Col. William Rives, born about 1683 either in England or in America; his father was George Ryves, born in England in 1660; and George's father was the original American immigrant, Timothy Ryves, born 1625 in England. The family of George Rives (born about 1720) settled in what is now Chester County, South Carolina. It is this branch of the family of which this sketch treats.

George Rives, born in Prince George County, Virginia, about 1720, married Sarah Cook, daughter of Henry Cook (Cooke), of Brunswick County, Virginia. Issue of George and Sarah (Cook) Rives:(2)

- I. Elizabeth Rives. Born about 1742-43. Married first James Massey, who died early. There were three children. Married second James Massey's brother William Massey. There were nine children. James and William Massey were the progenitors of the Massey family of the Waxhaws, Lancaster County, S.C.(3)
- II. Ann Rives. Born about 1744-45. Married William Peebles, who died in 1784 in Greensville County, Virginia. Issue:(4)
 - A. Winifred Peebles.
 - B. Benjamin Peebles.
 - C. George Peebles.
 - D. Jenny Peebles.
 - E. William Peebles.
 - F. Nathaniel Peebles.
 - G. Frances Peebles.
 - H. John Peebles.
 - I. Lydia Peebles.
 - J. Willis Peebles.

- III. Benjamin Rives. Born in Brunswick County, Virginia, probably about 1747. His tombstone mistakenly gives his date of birth as February 4, 1752. When one examines a list of Benjamin's numerous children, it becomes clear that he could not have been born in 1752 and still have had the number of sons-in-law to whom he was deeding property in the early 1790's, unless, of course, he himself was married at the age of fifteen; and this explanation hardly seems plausible. Died in Chester County, South Carolina, on September 14, 1839.(5) Buried in the cemetery of Liberty Baptist Church, located west of the city of Chester. Married first about 1767 in Virginia to Mary _____, who died after January 15, 1791, on which date she signed a deed in Chester County as the wife of Benjamin Rives.(6) Benjamin Rives was a soldier in the American Revolution, serving in the South Carolina militia. His tombstone inscription substantiates his military service.(7) Issue:(8)
- A. [Female]. Born about 1768. Married Wilson Henderson.(9)
- B. Sarah Rives. Born about 1769. Married Williamson Harper.(10)
- C. Rebecca Rives. Born about 1770. Married first Sharard Willis about 1789.(11) Sharard Willis died after 1791. Issue:
1. Robert Willis. Born about 1790.
 2. Mary Willis. Born about 1791. Married Robert Gregg Reid.
- Rebecca (Rives) Willis married second about 1798 Samuel Adkins, who died in 1809. No issue. Rebecca then married a third time about 1812 Robert Reid, called "The Schoolmaster." He died on October 14, 1817, aged 78 years. He was buried at Neely's Creek A. R. P. Church cemetery. He had formerly been married to Rebecca _____, who was born in 1741 and died in 1801. Rebecca (Rives) Willis Adkins and Robert Reid had no children. She died after 1819.(12)
- D. Elizabeth Rives. Born about 1772. Married William Shadrick.(13) He died well before December 26, 1815. Issue:(14)
1. Mary Shadrick.
 2. Sarah Shadrick.
 3. John Shadrick.
 4. Elizabeth Shadrick, Jr.
- E. George Rives. Born about 1773. Married Elizabeth Giles about 1790.(15) Removed to Georgia. Issue:

(Ed. Note: The following article was taken from A History of the Anderson Family, 1706-1955 by Edward Lee Anderson.

About two miles from Chambersburg, Pa. there is located the Rockey Springs Presbyterian Church. The present building was erected in 1794, however, the church was founded in 1734. It may be noted that the pastor, Rev. John Craighead, led every man in the congregation in the war of the American Revolution.

It is evident that wherever a group of Scotch-Irish Presbyterians established themselves they built a church or "Meeting House". The interior and exterior of this historic church in Pennsylvania show the construction to be very much like the Nazareth Presbyterian Church in South Carolina. Records show that the families which composed the Upper and Lower settlements in what is now Spartanburg County, S. C. were for the most part from the Pennsylvania settlements established shortly after these colonists reached the New World. It may be noted that the South Carolina settlers from Pennsylvania had much the same ideas as to church construction as they did at the time Rockey Springs church was built. It is noted that the Rockey Springs church building was erected thirty-eight years before the present building at Nazareth.

No more suitable account can be found than that in the Anderson-Denny History outlining the background of historic Nazareth Presbyterian Church which stands today as a symbol of Presbyterianism in Upper South Carolina. In the lines which follow will be found a complete outline of what this church has meant throughout the years, this account being taken from the original Anderson-Denny History published in 1914.

"In 1761, eight or ten families of Scotch-Irish, from Pennsylvania, settled upon branches of the Tyger River, then in Spartanburg District. Settlements certainly existed before the year 1765, for in that year the road that passes by the church between the North and Middle Tyger rivers was opened. Some of the families were in Pennsylvania as early as 1746, for in that year Captain Andrew Barry was born in that State. He died in 1811, aged 65 years. The names of the first settlers were Barry, Moore, Anderson, Collins, Thompson, Vernon, Pearson, Jamison, Dodd, Ray, Penny, McMahon Nicholls and Miller. About the year 1767 or 1768 their numbers were increased by a colony which came direct from the North of Ireland, County Antrim, through Charleston, S. C. They were each entitled to one hundred acres of land by a grant from his majesty, George II, and the old titles bear date of 1768. The first colony settled upon the Tyger Rivers, the second upon the highlands adjoining. It consisted of the families of Coan, Snoddy, Peden, Alexander, Gaston, Morton and perhaps others. When finally settled the two colonies covered a territory nearly twenty miles square. Dr. George Howe, D.D., LL.D., in his 'History of the Presbyterian Church in South Carolina', says that 'these first settlers were full of reverence for God's word and for the institutions of religion; and no sooner had they established their homes in the forest of the New World than they made the best arrangements in their power for the public worship of the God of their fathers'.

"Occasional visits of evangelists, sent out chiefly by the Synods of New York and Philadelphia, led to the selection of a place for a church. This place was chosen as the site of their sanctuary, because it was equidistant between what was then known as the upper and lower settlements. They were so careful to have it as near the center as possible that two of the old men stepped the distance'. Thus the present church grounds are midway between the railroad towns of Moore and Wellford. The first house was built in 1765, the material being hewn logs from the surrounding forest. It was in the lower part of the present graveyard, to be near the spring, perhaps. They applied to the Presbytery of the Carolinas for preaching in 1766. Between 1785 and 1790 the log house was displaced by a larger, more expensive frame building.

"The church was organized in the spring of 1772, by Joseph Alexander, D.D., of Bullock's Creek, York District. The road that passes below the church to Pinckneyville, the oldest public road in the county, was first opened as a bridle path for Dr. Alexander to travel when he came to discharge his ministerial duties. All who claimed to be members of the Presbyterian church before removal, were enrolled without examination; except those who were so unfortunate as to have 'evil reports following'. Such were required to wait until their cases could be investigated. So great was the reverence of the congregation for the office of ruling elder, they thought there was scarcely one among them fit to discharge its duties, and they had great difficulty in making a selection. The officiating minister, who organized the church, overruled their scruples: 'If yere canna get hewn stone, yere must take donna', i.e., rough ones. A new difficulty then arose. The candidates-elect had such exalted views of the character and qualifications requisite for the office, that they refused for some time to be ordained.

"The first elders elected were Capt. Andrew Barry, Mr. Robert Nesbit, Mr. John Muckelwrath, and Mr. Thomas Peden. The following list of names contains all their successors up to 1872:

Richard Barry, Sen.	Richard Barry
James Hadden	Thomas B. Collins
Thomas Bryce	Jonathan Hadden
Alexander Evins	Denny Anderson
Colonel John Means	M. P. Wakefield
Thomas Gaston	James Vernon, M.D.
Andrew Coan	Colonel S. N. Evins
Richard Daniel	Michael Smith
John Smith	David M. Bryce
Andrew Barry	J. C. Caldwell

"The session records of the first sixty years were consumed by fire in the dwelling of the clerk.

"Deacons were first chosen in obedience to an injunction of the General Assembly in 1840. Previous to this time the congregation managed her finances through trustees. The first deacons were:

John Fielder	James A. Miller
J. K. Means	J. P. Miller, M.D.

"The stated supplies of the congregation are first, Rev. Joseph Alexander before, through and after the Revolutionary War. During his ministration the congregation suffered much from Tories and Indians'. Many lives were lost, among the number being William Anderson. He was murdered in his bed at night. At the same time the home of his son, Major David Anderson, was burned.

"Rev. James Templeton served the church from 1794 to 1802; Mr. Means a licentiate--never ordained--a short time, about 1816; Rev. John Boggs, four years; and Edward Tonge Buist, D.D., ten years. The labors of these ministers, together with an occasional suspension of the pulpit services, incident to changes, cover a period of forty years.'

"The pastors were, first: Rev. William C. Davis, from 1789 to 1794; Rev. James Gilliland, from 1802 to 1816; Rev. Michael Dickson, from 1817 to 1832; Zelotes Lee Holmes'. In 1853 the pastorate of Rev. R. H. Reid began, which lasted forty-six years and was ended by his death in 1899."

"Nazareth may well be called 'the Mother of Churches', for wherever her members migrated there was formed a church. Fairview church, in Greenville County, was formed in 1786 from five families, viz: those of John Peden, James Alexander, Samuel Peden, David Peden, and James Nesbit, who settled in that neighborhood. In 1843 other members were set off, who formed Antioch church, a few miles beyond Reidville. During the long pastorate of Rev. R. H. Reid, the following churches were formed, viz: Antioch, at Reidville; Mt. Tabor, at Greer; Mt. Calvary, Wellford and Center Point, at Moore."

"The present church edifice is of brick and was built in 1832. It had the brick floor, high pulpit and high-back pews. Soon after the war these features were changed to a more comfortable floor of wood and a modern pulpit. Again in recent years, the interior of the church was changed to its present arrangement. These sacred walls have resounded with the eloquence of many noted preachers, among whom was Rev. B. N. Palmer, D.D., of New Orleans, who delivered an address at the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the church, on June 15, 1872. At the same time a brief sketch of Nazareth church was read by the pastor, Rev. R. H. Reid, from which liberal copy has been made for this article."

Today Nazareth stands as a living monument to the Presbyterian denomination and those of the early members who founded it. The building and grounds are well preserved and cared for and the cemetery has been greatly enlarged. Handsome stones mark graves of more recent members or descendants of former members and those who are interested can spend much time there noting the epitaphs which were carved on many of the gravestones for generations back.

This cemetery now contains eight generations of the Anderson family from William Anderson and his wife, Rebecca, to the present day. Before the Andersons began burying their dead at Nazareth, members of the family were buried in various family cemeteries throughout the area. These family cemeteries were in part, The Anderson Family Burying Ground originally located near the South Tyger River on "Plain Dealing" Plantation. There is one graveyard in the fork of North and Middle Tyger rivers on the plantation of the late Capt. David Anderson. This has been referred to as the Miller and Otts graveyard. One is on the plantation "Fredonia" near Moore, eight miles south of Nazareth. This is referred to as the Moore graveyard on the site of the original "Walnut Grove" which took its name from a long row of walnut trees planted by "Kate Barry". One is on the Ferguson Creek called the Peden graveyard. Another is on the Enoree River, not far from old Antioch Presbyterian Church which is referred to as the Massey graveyard.

Many of the plantations on which these graveyards are situated have passed out of the hands of those who might be interested in preserving these places as historic burying grounds. In 1938 the graves of ten members of the family were moved to Nazareth from the Anderson Burying Ground on the South Tyger River. Those graves as they now stand will be of interest to many who visit the cemetery there. The stones as well as the remains were moved in an orderly manner and are located on the plot of the John Crawford Anderson family along the north wall of the cemetery. It was through the efforts of David Watson Anderson, David Buist Anderson, Sr., and Edward Lee Anderson that these graves were moved to Nazareth for their preservation. Included in those graves which were moved are the following with the inscriptions which appear on the grave markers:

WILLIAM ANDERSON and his wife, REBECCA, "The former of whom was born in 1706 and was murdered by a party of Tories near the close of the Revolution. The latter was born in 1710, and died in 1806." "Erected by their affectionate daughter, Sarah Breakin."

WILLIAM ANDERSON

The desire for religious liberty and perhaps more room and better opportunities brought William Anderson to America. He was probably among those "Presbyterians in Ulster who were rendered exceedingly uncomfortable by reason of the tyranny and exactions of their despotic monarchs, by the restrictions and penalties imposed by Parliament, the intolerance and persecutions instigated by the bishops, and the rapacity and greed of the landlords." Such conditions estranged them from their country, and led them to turn their eyes to the new colonies planted in America, where they could secure for themselves homes, and civil and religious liberty, impossible in their own land. As early as 1713 both ministers and people began to come to America. The province of Pennsylvania, guaranteeing equal rights and advantages of civil and religious liberty, especially attracted them.

These early Scotch-Irish Presbyterians were generally agriculturists. When they landed at Wilmington or Philadelphia, they were drawn at once into the rural districts, and usually settled on lands along the streams or on lands near the great springs which abounded in the country, in Chester County, in Bucks, Northampton, Lancaster and Dauphin. "Then when encouragement was given and licenses were granted, they began to cross over the Susquehanna at Harris' Ferry, now Harrisburg, from 1726 to 1736, and settled along the Conococheque and about the Big Spring, Middle Spring, Falling Spring and Rocky Spring, in the central part of the valley, and on up along the Conococheque and its several branches, in the vicinity of what is now Chambersburg and Mercersburg." Land warrants were sold from 1736 onwards. Thereupon a great tide of emigration set into all these regions in the valley and from there on to the Potomac and down the valley of Virginia into the Carolinas and Tennessee, and across into Kentucky. A thousand families are said to have arrived in the state of North Carolina from the more northerly settlements in 1764. "No other country," says Dr. Ramsey, "furnished the Province of South Carolina with as many citizens as the north of Ireland"; and "their religion," as Carlyle has somewhere said, "was the chief fact about them". Theirs was that system of religious faith and worship "which" says Froude, "has ever borne an inflexible front to illusion and mendacity, and has preferred rather to be ground to powder like flint, than to bend before violence, or melt under enervating temptation."

Of such sort was William Anderson, born in 1706 of Scotch family. According to tradition, he emigrated from County Antrim, Ireland, with his wife, Rebecca Denny, and their sons, John and David, about 1742.

They seem to have settled first in Chester County, Pennsylvania. Later they went to that part of Cumberland County, which is now Franklin County, cut off in 1784. There on the Conococheque, a stream somewhat famous in the early annals of Cumberland, they had a mill. Probably about the time of Braddock's defeat, which left that part of the country unprotected against the French and Indians, they emigrated to the Waxhaws, South Carolina, possibly in the neighborhood of the Steels, Starrs, Masseys, Pedens and other sturdy folk, who have consistently stood for representative democracy in church and state.

In this region their son, John, married and located permanently. From 1770, possibly from an earlier date, until after 1790, certainly a part of William Anderson's family resided in Charleston, South Carolina. Tradition says that William Anderson went to Charleston from the Waxhaws. One cannot but marvel that he went to Charleston, even at that period no congenial home for a Scotch-Irish pioneer. One wonders what drew him there.

It was in Charleston, 1772, that David Anderson, William's son, married the cultivated Englishwoman, Miriam Mayson. It was there, it is said, that his daughter, Sarah, married William Breakin, and there she resided afterwards for a number of years. It was in Charleston, most likely, that the youngest son, Denny, presumably born in the old Ninety Six District, got his schooling.

State records show that in August, 1763, William Anderson took up 200 acres of land in what is now Laurens County. It was in December of this year that the youngest son, Denny, was born when his mother, who lived to be ninety-six, was fifty-three years of age. It seems that William Anderson was driven by malaria from this Little River, Laurens County, farm, to the Spartanburg side of the Enoree River. Here, according to documentary evidence, he resided near the present Anderson's Bridge, on the old Georgia road extending from Virginia through the Carolinas westward, until fear of the Indians drove him to the South Tyger River, where his son, Major David Anderson, lived.

"While living here," substantially in the words of his grandson, the late Enoree James Anderson, "he observed one day to the southwest a great fire, with smoke boiling up at what was afterwards known as the Brown house, or the Moon place. Suspecting that Indians were on the warpath, he sent his son, Denny, then only a lad, and a man who lived with him across the river to investigate. They approached near enough to see that the family living there had been murdered, and the house burned, the feather beds ripped open and scattered to the winds. William Anderson immediately took his wife, Rebecca, then suffering from a dislocated hip, due to a fall from her horse, put her into a rocking chair, strapped it on a horse, and carried her into a hollow on what is now known as the Hiram Bennett place, where she remained concealed until help could be summoned from his son, David, to move to South Tyger River." There, it seems, they lived on the west bank of the river, at no great distance from the present "Holly Hill", until William Anderson, at the hands of Indians and Tories, forfeited his life to the patriot cause.

The following extract from Howe's "History of the Presbyterian Church in South Carolina," bears on these events:

"Just at the close of the war, after the treaty of peace had been signed, they murdered Mr. Anderson, the father of Major David Anderson. They shot him in his bed at night. They permitted his wife to escape, allowing her nothing but her nightdress to protect her from the cold. She that night waded two rivers, and came to the house of Mr. Crawford, the father of the late senator from this district, a distance of five or six miles.

"James Silliman, a lad of twelve or thirteen years, was at the home of Mr. Anderson that night. They stabbed him in two or three places, and threw him into a brush heap, supposing him to be dead. He recovered, and lived in the community to a good old age. They took Mr. Anderson out of the house, split his head with a tomahawk and scalped him. They also burned his house. The same gang also murdered another old man and his son nearby, and fired the house of Major David Anderson, who, with his family, was that night at Ft. Prince. This was said to have been done by Indians, but the community generally believed that the Tories were at the bottom of it, if not the real actors, painted like Indians. Mr. Anderson was quite an old man who, because of his age and palsy, took little or no part in the war, but was a staunch Whig and contributed in every way he could to help the cause of liberty. When Major Anderson returned home from the fort he lived for some time under the wagon shed. His son, James, was born under the wagon shed."

A similar account of the fate of William Anderson is given in Landrum's "History of Spartanburg County".

"William Anderson was buried in the Snoddy bottoms wrapped in a cow's hide. His remains were afterwards removed to a burial ground near James Chamblin's," at the time of the burial of his wife, Rebecca Denny, in 1806. (The graves of William Anderson and Rebecca Denny and other members of the family buried in the family burying ground were removed in 1938 and placed in the Nazareth Presbyterian Church Cemetery). Their resting place is indicated by a single gravestone with the inscription:

"In memory of William Anderson and his wife, Rebecca. The former of whom was born in 1706, and was murdered by a party of Tories near the close of the Revolution. The latter was born in 1710 and died in 1806. Erected by their affectionate daughter, Sarah Breakin."

REBECCA DENNY ANDERSON, the wife of William Anderson, was a woman of outstanding character. She evidently belongs to a family distinguished in the old world and in the new. The family records were lost in the fire that destroyed their home. She reached extreme old age, and became almost totally blind, as have several of her descendants.

Six children were born to this family:

John Anderson	Rebecca Anderson
David Anderson	Sarah Anderson (Breakin)
Hannah Anderson	Denny Anderson

SOMEONE HELP!!!

Does anyone have a copy of "The Old Covenanter Cemetery" located in Marion County, IL? Some of the early members were Covenanters or Reformed Presbyterians from the Chester County, SC area, such as Kell, Gaston, Telford, Storment, Smith, Hicklin, Morton, etc. These Covenanters with Rev. William Martin settled the Rocky Creek area in Chester Co., SC. A Xeroxed copy would be greatly appreciated and the society will pay all costs. We need this for our library. Thanks. Chester Dist.
