

MRS. J. T. LEMMON
PASSED AWAY JULY 2
1936

Funeral Services Held Friday Afternoon With Interment In Lebanon Cemetery.
7/4/1936

Funeral services for Mrs. James Thomas Lemmon, 90, widow of Mr. James T. Lemmon, who died Thursday night at her home near Winnsboro after an illness of several days, were held at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon at the residence. Interment was in the Lebanon cemetery, the Rev. George G. Mayes officiating. The floral offerings were beautiful.

Mrs. Lemmon, nee Margaret Ann McElroy, was born in County Antrim, Ireland. When she was just an infant her family came to Charleston, S. C., where she lived until the War Between the States, at which time she refugeeed to Winnsboro. Here she has made her home since, living near Winnsboro.

Mrs. Lemmon was educated in the city schools of Charleston and was graduated from the Meminger Normal School of Charleston. She possessed an exceptionally keen mind, which she maintained until the very last. Those who knew Mrs. Lemmon intimately will long remember her sweetness of character, her charm, and her loveliness, which were the essence of refinement and culture.

Mrs. Lemmon was a devoted, faithful, and consecrated Christian throughout her life. She was a member of Sion Presbyterian church of Winnsboro. Her interest in the church and its activities has been predominant; her Christian home and her life have influenced not a few.

About twelve years ago Mrs. Lemmon became a semi-invalid after suffering from a broken hip. Her vitality was unusually strong for a woman of her age and her death, after a few days of illness, came unexpectedly.

Pallbearers were: Mr. James Henry, Rev. Murphy Bell, Mr. Carlisle Dixon, Mr. Ernest B. Crawford, Mr. Riley Paul and Mr. Turner Pope.

Mrs. Lemmon is survived by the following son and daughters: Mr. John McElroy Lemmon, Winnsboro, S. C.; Mrs. Mamie Henry, Rodman, S. C.; Mrs. Sarah Belle Turner, and Miss Lillian Lemmon, Winnsboro, S. C. The following grandchildren survive her: Mrs. T. B. Wilkes, Winnsboro, Mrs. Murphy Bell, Hickory Grove, S. C.; Mr. James Henry and Miss Margaret Henry, Rodman; Mr. Lemmon McElroy Turner, Winnsboro, Mrs. Ernest B. Crawford, Columbia, Mrs. Carlisle Dixon, Mullins, and Misses Janie and Rosalie Turner, Winnsboro. The following grandchildren: Mary Thomas, Lambert, Frank and Tom Wilkes, Jr., Laura Ann and James Bell, James Thomas Turner, Sarah Floyd Dixon and Ernest B. Crawford, Jr.

HUEY L. LISTON

By death our county has lost one of its best colored citizens. Huey Liston as he was generally known was an honest, upright and energetic man. Attending to his own affairs, by thrift and industry he purchased and paid for two plantations in the Jackson Creek neighborhood. Upon one of these he erected a nice dwelling.

This home was a center of high ideals, a place where those things that go to make good citizenship were taught. He educated his family and has a son who is now professor in the Knoxville, Tennessee College, a worthy son of a worthy father. He was a regular subscriber to The News and Herald. We pay this worthy tribute to this colored farmer as an incentive to others of his race to follow his example.

GOV. JOHN HUGH MEANS

Before beginning the series of articles promised your readers as a matter of appreciation of the greatly neglected memory of a great man, whose grave even is unmarked, please publish the following of Gov. John H. Means.

He was born in Fairfield County Aug. 30, 1812, graduated from S. C. College in 1832, married Susan Rebecca Parke January 1833 (the year the great shower of stars fell so well described by grand father W. B. Woodward and James H. Carlisle in "The Young Astronomer").

Gov. Means was a Brigadier General of the South Carolina Militia before the Civil War, was president of the Cooperation Convention 1852, was for many years and up to his death a member of the Board of Visitors of The Citadel, was a member of the Secession Convention, was Colonel of the 17th South Carolina Volunteer Regiment, Confederate States of America and last but not least, an elder in Salem Presbyterian Church. He was not a "sign post" that points the way and never moves. Though grey bearded he went to the war, and was killed leading his regiment in the second battle of Manassas, August 30, 1862.

He was a large man of splendid physique, gentle as a woman, brave as a lion and looking over to study the lives of our great men before the Civil war, the writer reaches the conclusion that he was the most unselfish and patriotic citizen this county has ever produced. Certainly he stands out preeminent with Dr. James H. Carlisle in the virtues of Christian citizenship, with W. W. Boyce in patriotism and General Bratton in neighborly kindness and was the equal of all three in social and political influence. He was the true type of a soldier and southern gentleman. Captain Hal Clark of Camden was with him after he received his mortal wound in the field of the Battle of 2nd Bull Run. He said of him, "When the Colonel returned to consciousness, he asked the meaning of the cheers that were heard above the roar of guns and being told it was the shouts of victory of his regiment he said "Tell my men that their valor has robbed death of its sting." He fell and died with his blood staining his snow white hair.

Governor Means is buried in the Means family cemetery near Monticello, just to the left as you enter the enclosure. No stone with eulogistic epitaph marks the sacred spot. The Monticello High School is built on lands donated by his descendants. Some building, room, or park connected with the school should be named in honor of the great soldier, statesman and private citizen.

The only thing that bears his name is a grass, the seed of which he brought back or obtained from Egypt and is spread over the county and is called Means grass.

"Sweet Sleep the brave, who seek to rest, With all their Country's honor blest."

He is survived by his widow, the former Miss Mary Alston Pearson of Strother; five daughters, Mrs. Arthur Lee Kelly, Jr., Columbia; Miss Mary E. Martin, Washington, D. C.; Miss Cecelia Martin, Winnsboro; Miss Agnes Martin, Monticello and Miss Nellie Martin, student nurse at the Columbia hospital; five sons, Joseph Gladney Martin, Jr., Washington, D. C.; George B. Martin, Greenwood; Berkeley Martin, Roland Martin and Herbert Martin, all of Monticello; one brother, J. D. Martin, Columbia; three grandchildren and numerous other relatives.
