Mrs. Crowder, the oldest resident of Brian Center, celebrated her 103rd birthday on January 23, 1982, at which time residents of a nursing home gave her a birthday party.

Bill McDonald, columnist for The State who interviewed Mrs. Crowder in June 1980, said that she had lived through five wars and 20 presidents.

He also said that she had the grace and grandeur that "comes only with age and an afternoon with her on her front porch is a quirk in time, a curious visit back to another era, to another century."

She credited her longevity to God, her sense of humor and to always being satisfied with what she had in life.

"I wasn't grabbing for something else all the time," she said.

At the end of the interview she said, "I've got a little place waiting for me in Salem's Crossroads. I might have to go anytime now."
