

1941
Ninety Six, Jan. 31.—Saturday afternoon, January 24, at the home of Mr and Mrs. B. L. Kinard, a beautiful wedding took place when their daughter, Miss Mammie Annie Kinard became the bride of Joseph L. Kirkpatrick of Winnsboro.

The rooms were thrown en suite and many lighted tapers used with southern smilax and crystal baskets of white narcissi, made ideal decorations for the occasion.

The large number of relatives and friends were met by Mrs. John Sloan and Mrs. J. D. Arrington, who asked them to register in the bride's book in charge of Mrs. Guernsey Summer. Then followed a program of pre-nuptial music. With Mrs. W. O. Self at the piano, Mrs. T. J. Kinard sang "O Promise Me" and "At Dawning," with violin obligato by Mrs. Jack Kinard. After a piano-violin rendition of "Salut d'Amour," the strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin were heard. The ushers drew back heavy silk curtains and lighted the altar candles, revealing the wedding party arranged in tableau.

The bride and bridegroom stood between tall white pedestals, which supported cathedral candles in crystal holders. Besides them were Miss Olive Kinard, maid of honor; Mrs. Marvin Summer, dame of honor, sister of the bride; little Pauline Summer, flower girl; Henry Lomineck, Jr., best man; Hayne Kinard, brother of the bride and Miss Lucile Kirkpatrick, sister of the bridegroom. Holding open the white gates were the little ribbon girls, Helen and Lylie Clary. Just inside the gates stood the ushers, Marvin Summer and Arrington Kinard, and the Rev. O. A. Jeffcoat, officiating minister. In front of the best man was Master George Hill, ring bearer. The ceremony was softly accompanied by a piano-violin arrangement of "To a Wild Rose." Above the improvised altar a line of candles shed a soft light and brought out the beauty of the pastel shades of the gown selected.

The bride was lovely in sunset crepe and gold silk lace with a shoulder corsage of pink rose buds and valley lilies.

Immediately after the ceremony the receiving line formed in the adjoining room. In the line were Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Kinard, the bride's parents; Mr. and Mrs. Kirkpatrick and their bridal party; Mrs. W. L. Kirkpatrick, the bridegroom's mother, and Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Cathcart. Entertaining in this room were Misses Ellen Anderson and Neta Moore, who met the guests as they were directed to the receiving line by Mrs. T. J. Kinard and Mrs. George Fellers.

Mrs. Hal Sloan and Mrs. Pete Phillips invited the guests into the connecting dining rooms. Receiving here were Mrs. B. B. Kinard, Mrs. Ira Dominick, Mrs. M. M. Clary and Mrs. Frank Lominack.
