P R E F A C E.

On a former occasion allusion was made to an order of the General Assembly directing sentence of excommunication to be pronounced on Archibald Hegate for his complicity in certain proceedings connected with the appointment of Robert Montgomerie to the archbishopric of Glasgow.¹ If that sentence was carried into effect, it must have been recalled as, a few years afterwards, Hegate passed through a similar ordeal. This was in the year 1588, at which time the country was in an agitated condition on account of the threatened Spanish invasion. Efforts were being made, through the medium of disaffected nobles, and by the aid of itinerant Jesuits and seminary priests, to set Scotland in opposition to England in this emergency; but these attempts proved ineffectual, and a proclamation was issued ordering the Roman Catholic and Spanish emissaries to leave the country, while those persons who received them, or gave them supplies, were subjected to penalties. It was for an infringement of this proclamation that misfortune overtook the clerk. In a list of "receavers of Jesuits" submitted to the General Assembly of the Kirk, in February, 1587-8, there occurs the name of "Archibald Hegat, clerk of Glasgow";² and the sequel—excommunication and deprivation of office—is ascertained from another source. The council record for that period is not extant, but the act of admission of John Ros as a notary, printed in Appendix I., narrates the facts. Hegate seems to have come to an arrangement with the ecclesiastical authorities about a year afterwards, but the truce did not last long. An act of the presbytery of Glasgow "contrair Archibald Hegate, burges of Glasgw, inter-communer with Papistis," dated 23 November, 1592, records that "the said Archibald is fund to have brokin his obligatioun insert in thair buikis of the dait" 6 July, 1589; and all ministers within the presbytery were therefore directed "to proceid summarlie in thair kirkis be the sentence of excommunicatioun, the nixt Sonday, oppinlie furth of pulpet, aganis the said Archibald Hegat for violatione of his obligatioun, and thairby decernit ane perjured persone and ane renegate."³

Unless there is a mistake in the identity, it appears from the privy council register that the ex-clerk suffered persecution in another form. On 10 February, 1590-1, "Archibald Hiegatt, son and apparent heir of Willame Hiegatt, burgess of Glasgu," complained that, upon 11 September preceding, he had been "maist cruellie invadit and persewit of his lyfe be sum of his unfreindis, and hurte and woundit in divers paertis of his body, and be thame left for deid." His assailants fled to Ferme, near Rutherglen, and "thai wer ressavit with the bludie hand be James Craufurde of Ferme, and intertenyt within his place." On learning that the complainant was not slain, Crawford and his servants, armed with pistols, attempted to attack him in his own house, but were repulsed; and now, through fear of threatenings against his life, the "complenair dar nocth repair furth of his awne hous eftir the falling of the nicht without he be armed and accompanied with his freindis." Crawford having disobeyed the charge to appear before the privy council was denounced rebel.¹ The privy council had also to listen to accusations and recriminations between Hegate and his successor. On 26 February, 1590-1, security was given by John Lindsay of Dunrod "for Mr. Johnne Ros, town clerk of Glasgu, and David Robiesoun, his servant, that they will not harm Archibald Hiegait [and four others] burgesses of Glasgu";² and on the 13th of the following month, John Graham of Knokdoleane became surety "for Archibald Hiegait, son of William Hiegait, burgess of Glasgu, that he will not harm James Lyoun, Mr. Johnne Ros, or Mathew Colhoun, burgesses of Glasgu."³

The "extract of certane authoriteis and notabill placis of Scripture, collectit for my comfort in the tyme of my trubill"⁴ was probably compiled by Hegate during this period of reverse. Restitution of the clerkship was in store for him, but this did not happen till about the year 1604, during the provostship of Sir George Elphinstone, who, as the printed abstracts show, had frequently employed him in his own affairs. It will be observed that of Hegate's protocols, from May, 1588, onwards, only a few relate to burgage properties, such protocols falling almost exclusively within the province of the town clerk for the time.

John Ros, a native of Glasgow, was elected as Hegate's successor before he was a notary; and his admission as such was expedited because it was a necessary qualification for the clerkship.⁵ Appointed clerk, apparently about the middle of 1588, he was re-elected for a year in May, 1589, and again, for the like period, in June, 1590; and he must thus have held office for nearly three years. On his admission as a notary, he was supplied with a book, containing two hundred and forty leaves, for the engrossment of his protocols. Unfortunately, this book has not been written up beyond the forty-eighth leaf, and for the period of his clerkship subsequent to 3 July, 1589, no protocols have been inserted. During that time the usual transactions pertaining to the office must have been going on, and the instruments of sasine, or other notarial writs, would, doubtless, be prepared and delivered to those concerned, but the record kept by the notary probably took no more formal shape than jottings in his minute book which has not been preserved. The nature of the particulars entered in a notary's minute book is indicated in protocol No. 3205.

Another substantial loss to local history has been occasioned by the disappearance of one or more volumes of Henry Gibsone's protocols. Gibsone, a town clerk whose protocols, between 1555 and 1576, have already been printed in abstract, seems to have been re-appointed about the year 1591;¹ but, with the exception of one leaf of a lost book,² his protocols between 10 August, 1576, and 28 April, 1598, are not now extant.

Embracing the period during which the hiatus 1589-98 occurs, there is the first protocol book of George Huchesone, writer and notary public in Glasgow, and well known as the original founder of Huchesone's Hospital. As shown by the documents relating to his admission as a notary,³ George Huchesone, though the son of a Glasgow citizen, began his professional career in Edinburgh, where he at first intended to continue; but he early returned to his native city and settled there. So far as is known, he did not at any time hold the clerkship, but some of his protocols refer to Glasgow properties, and most of them possess the local interest which justifies their being included in this series. The book extends from 1586-7 to 19 December, 1605, and abstracts will be given down to the end of 1600.

¹At the beginning of Archibald Hegate's third protocol book there are two leaves which had originally been left blank, but on which, according to the usual custom, various jottings have been subsequently inscribed. On the first leaf there is this cautiously worded pledge, but whether written by the notary or not, is uncertain:—“xxij of Augusti, promist to forbeir wyne for ane yeir, except it be for lyfe or deth.” On the second leaf there are a few pious expressions, one of them being a quotation from Scripture: “The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdome.” “Blessit be the Lord in all His giftis.” “Amen, finis.” “Blessit he God for all His giftis.” “God give my hand grace to speid.” The notary's name is written here and there in three different forms,—“Hegaite, Heygait, and Ileygaite,” and there are some other names and disconnected words. The following couplet has several repetitions:—

“In to guid holp my tyme I hyd, Quhill afterward that God provyd.”

3100. LYOUN. 1 March, 1587-8, 8 a.m.

Mr. Adam Wallace, bailie, gave to Jonet Lyoun, daughter, and one of the three heirs-portioners of q. Archibald Lyoun, citizen, sasine of (1) a yard, with the pertinents, called Ronaldis Yارد,² lying t.e., between the lands sometime of Sir William Herbertsoun, then belonging to William Hervie, gardener (hortulano), citizen, on the west,³ the common vennel or passage of Densyde on the east, and the lands of q. Thomas Lard on the north;⁴ (2) an annualrent of £4, payable furth of a tenement, lying t.e., in the wynd of the Minor Friars Preachers, belonging to Blase Barrie, citizen; (3) a fore

² "Rannaldis Yard" is called in modern title deeds "Ronald and Douglas Yard," and its site includes properties north of George Street, west side of Deanside Lane, both sides of Portland Street, and south side of Richmond Street. In protocol No. 241, Archibald Lyoun's property is called Deynesyde Ya'rde, and therefore it was probably distinct from though adjoining Ranaldis Yارد.

³ Sir William Herbertsoun possessed this land as prebendary of the prebend of St. Anne in the church of Paisley. Among the Glasgow rents in the town clerk's office there is preserved a charter whereby Sir William, as prebendary and for behoof of himself and his successors, with consent of Walter Stewart, commendator of Blantyre, proprietor of the lands of Cardonald, and holding the right of patronage to the prebend, granted in feu-farm to George Huchesone, writer, "that yard called Ronaldis Yارد, and the small house or tulge built thereon, and the pertinents, then occupied by William Hervie, lying t.e., between the yard of q. Archibald Lyoun on the east, the yard of William Wylie, writer, on the south, the lands of the laird of Coleintoun (i.e., James Fowlis of Colingtoun; see Reg. Mag. Sig. v. No. 465) called Ramesherne on the west, and the lands called Deynsyde Croft on the north." The prebendary for the time was to be paid 26s. 8d. yearly, in name of annualrent feu-farm, and heirs were liable in a duplike the first year of their entry. The charter was subscribed by Herbertsoun at Edinburgh on 18th, and by the commendator (subscribing "Blantyre") at Blantyre Craig on 22nd November, 1588, and was confirmed by crown charter dated 1st January, 1589-90 (Ib. No. 1718; Glasg. chart. pt. 1, abstract p. 33, No. 357).

⁴ Thomas Lard acquired this land, consisting of an acre in Deanside Croft, as mentioned in protocol No. 1438. See also No. 1417.

tenement, under and above, sometime belonging to Sir Martin Reid, chaplain, lying on the south side of the street called the Gallogait, between the lands of Sir David Mayne on the west, and the new great tenement of the said q. Archibald Lyoun on the east; (4) a nether house, lying in the back close of the said house or fore tenement, then occupied by Robert M'ldowny, merchant, citizen; (5) an annualrent of 26 s. 8 d., payable furth of a tenement belonging to John Bartoun, shoemaker, citizen, lying in the Bridgegait; (6) an annualrent of 40 s., payable furth of a tenement in the Bridgegait, belonging to James Dunlop alias Tailzeour, merchant, citizen; all conform to the deereet mentioned in No. 3094. Witnesses: George Lyoun, merchant, citizen, Mr. James Heygait, brother of the notary, Mathew Hereot, servant of the notary, James Andirsoun and Andrew Farie, serjeants.

3127. PORTARFEILD, YOUNGER OF THAT ILK. Eodem die et hora.

Margaret Maxuell, relict of q. James Boyd of Hullirhill, liferenter, and Jonet Boyd, her daughter, heritably vested in the property after mentioned, acknowledged that William Portarfeild of Dwchall had, by payment of 200 merks, lawfully redeemed a great fore tenement, under and above, lying t.c., on the west side of the street leading from the metropolitan church to the market cross, between the lands of Archibald Heygait on the north, and the lands of John Grahame of Hilderstoun on the south.¹ Sasine of the property given by Mr. Adam Wallace, bailie, to Alexander Portarfeild, younger of Dwchall, with consent of century the property had passed to the Hamiltons of Aikenhead, James Hamilton, owner of that estate in 1691, having then made up a title to it as heir of his daughter Anna. Another James Hamilton of Aikenhead sold the property to James Barr, rector of the Grammar School in 1760. Mr. Barr erected on the High Street front a large new tenement which remained till 1867, when it and the back buildings were acquired and afterwards taken down by the Glasgow Improvements Trustees for the formation of the eastern portion of Ingram Street. That street now occupies the site (Purchase, No. 86; Sasine Register, 524, fol. 64). In "Glasgow Past and Present" (1881 edition), iii. pp. 292, 484-5, it is stated that the Porterfield arms were sculptured on the back building (which was numbered 157 High Street), thus apparently showing that at least part of the original mansion remained till the ground was cleared for the new street.

William Portarfeild, his father. Witnesses: William Wallace, son of the bailie, and John Howstoun, servitor of the said William [Portarfeild.]

3160. ROWAT. 18 August, 1591, 2 p.m.

Robert Rowat, merchant, citizen, and Christina Levingstoun, spouses, for implement of part of a marriage contract between them and Mr. Alexander Rowat, their son, on the one part, and Adam Mure of Carnduf, Jonet Spreull, his spouse, and Jean Mure, their daughter, on the other part, resigned in favour of Mr. Alexander Rowat, their son (1) a tenement fore and back, with yard or orchard and two rigs of land at the back, lying t.c., on the east side of the street leading from the metropolitan church to the market cross, between the lands of Margaret Flemyn and q. Patrick Scot, respectively, on the north, and the lands of Gabriel Rinking and q. John Martene on the south; (2) a rood or rig of land, lying t.c., in the croft called the College Croft, between the lands of the said q. John Martene on the north, the lands of Margaret Flemyn on the south, and the burn of Malindinor on the east. Sasine given by John Audersoun, bailie. Witnesses: Mr. John Cowper, minister in Glasgw¹, William Heygait, brother of the notary, William Spreull, tailor, citizen, John Rowat, brother of Mr. f. 83.

28 February, 1587-8. — "Mr. John Couper, be the avise of the sessionis of Glasgow, is gladlie and willinge acceptit and admittit as second minister in Glasgw. Robert Rowat and Andro Baillie ar orderit to pas to the presbiterie of Glasgw, declaring that Mr. John Couper, be the sessionis of Glasgw, is admittit as ane of the ministeris in Glasgw, and willing that the presbiterie admitt him lykewyse, that he baith thair consentis uniformelie materis may proced."

7 March, 1587-8. — "Upon the overtur gevin in to the sessionis be Mr. David Wemes and Mr. John Couper, ministeris, concerning the place and tymes and ordour of teiching, it is thus far statute and concludit be the magistratis and sessionis that, unto better commoditi, first, concerning the place, that upon the Sundaye the place sall be the Hie Kirk, and upon the weik dayis, Weddimdaye and Frydaye, the College Kirk, unto the tyme the Hie Kirk, or at leist the quein thairof, be sufficientie repairet for the commodious teiching and heiring of the word. And concerning the tymes and ordour of teiching upon the Sondaye, the pastouris sall teiche before and efter nwn, alterius rieibus, everie ane thair tyme about, viz., that be teiches before nwn the first daye teiche efter nwn the next daye following, and he that teichis efter nwn the first daye sall teiche before nwn the next daye. And incase the ane ather be absent or unabill throw disease to occupie the place the uther sall supplie that necessite."

In the Presbytery Records, printed as an appendix to "Collections on the Life of David Weems," published by the Maitland Club, in 1818, the following occurs:—"1 March, 1588.—Mr. John Couper is admitted by the sessionis to be ane of the ministers of the town and parochin of Glasgow, with great affection: the presbytery approve and rejoice: they record an act of assembly ordering his admission." From the same source it is ascertained that Walter Stewart, commendator of Blantyre, who then held the parsonage teinds, agreed to pay therefrom stipends to David Wenies of 500 merks, and to John Couper of 300 merks. Supplementary to his share of the teinds, the magistrates and council, on 2 May, 1590, "for the speciall luf and favour quilkil they haif and beiris to maister Johne Cowper, thair minister, as also for the better sustenyng of him into his charge," granted to him "of thair neir liberalite" a yearly allowance of 50 merks in money, 4 dozen loads of coal, and £20 for house mail. This arrangement was to continue till the minister was as well provided for in some other way. Previous "actis of giftis" granted by the town council were discharged by the minister, thus showing that the new allowance was a continuance of former contributions.

² It appears to have been about this time that feu rights were first given to the Gorbals villagers. During the time the Elphinstones were themselves rentallers, the inhabitants, possessors of small lots, must have possessed under a similar tenure. A list of feuars, made up in or shortly after 1634, contains fifty-four names. The total feu-duties then amounted to £159 9s. 11d. in Scots money, with 72½ hens, convertible into £24 3s. 4d., being 6s. sd. (half a merk) for each hen. In the title deeds of properties situated in the older parts of Gorbals, hens are still specified as forming part of the feu-duties, and the conversion price is collected on behalf of the city.

3216. EDMESTOUN, JUNIOR OF DUNTREITH. 21 August, 1600, 2 p.m.

William Edmestoun, far of Duntreith, produced two charters whereby Robert Sterling of Lettir sold to him his £10 land, old extent, of Lettir, with the pertinents, lying within the shire of Sterling and parish of Killerne. In one of the charters the lands were to be held of Robert Sterling, one half in blench and the other half in feu-farm; and in the other charter the lands were to be held of Sir Archibald Sterling of Keir, knight, one £5 land in free blench, and the other £5 land for service of ward and relief.² Charters written by Archibald Heygait in Glasgow, and subscribed by the grantor and by his spouse, and James Elphinstoun, in token of their consent, and their seals appended, at Niddrie, on 24 August, 1599, in presence of Ninian Blaknud and John Diksoun, servitors of Andrew Edmestoun of that Ilk, Laurence Scot, writer, and Archibald Heygait, writer of the charters. Sasine given on the ground of the lands by Archibald Edmestoun of Ballintone, as bailie in hac parte. Witnesses: Colin Campbell

² Before the system was introduced of embodying alternative holdings in one writ, it was customary for a purchaser to obtain two charters in the manner here referred to. As a superior was usually entitled to payment of entry money before receiving a new vassal, delay in applying for confirmation was sometimes expedient; and to obviate insecurity attending an incomplete title, the duplicate charter was resorted to. Till a vassal obtained from the superior confirmation of one of the charters, he held of the seller, as mid-superior, under the other charter. In the transaction, narrated in No. 3216, Edmeston's title was complete so soon as he got sasine, and he held of Robert Sterling as mid-superior. If at a subsequent period he arranged with Sir Archibald Sterling, the over superior, for obtaining his confirmation, the second charter would be available for the purpose.

¹ In the year 1567 John Hamilton, subchanter in the cathedral, disposed of his croft and manse to Agnes Colquhoun, and John Hamilton, her natural son, as narrated in protocols 965-7 (see also Reg. Mag. Sig. iv. No. 2055; and Dr. Murray's "Rottenrow," Regality Club, Third Series, p. 49). The croft, which extended to four acres, subsequently came into the possession of Andrew Hay, son of the parson of Renfrew, and he resigned it in favour of Archibald Gibbsoun, commissary clerk. The latter got a crown charter of confirmation on 28 May, 1590 (Reg. Mag. Sig. vi. No. 918; Glasg.

Charters i., Abstract, p. 42, No. 425).

² In modern title deeds Bell's Croft is described as lying on the south side of Townmill Road (Sasine Register 515, fol. 121), and this may have been one of the lones referred to. Part of Wishart Street has been formed through the croft. In protocol No. 965, "Bellis Croft" is called "croftam campane" (Bellcroft), but how the name originated has not been ascertained. It and the Subchanter's Croft and Manse, taken together, appear to have extended from the back of the cathedral northward to the Townmill Road at Garogadhill.

3248. JAMES HUCHESOUN, BAKER, AND SPOUSE. 21 Jan., 1588-9, 10 a.m.

Robert Rowatt, bailie, gave sasine to James Huchesoun, baker, as heir of q. James Huchesoun, baker, citizen, his father, of a tenement of land, fore and back, with yard and pertinents, lying t.c., on the east side of the street leading from the market cross to the South Nether Port, between the lands of James Cliddisdaill on the north, the lands of George Young on the south, the burn of Malindinar on the east, and the street on the west. Thereafter, James Huchesoun resigned in favour of himself and Margaret Bar, his future spouse and l.l. (1) the property above mentioned; and (2) a yard with the pertinents lying on the east side of the burn of Malindinar, between the lands of James Craig on the south, the lands of Thomas Cliddisdaill on the north, and the lands of George Lyoun on the east; but reserving the liferent of the half of the yard to Janet Craig, mother of James Huchesoun. Witnesses: John Young, William Hereot, Thomas Forsyd, bakers,

² In 1584, Janet Huchesoun got from her father a property which was to be redeemable for £100 (Protocol 2610). The description does not exactly correspond with that in No. 3247, but the property described in each case appears to have formed part of the tenement mentioned in No. 3248.

3252. WILLIAM GLEN, BAKER. 6 February, 1588-9, 4 p.m.

Robert Rowat, bailie, by special authority of the provost, baillies, councillors (consulam seu senatorum), and whole community of the city, for implement of their unanimous statute, decree, or appointment, concerning the setting in feu-farm of certain lands belonging to the community, lying in the Grencheid and thereabout, within their common lands, and that to burghesses, inhabitants of the said city, paying taxes and keeping watch therein, and for certain sums of money paid by William Glen, baker, burgess, dwelling in the city, to the said provost, baillies, and councillors, and to their treasurer in their name, gave sasine to the said William Glen of two roods of land, lying t.c., on the west side of the Greenhead (capitis veridarij), between the lands then set in feu-farm to George Esdail, on the north, the bridge on the south, the common green on the west, and the common street leading to the *Stokwall*¹ on the east; all conform to the said statute and charter expedite thereon; but reserving to George Esdail the half of the gavill on the north side of the two roods when William Glen should build thereon. William Glen to pay yearly to the city treasurer 1s. 8d. for each rood in name of annualrent feu-farm.² Witnesses: William Neisbet, tailor, George Pollok, Charles Pollok, merchants, John Clerk, baker, David Gray, maltman, citizens, and Andrew Andersoun, serjeant.

¹ The street "leading to the Stokwall" is referred to in a charter granted in the year 1285 (Reg. de Passelet, p. 400), and was then called Fishergait (vicus pischariorum). The well, which eventually gave the street its present name, is mentioned in a sasine, dated 1487, in which a tenement is described as lying "in via Piscatorum iuxta le Stok Wel" (Liber Collegii Nostre Domine, etc., p. 256). The original name was thus still retained, but shortly afterwards the new one came into use. In the foundation of a chaplainry in the year 1529-30 an annualrent, forming one of the endowments, is said to be payable furth of property lying "in via Piscatorum sive le Stokwell" (Muniments Alme Universitatis i. p. 50). On referring to the protocols printed in the present series, it will be found that, from the year 1530, the ancient name of Fishergait has been superseded by that of Stockwellgait.

² Towards the end of the year 1588, the town council

found that they would require to raise about £600 to enable them to settle with the commendator of Blantyre, "lord feuar of the baronie of Glasgow," for the purchase of a mill on the Kelvin (see Protocol No. 3266), and to meet the extra expenditure occasioned by a visitation of the "pest." It was therefore agreed that part of their common lands should be disposed of "to six personis, burgessis and indwellaris of Glasgow, as thair can agrie with" (Glasg. Rec. i., p. 121). After an investigation as to what lands might best be spared, the council on 24 December agreed to set in feu several portions, including "the Grencheid betwix the gavill of the lands of Johanne Mudie, passing to the Brigend, reservand ane rowme for ane port passand to the water of Clyd, as salbe stobit, as also ane uther peice of land foiranentis Williane Muris sydwall of his hous to the big calsy, reservand ane passage betwix the said Williane Muris sydwall of bis said hous and the hous that salbe set dounne and

Robert Rowat, bailie, acting as narrated in No. 3252, gave sasine to John Hammiltoun, smith (faborum ferrarium), citizen, of two roods of land, lying t.c., on the east side of the Greenhead, between the lands set in feu-farm to William Cwnynghame, merchant, on the north, the public street leading to the Stokwall on the south, the bridge on the west, and the common street on the east; but reserving to William Cwnynghame the half of the gable on the north side of the two roods when the same should be built. John Hammiltoun to pay 1s. 8d. yearly for each rood in name of annualrent feu-farm. It will be observed that space was to be reserved "for ane port passand to the water of Clyd." One of the conditions of sale also provided "that the housis qwhilkis salbe biggit betuix the said John Mwdies hous and the Brigend" were not to "haif frie ysche nor entrie on the laksydis but onlie lichtis and windois." 3268. MR. ARCHIBALD NORMOUNT. 28 March, 1589, 8 a.m.

James Flemyn, bailie, gave sasine to Mr. Archibald Normount, as heir of q. Thomas Normount, burgess, his father, of (1) an acre of open land (terre campestris), lying in Kinclaith, near (prope) the city, between the lands of q. Michael Baird on the east, a rig of land of q. David Lindsay, junior, four merks yearly (Glasg. Chart. i. Abstract p. 18, No. 324). In 1577-8 the town council purchased the rental rights from Archibald Lyon (Ib. ii. p. 446, No. 74), and were received as rentallers by Walter Stewart, commendator of Blantyre, shortly after he obtained the lordship of Glasgow in 1557 (Ib. p. 452, No. 97). The commendator was authorised to grant feu rights to the rentallers, and following on negotiations alluded to in the printed records (i. pp. 120-1), the feu charter referred to in the text was granted. "Archibald Lyounes Milne," sometimes called Clayslaps Mill, was sold to the Incorporation of Bakers in 1771, but was reacquired by the town council in 1874, and the site is now included in the Kelvingrove Park.

3276. THOMAS MYLN, CHYRURGEON, AND SPOUSE. 3 May, 1589, 11 a.m. t. 34.

Thomas Myln, chirurgeon, citizen, and Elizabeth Robertsoun, spouses, produced a charter of feu-farm whereby the provost, baillies, concillors, and community of Glasgow granted to them, and l.l. (l) a piece of the common lands called the Mylnudameheid, extending to 2 acres and 1 rood, or thereby, as bounded by piles fixed in the ground, lying between the lands called

² Among the common lands which the town council on 24 December, 1588, agreed to dispose of for the raising of money as mentioned in the footnote to protocol No. 3252, there were included "the haill wall of the Westport, on baith the sydis of the samyn, and swamekle thairof in bried and leenth as salbe stolit . . . and the stanis of the said West poirt to be ropit with the ground thairof" (Glasg. Rec. i. pp. 124-5). Four days afterwards it was resolved, subject to the provost's approval, that the Westport should be removed from the head of the Old Wynd to the head of Stockwellgate (Ib. p. 125). This alteration seems to have been effected, and Robert Chirneside of Possil, who had married the widow of George Elphinstone of Blythswood, acquired the site. On 14 March, 1588-9, the baillies and council met "for taking ordour with the mesuring and stoling of the ruditis of the West Porte, sett furth in few thame to Robert Chirneside"; and having passed to the ground with the liners, there was marked off an area of 3 roods (i.e. 18 ells = 55 feet 6 inches) in length and 24 feet in breadth. One half of the 24 feet of breadth was to be within the port and the other half without the port, on the other side; "and the said port itself, and entres thairof, to be putt and placit in sik place as the provest, baillies, and counsell sal appoint, with powar to the said Robert Chirnesyd to big als heich and braid alone the said port as he sal think expedient," but not "to big ony laiche windois within his saidis ruditis quhill he feist heicht, except sum slitt windois of halfe full wylde," and these narrow openings were to be "stenschorit." (Ib. p. 131).

The charter narrated in the text is still preserved. At the time it was written a generation was rising up possessed of little personal knowledge regarding the chapels and churches vacated at the Reformation. Even the name of St. Tenen's church (which, as shown by protocol No. 2462, had been converted into a barn) seems to have been forgotten. A blank was left for the east and west boundaries, and when it was filled up "St. Quintigern," instead of "St. Tenn," was erroneously inserted. The error has been repeated in the protocol where a blank had also been left. In addition to the price paid in cash, the feu-charter stipulated for payment of an annual feu-duty of 5s. There were some disputes between Chirneyd and the town regarding the extent of ground sold to him, but in the year 1613 the town reacquired the whole property from his nephew (Inventory of City Writs, b. 21). See Appendix (infra No. 3313).

The West Port and its adjuncts, spanning the Troutgate opposite the north-west corner of Stockwell Street, remained till the year 1751, when the structure was removed.

¹ These lands were likewise included among those appointed to be disposed of for clearing off the town's liabilities. On 2 January, 1588-9, it was reported that there had been "biddin be Thomas Myln, chirurgeon, for the Mylnedameheid, Peithog, and Dassiegrene, the soume of ellevin hundred markis" (Glasg. Rec. i. p. 136), and there was also payable a yearly feu-duty of 6s. 8d. for each acre (Ib. p. 125). The statute referred to in the text was passed by the town council on 19 April, 1589, when they met "for taking ordour with the passage of ane car gait to the Provestis Hauch, and utheris nychtbouris lands about, through the landis of Peithog and Dassiegrene, laitlie set furth in few to Thomas Mylne, chirurgane." should be "on all pairtis the braid of sex futtis, and that throuch the same ane horse chairgit with ane car full of corne or any other kind of stufe may easilie repair thairthrow" (Ib. pp. 132-3). Possibly some disputes arose out of these negotiations, as about a month after the date of the protocol Milne was punnished for speaking slanderously of the "hungrie town of Glasgw," and calling the baillies "treasonable disseverans." See farther as to Milne in footnote to No. 2881.

[A protocol, the first part of which is wanting.³ The preserved portion begins with the closing words of the precept of sasine contained in a charter subscribed and sealed at Edinburgh, 27 January, 1586-7, in presence of James Cochrane of Braidschaw, Mr. James Cokburne, brother of "the said"

² For some unknown reason the protocols of John Ros here terminate, the remainder of his book being left blank. Ros was re-elected town clerk for a year on 20 May, 1589, and again for the same period on 9 June, 1590. On account of the council records being wanting from 31 July, 1590, till 5 October, 1594, there is no record of any election within that period, but it is supposed that Henry Gibson, a former town clerk, had been re-appointed on terms which did not require a yearly renewal. He is designated town clerk (clericus civitatis Glasguensis) in an instrument of sasine dated 18 December, 1591 (Inv. i. b. 12, No. 14; Glasg. Charters ii. p. 454, No. 103); and in the council record, on 1 June, 1596, when the annual election of other officers is noted, there is the following entry: "Clerk:—Mr. Henry Gibsoun standis conforme to his gift." He appears to have continued in the clerkship till about the year

1604, but of his protocols between 10 August, 1576 (up to which date abstracts have already been printed), and 28 April, 1598, only one leaf has been preserved (see Nos. 2598 to 2601). There is thus a period of nearly nine years during which the record of transactions in Glasgow properties is interrupted. It happens, however, that there is a protocol book (1587-1605) written by George Huchesone, one of the founders of Huchesone's Hospital. As is well known, George Huchesone practised as a writer and notary public in Glasgow, and though, so far as is ascertained, he did not at any time act as town clerk, most of his protocols have a local bearing, and may appropriately be included in the present series. Abstracts of these down to the end of the year 1600 will accordingly be given.

Alexander Hepburne of Quhitsum, knight, and Jane Conynghame, his spouse, in implement of a contract, gave sasine, by their own hands, to Mr. William Scott, writer, of the lands of Rickartoun, with manor, houses, buildings, orchards, yards, greens, parts, pendicles and pertinents thereof, lying in the barony of Rathow and shire of Renfrew (but, nevertheless, within the bounds of the shire of Edinburgh). Done on the ground of the lands of Rickartoun, in the yard of the manor thereof. Witnesses: John Andersone, messenger, Robert Wardlaw, servitor of Alexander Hepburne, and James Scott, writer, servitor of Adam Lawtie, writer.

3297. LUDOVIC, DUKE OF LENNOX. 14 October, 1587, A.R. 21, 3 p.m.

f. 4. Robert Houstoun in Rasschelie, attorney and in name of a noble and potent lord Ludovic Stewart, lord Aubigny, etc., produced a precept granted by King James VI, and addressed to Mathew Stewart of Barseuib, his sheriff of Dumbartane in hac parte, in which precept it is narrated that the King, was nearest heir of his dearest grandfather, Mathew earl of Lennox, lord Dernelie, for a time regent of the realm and lieges, and thus had the sole right of succession to the family of Lennox, which was of noble and ancient fame and memory; that the King's predecessors of that family were very often employed in arduous services to the crown and commonwealth of the realm in the office of lieutenant in time of wars, and in other notable services worthy of memory; and the King, willing that the name of the said house should in future be continued, for the honour and advantage of the kinsmen descending from that family, and the protection and defence of the said kinsmen and their dependents, took occasion in his minority not only to dispone the profit of the said house of Lennox to his dearest cousin and trusty councillor, Esme, duke of Lennox, Erle Dernelie, Lord Torbolton and Aubigny, etc., great chamberlain of the Kingdom, who, for the singular favour which he bore towards the King, came from France, honourably accompanied, on his great costs and at peril of his life, to ascertain the King's welfare, and to tender service on his person in his minority, and so remained till his death, well meriting a great reward, but the King also erected the house of Lennox into a free dukedom; which infestment, after the death of the said lord duke, fell under the King's revocation, and though the King had succeeded to the crown, he was anxious not to diminish the honour and advantage of the said house of Lennox, but rather to provide the same to the nearest male descendant thereof; and that the King's dearest cousin, Ludovic Stewart, lord Aubigny, etc., is eldest son of the late duke, and, after the King, the nearest heir male by descent of the said house: Therefore, the King, after attaining the complete age of twenty-one years, gave and granted to the said Ludovic Stewart, lord Aubigny, etc., and his heirs male,¹ the whole lands, earldom, and lordship of Lennox, with castles, towers, fortalices, manors, yards, orchards, woods, mills, salmon fishings in the waters of Leven and Garloichheid, free forests, outsettis, parts, pendicles, annexees, connexes, tenants, tenandries, servicies of free tenants, advocations, and the patronage

3309. ARCHIBALD RODGER, CITIZEN. 26 May, 1591, 5 p.m.

Archibald Eglyngtoun, notary, acknowledged that Archibald Rodger, citizen, had, by payment of 100 merks, lawfully redeemed a tenement, fore and back, with yard, close and pertinents, lying t.e., in the street leading from the market cross to the South Port, lie Barresett, on the west side of the said street, commonly called the Saltmarket,¹ between the lands and tenement of David Hall on the south, the lands and tenement of the said Archibald Rodger on the north, the lands of (blank) on the west, and the public street on the east. Sasine of the property given by John large quantities of salt, it was desirable that the market should be near the river, and the records indicate that the Walkergait was the place fixed upon. After the Reformation, when the clergy were leaving their manors, and the townhead was being deserted, an attempt was made to arrest decay by transferring two of the market places to that district. The salt market was, about the year 1587, appointed to be held above the Wyndhead, but the change was not successful, and the dealers returned to the former site. In the words of an act of parliament, passed in 1594, the Wyndhead "was altoidler incommodous, be reason the same wes far distant fra the brig and watter of the said citie, quhair the salt is maist usit, and pat the merchandis and fischaris quha bocht the same to greib expenses of cariage and transporting thairof fra the said wynd held to the brig, be the space of ane myle and mair; lyk as the sellaris of the salt, uppon that occasion, removit thane selfis to the auld place narre the said brig quhair the same wes sauld of befor" (Glasg. Chart ii, pp. 214, 244). Though the vernacular designation has not occurred in former protocols—in these formal documents, variation in description was purposely avoided so as to preserve evidence of identity—it is probable, for the reason already indicated, that for a long time previous to 1591, the street had been "commonly called the Saltmarkett."
